PIERRE LOTI, NOTED FRENCH ACADEMICIAN, DESCRIBES LIFE IN THE FRONT TRENCHES

Like a Desert Until Attack Alarm Brings Thousands of Men From Their Underground Lairs Ready to Kill and Die.

By COL. PIERRE LOTI,
Noted French Academician, Novelist, Poet and Philosopher.

THE belt fifteen or twenty kilometers wide, so horribly hacked to pieces, which, in our France, extends from the North Sea to Alsace, and follows the line of trenches where the Barbarians have their burrows, the belt of deep anguish and of great glory, just at this point, I think, attains its completest likeness to an evil dream, and at the same time to its completest horror; I say 'just here,' for I have not the right to be more exact; so 'just here,' in a certain district which, even before the war, had received a sad surname, something like the desolate, the poverty-stricken, or even, if you will, the 'lousy.' For even before the great devastation, it was very arid, almost without vegetation, treeless bottom lands, a few tufts of stunted pines, poverty-stricken villages, which had not even the grace to be old, for, from century to century, the savages from Germany had come to gambol there, and after their passage everything had to be rebuilt.

PIERRE LOTI.

And at present, since the new great onrush which has surpassed every known abomination, how strange it is, almost fantastic, this reign of poverty with its charred ruins, with its chalk-colored soil, dug and redug to its deepest entrails, as if by myriads of burrowing animals! I make my way thither in an auto, on a mission entrusted to me, and I had never hitherto seen it in this mess of earth, in which our poor little warriors in their blue cloaks are so piteously mired up to the thighs.

My heart grows more constricted as I advance along these foundered roads, which are ever more crowded with our dear soldiers, so grievously bespattered with mud that they have become grayish. The rare villages on the common are more and more mutilated by shells, and we are done with seeing village women or children; no more civilians, nothing but blue helmets—but there are thousands of them.

Every Hillock Seems to Be Inhabited by Cave-Dwellers

EVERY hillock we meet now seems to be inhabited by tribes of cave dwellers; every slope that faces us, as we approach, and which thus escapes the sight and the fire of the enemy, is pitted with the mouths of burrows, in lines, or rising above each other in several stories, and from which you see human heads coming forth, helmeted, catching the sun. What sort of a country is this, is it prehistoric or only very distant? Assuredly, you would not think it part of France. But for a sharp wind beneath this sky too blue for a Northern sky, you might believe that it was the banks of the Upper Nile, the Libyan chain, in which gape the rock-hewn caverns.

Once more we come to the wraith of a village, the last I shall pass through, for those which, further on, mark out the road towards the Barbarians, are not longer anything but shapeless heaps of stones, that look like burial mounds. Even this one, be it understood, is three-quarters demolished; slabs of walls curiously perforated, and marked with black marblings of soot, in the places where the chimneys were. But numbers of soldiers are gaily seated at breakfast, under the wholly illusory shelter which these remnants of houses offer them; there are even quartermasters who, on improvised tables, are serenely busy over their accounts.

A Telephone Exchange 25 Feet Under the Ground

BANG! A shell! A shell fired from very far off, and at a venture by the Barbarians, without any definite purpose, but with the hope that it may still injure someone. It has fallen on the ruins of a roofless stable, where some poor horses were tied up, and now two of them are lying on their backs, their four legs brandished in the air, as they all do when they come to die; they redden the ground with jets of blood, which come out in spurts from their chests, as if driven by a pump.

After the village, soon left behind, I enter the solitude, which always has a certain air of solemnity, that, stretched from one end to the other of the battle front, indicates the immediate neighborhood of the Barbarians. The sun, astonishingly strong, showers its arrows upon this tragic desert. And now, every time my auto stops, hesitating, for one cause or another, and the motor ceases to hum, I hear louder and ever louder the rumble of the guns.

At last, I reach the furthest point that my auto can take me to; if I took it any further, it would be seen by the Boches, and the shells, which stray here and there through the air, would converge on it; it becomes necessary to stow it away, behind a fold in the ground, and to go on alone, on foot.

First, I have to telephone to General Quarters — and the "telephone office" is the black hole hidden among sparse brushwood; by a very narrow ladder I make my way down seven or eight meters into the earth, where I find, as "telephone girls," four soldiers, who are lit up by tiny electric lamps, like glowworms. They are territorials, in their forties; and the man who hands me the telephone is wearing a wedding ring on his finger—doubtless he has, somewhere back there, in the open world, somewhere where life is still possible, a wife and children.

Six Months in Hole Over Which Shells Sweep Constantly

HE tells me, however, that he has been for six months already in this damp hole, under ground ceiselessly swept by shells, and he says it with smiling resignation, as if the sacrifice were entirely natural; his comrades likewise speak of their ant-hill life without a shadow of complaint. And they are admirable also, all these patient heroes of the darkness, not less, perhaps, than their comrades who fight in the open air, in the broad light of day, stirred by a shared excitement.

As one leaves the burrow, in which noises are muffled, one clearly hears again the sound of cannon, and one is met by the dazzling brilliance of this unaccustomed sun.

I have about two kilimeters to pass in the strange desert, to reach a poor little group of shriveled pines, that I make out over there on a bit of rising ground; it is there that I have arranged to meet an officer of engineers, for the mission with which I am charged.

The semblance of a desert, I ought rather to say, for it is densely inhabited underneath by our soldiers under arms and alertly listening; at

PRESIDENT WILSON'S MEXICAN POLICY REVIEWED BY MEMBER OF HIS CABINET

WILL WIN "THE VERDICT OF MANKIND," SAYS SECRETARY LANE

"He Has Not Sought the Easiest Solution, but the Right One and One Which Will Be Most Appreciated 50 Years From Now as Reflecting Glory on the American Name."

By HENRY N. HALL,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., July 15.

"PRESIDENT WILSON'S Mexican policy is one of the things of which, as a member of his administration, I am most proud. It shows how well his abounding faith in humanity, his profound philosophy of democracy and his unshakable belief in the ultimate triumph of liberty, justice and right. He has never sought the easy solution of any of the difficult questions that have arisen in the last three years. He has always sought the right solution.

"Mr. Wilson's Mexican policy has not been weak and vacillating. It has been definite and consistent, firm and constructive. How firm is already known to those who have sought to force American intervention in Mexico; how constructive will best be appreciated 50 years from now by the whole world. It was to Mexico perhaps more than to anything that the President referred the other day when he said that he was playing for the verdict of mankind.

"The policy of the United States toward Mexico is a policy of hope and of helpfulness, it is a policy of Mexico for the Mexicans. That, after all, is the traditional policy of this country—it is the policy that drove Maximilian out of Mexico."

Secretary of the Interior Lane made this statement to me at his summer camp on the shores of Lake Champlain, and then he launched out into a forceful declaration of the principles underlying President Wilson's Mexican policy and proceeded to give the reasons for his convictions that the President was right when he refused to recognize Huerta, and declared that the murderer of Madero must go; was right when he occupied the port of Vera Cruz; was right when he accepted the offer of mediation extended by the A B C Powers; was right when he abided by the agreement reached at Niagara Falls; was right when he withdrew from Vera Cruz; was right when he recognized Carranza as head of the de facto Government, and was right when he sent the United States army into Mexico after the bandit raid on Columbus.

Doctrine of Force Worked to Its Limit in Mexico

MR. LANE said: "The doctrine of force is always fighting with the doctrine of sympathy, and the trouble with the two schools of warism and pacificism is that neither one will recognize that both philosophies have a part to play in the life of every individual and of every nation and in the production and advancement of that strange thing we call civilization.

"Now, the doctrine of force has been worked to its limit in Mexico. President Wilson believes that the doctrine of sympathy should have its chance in that country and this is the foundation of his Mexican policy. Not that Mexico wants our sympathy. They do not—and that is one of the great difficulties we have to contend with. Another is that it takes a long while to make a Mexican believe that we intend his country good and not evil. The people of Mexico have inherited the pride of Arragon and the thing above all others that they do not want and will not stand for is that kind of sympathy which is nothing but pity.

"The sympathy that Mexico needs is the sympathy of understanding. The United States should be what the Latin-Americans call 'muy sympatico.' We have no exact English equivalent for that expression, but if there is one thing that it does not mean, it is sympathy as we Americans use the word. Uncle Sam will be 'muy sympatico' to the Mexican people only when he has a conscientious regard for and realization of the feelings and the desires of the Mexican, and understands his best side, his aspiring nature.

"Mexico is a bad neighbor now. There is no use in denying this. We live in peace with Canada on our Northern border, without a soldier along 3000 miles of land, while, as a matter of necessity, we are obliged to keep an armed force on our Mexican border all of the time, and have now gathered there the largest army assembled in the United States since the Civil War. The superficial reason for this is that Mexico cannot settle her own troubles at home and that the 'de facto' Government has been unable to prevent bandits from harassing us.

"Our neighbors' sewerage is running over into our lot and we must find some way to stop it, even if we have to go over the boundary line and stop the pipes ourselves. This is the easiest thing in the world to say, but to respect the letter of the law and at the same time abate a nuisance that is not on your own property is one of the most difficult things in the world.

"Mexico will always be a nuisance to us until a few fundamental reforms are put into effect there. If it is to be lasting, however, someone inside of Mexico must do it. It cannot be done by us unless we are prepared not only to conquer Mexico, but to annex Mexico. We should not only have to make war on Mexico and impose peace by force, but, after giving it a preliminary cleaning up we should have to establish and maintain indefinitely a government there."

Mexican Superstructure Fell Soon as Diaz Went Away

I ASKED Secretary Lane to go over the history of the past six years in Mexico with me and to tell the Post-Dispatch the reasons which had governed the policy and actions of the United States Government as each emergency arose. In complying with this request Mr. Lane said:

"Diaz was a great man, a very great man. I doubt if, with the possible exception of Bismarck, there was a greater man alive in his day. After the Czar of Russia, he was the most absolute despot of modern times. He built a monument to himself which I believe is still standing, to celebrate 30 years of peace in Mexico, and all the nations of the earth sent representatives to its unveiling. Within two years he was an exile because that monument represented order alone and the aspirations of only a very small portion of his people.

The peace that he had mentioned was an imposed peace, not coming from the people themselves. Diaz ruled by fear. He had gone into office with promises upon his lips, and I am willing to believe that he meant to keep them. But once in power he was appalled by the span of years necessary for the slow process of constructing civilization, and he determined that to gain time Mexico was to be saved by two things, force and wealth.

"And so, while observing to some extent the letter of the Constitution, he cynically avoided its spirit. He always placed property rights before human rights. Although he sought to improve and did improve Mexico's material condition, it was without even so much as a thought of her moral progress. He kept the masses of the people in subjection by keeping them in ignorance. When he died, 83 per cent of the people could neither read nor write, and as far as her political development went, Mexico was no further forward and no more fitted for self-government than in 1821, when, having wrested her independence from Spain, she was first recognized as a sovereign nation by the United States.

"During Diaz's time I had a very interesting talk with a great lawyer in Mexico City, who was an office holder in the Diaz regime. I asked him the current question: 'After Diaz, what?' To my surprise the man said: 'I am a Constitutionalist. Either before Diaz dies or immediately upon his death a revolution will break out in Mexico having for its purpose three things—the restoration of the land to the people, the establishment of public schools throughout the country and a judicial system in which the courts will decide according to law and not according to executives' desires.'

The Madero revolution followed exactly on these lines, but Madero was a dreamer, an idealist who took his constitution seriously and who failed for two reasons, or rather because of two weaknesses of his own character. He was not strong enough to suppress the rapacious rascals who surrounded him, and he was not practical enough to deliver the goods that he had promised. Men in Madero's own Government saw in his revolution only an opportunity for getting rich quick and they ruined him while he was still dreaming.

"It Has Not Been Vacillating but Definite, Firm and Constructive, Founded on Hope and Helpfulness and His Unshakable Belief in the Ultimate Triumph of Right."

"Huerta was his commander-in-chief, a soldier trained by Diaz and dominated by Diaz's friends. He, too, believed in saving Mexico by force and wealth; he was in complete sympathy with the philosophy expressed in the Diaz administration. There is no truth in the oft repeated allegation that all the trouble with Mexico would have been avoided if President Wilson had recognized Huerta. I ask anyone who wishes to be fair to the administration to look back three years and read the newspapers of the day and the debates in Congress in which the murder of Madero and Juarez was denounced.

"Had we recognized Huerta and had we not taken a positive stand against him the criticism his administration has received about the policy we have pursued would be as nothing to what would now overwhelm us. Who were the American statesmen who demanded Huerta's recognition? What one of our leaders of either party set forth the principles upon which a better feeling between this country and all of our sister republics to the south could be stimulated by taking a position that was abhorrent to American conscience?

"We know what we have suffered in the last three years and it is too easy now to say that all this would have been avoided if Huerta had been recognized, but the only demand made at that time by the more solid of our men of affairs who were antagonistic to the administration's policy was that we should intervene, that we should bring order to Mexico by force.

"No one then believed and no one really believes now that the recognition of Huerta would have solved the Mexican problem. We do know, however, one thing that we were not conscious of then, that Huerta himself had so slight a hold upon Mexico that he did not dare to leave the capital and that he was to all intents and purposes a prisoner of the reactionaries, able only to reach the sea at its nearest point.

"Although it is self-evident that this country as the champion of constitutional government in America can never recognize a military despotism based upon assassination, it is not necessary to call Huerta an assassin in order to justify our refusal to recognize him. His attempted dictatorship was but a fiction of government. With the elected President and Vice President murdered and the Minister of State who was their lawful successor, cowed into submission, Huerta took the reins of power at the best a temporary stop-gap.

Huerta Made Overtures To Gen. Carranza

"THE revolution against Huerta broke out immediately upon the news of Madero's death. The correspondence between Huerta and Carranza recently published shows that every practical inducement was held out to Carranza to put an end to his revolutionary movement. To Carranza's credit, be it said, he refused to come to terms with those who he believed had been the cause of the President's death and who had set to one side the laws of his country.

"It is not to be forgotten that Huerta did not even pretend to be a constitutional ruler. He sent word to the United States that he had taken the Government of Mexico into his own hands and that he was all the law to be found in Mexico. His statement was so bold that even the Supreme Court of Mexico uttered a feeble protest which was somewhat more loudly echoed in the Mexican Senate. In the face of this Huerta asked for recognition from the United States, but President Taft felt that he could not conscientiously grant it, and he left the problem to be dealt with by his successor, who had already been elected. That was the situation when President Wilson took office. Could President Wilson have recognized Huerta? Surely

Kaiser Was Bent on War Whatever England Might Do, Writes Churchill

Former First Lord of British Admiralty, in Second Article of Series, Denies German Charge That Britain Betrayed Rival Into Conflict by Not Openly Announcing She Would Stand With France.

By WINSTON CHURCHILL,
Former First Lord of the British Admiralty.
(The second in a series Mr. Churchill is writing for the Post-Dispatch.)

LONDON, July 15.

TO dwell for many years under the suspense of a great decision, some irrevocable step to be taken or refused, some choice the consequence of which must affect one's whole life for good or ill, is by no means an uncommon experience.

The mind returns to a crucial point again and again. The ordinary affairs take their course all around the day's work done; its interests, pleasures, vexations flow on. But there in the background lies the dominating thought gathering force and intensity, consciously or subconsciously loosening one by one its restraining bonds until it is ready to leap across the gulf from thought to action. Still it remains inert. Something has yet to happen.

Have you ever seen a great ship launched? The labors of thousands of men for many months are finished. One by one all blocks and shores have been struck away. The ways are greased. The paths cleared. Still the mighty mass lies on the slips motionless, seemingly immovable. A delicate hand takes a chisel and cuts a single strand of cord and from that instant the deed is done. Nothing can recall it. All the science, all the strength of man cannot arrest the almost imperceptible movement that has begun. Suppose a mistake had been made, some terrible miscalculation, it is too late. Whether to reach blue water or crash in destroying ruin depends on the way the ship is launched.

WINSTON CHURCHILL.

People have lived for years and years on the verge of suicide or murder or madness and die sane, in- murder or madness and die sane, innocent and honored. The terrible "it" has remained undone. The crouching tiger, though, has never made its spring — nay more, has withered with age and new conditions. Competing interests have arisen in the mind; new fields of consciousness are lighted up. There is a different world. All was ready; weapons lay to hand. Reason had talked itself to a standstill. Nothing stood in the way. Yet nothing happened.

Or, on the contrary, the self-accusing figure flings open the door, mouthing the familiar words; "You all drove me to it." "In God's name," we cry, "what have you done?"

Always Walked Towards the Catastrophe, Never From It.

IN assigning supreme guilt to William II, it is not necessary to impute conscious or a deliberate intention, nourished over many years, to bring about at a given time circumstances which led to the general war. Forces were at work, gaining slowly in influence, far more profound than could issue from the will of a single ruler. But, at any rate, he took, as the occasion came along, every step intended to create a deadly situation—rarely one step that would prevent it.

He embodied and encouraged the system of military thought and organization which made Prussia so terrible to her neighbors. His was the hand that plied the goad in the race of armaments. His was the voice that pronounced the fateful blunder of Germany's diplomacy, and in that climax his was the gesture, whether of malice or hysteria, that cast the nations into the general war. He knew that the French republic and pacific Russia were unready and none knew better how earnestly and loyally Britain would have striven at his side—as she had done during the Balkan War—to ward off and tide over by any means the decided event.

There never was a state as ill content with propriety as Germany before the war. Her strength gigantic, her energies carried her forward along every path of material progress at a pace without an equal in history. Wealth, power, knowledge flowed in upon the German people on every side. They dwelt in honor and security. The fears of their enemies and the envy or admiration of the rest of the world alike proclaimed their glory, and at the pinnacle in a sun blaze of fame sat the favorite of fortune, into whose lap all earthly adventages had been poured, unsatisfied and fretful and hungry — the true representative of the people he ruled, the custodian of the hideous evils about to be released.

The union of Germanic people, their rise to a supreme position in Europe, was viewed with general good will. With all its dark features, in spite of its plotted wars and harsh subjugations, Bismarck's life work had received assent and, on the whole, the approval of Europe. In England and Russia, particularly, whether the Napoleonic scars were plainly visible to the national consciousness, the accession of the masculine genius of Germany to a first place was viewed with undoubted satisfaction. France beaten and isolated, Austria reconciled, Russia a friend, Britain independent and a supporter, Italy an ally — these were the conditions which Bismarck had in the main established. Germany isolated, Austria ruined, France, Italy, Russia and England sworn in a solemn league of war, even distant Japan made a foe — these are the results which the policy of his successor has achieved.

Austrian Ultimatum to Servia Bombshell to Peaceful World.

THERE was a Cabinet meeting on a Friday afternoon in 1914 which was occupied almost entirely with the Irish crisis. For two hours the discussion played actively and anxiously around the vital question as to what parts of the counties of Monaghan and Tyrone could be provisionally excluded from the ambit of the Home Rule bill. Never was partisanship outside more fierce, never were the outstanding points of difference more petty, never was the deadlock more complete. Then, before we hurried to the House for the expected series of divisions, the quiet voice of the Foreign Secretary was heard reading the terms of the Austrian ultimatum to Servia.

The intention of the rasping sentences was unmistakable; but would Servia submit to terms more humil

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

The Anglo-Saxon.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Dr. Bartholdt and "Patriot" are, to use a slang phrase, both off their base in discussing the Anglo-Saxonism of this country. They had better delve a little into the beginnings of people and things.

Anglo-Saxon is one of the overworked cant words of ill-educated politicians and Fourth of July orators. It went into the discard box long ago. The best hammering that hoary old literary and historical humbug ever got was in an article in Reedy's Mirror, entitled, "The Anglo-Saxon Myth," for myth it is.

But who were the Anglo-Saxons? Two little measley German tribes from the Elbe and the Weser, who settled near London, flourished a while and were ground into powder under the iron heels of the Normans.

But Anglo-Saxon means English to the Fourth of July spouter. He lumps the Celts of Cornwall, Devonshire, the Marches of Wales and the Dales; the men of the Daneleagh and the Normans together, and calls them all Anglo-Saxons.

The Saxons were fine traders and husbandmen, but in law and law making they had to take lessons from their conquerors. I agree with "Patriot" that there is not one German name on the Declaration of Independence, but there are five distinctly Celtic names, and the writer of this screed belongs to the family of one of them.

The Preparedness Paraders.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

You have been publishing much in regard to our soldiers' families in need. I would like this suggestion to be published:

That all who marched in our preparedness parade volunteer to give 10 per cent of their salary for two months. That will help meet the needs of the suffering families and will also set an example of real patriotic duty. Everyone who marched in the parade or was the cause directly or indirectly of others marching should be willing to raise the necessary funds to care for these needy families.

R. WILKINSON.

The Third Degree.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

And so Chief William Desmond has passed on. And after his death has been recorded, the deeds of this great man have been summed up in the one fact: That he was the discoverer of the "third degree and sweatbox method!" What a record to carry with him into the next world.

I am not writing this in the spirit of revenge. I never knew there was such a person until I read of his death.

I cannot help thinking these sweatbox-third-degree methods and vivisection as emanating from the same spirit. It isn't the criminals they torture.

God have mercy on all creatures who fall into their net. They have made nervous and physical wrecks of countless of innocent lives, who have been tortured by their evil methods. And I cannot believe that all the information is really truth that they claim is drawn out of their victims while being "sweated."

Years ago I had a very disagreeable experience of that third degree, and while I was perfectly innocent of all crime, they ruined my health by shattering my nerves, and today, believe me, if I were accused of any crime I would admit it, at once, no matter how innocent I was—in preference to submitting to their awful torture.

Proposed Trade War Against Germany.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I read in the Chicago Tribune this morning the inclosed clipping, stating that the allies would engage in trade war on Germany after the conclusion of peace.

If this be true it is diabolical and fiendish.

Here is a statement which virtually says that the allies will not only slay in actual battle, but fiendishly mutilate the bodies. Trade war! No man knows better what that means than the man in business and in the export trade, especially when you add to that the actual prohibition of the subjects of one nation of doing any business with the subjects of certain other nations. I cannot bring myself to believe this to be true, but if it is, then I know what side your great and good publication will be on—the side of justice and right as it has ever been. This is my excuse for writing you.

MR. STARK'S RECORD.

It is reported that the influence of the United Railways and its allied interests is being used to defeat Judge Woodson for the Democratic nomination to the State Supreme bench, because Judge Woodson wrote the opinion of the Supreme Court in the mill tax suit and because he declared that he wrote what he meant and meant what he wrote.

If Judges are to be defeated for renomination on account of just decisions against corporations, the bench will soon be packed with a fine litter of corporation slaveys. The plain voters know what to do when an issue of this kind is made against a Judge.

The only opponent of Judge Woodson is Charles B. Stark, who was condemned by the tribunal to which he aspired for lobbying in the interest of the old corrupt School Board of the city. When Mr. Stark was a candidate for the Supreme Court four years ago, the Post-Dispatch published the following editorial on March 19, 1912:

Charles B. Stark of this city has announced his candidacy, subject to the will of the voters in the August primaries, for the Democratic nomination for the State Supreme Court. In 1896 Mr. Stark was the attorney of the St. Louis School Board of malodorous memory. Mr. Stark, as attorney for the School Board, with his salary and expenses paid out of the public school funds, spent two weeks lobbying against the bill to reform and reorganize the board, which was demanded by an overwhelming majority of the St. Louis people, and subsequently became law.

Under the heading, "That Lobby Settles It," the St. Louis Republic published an editorial comment on the bill, containing the following paragraph:

> Malign is a good word to apply to the influences working at Jefferson City to defeat the Civic Federation school bill in the State Senate. Led by Attorney Stark, who represents the Filley combine of the School Board, the lobby against the bill is composed of contractors and "go-betweens," who have fattened on the corruption of the present system and are working for a continuance of fat opportunities.

Mr. Stark sued the Republic for libel in the sum of $30,000. The Republic pleaded justification on the ground of truth and won the suit. The Supreme Court, the tribunal to which Mr. Stark aspires to be a member, affirming the conclusion of the Circuit Court, says:

> In view of the undisputed fact that the plaintiff was the salaried attorney of the School Board, that he went to Jefferson City at the instance of some of its members, that the existence of the Board, as then constituted, and his tenure of office were threatened by the civic Federation bill, then pending before the Senate, that he spent two weeks lobbying against the measure, and that his expenses during such service were demanded of and paid by the Board out of Public School moneys, and that on a former occasion he had in like character performed like service in regard to another bill for which he presented a demand against the corporation for several thousand dollars, we cannot say that the court committed error in advising the jury of those principles in this case.

It is vitally important that the voters know all the facts bearing upon the fitness of a candidate for office. For this reason, alone, we republish this page from the record of Mr. Stark, as attorney for the old corrupt School Board. In the light of it we submit to the Democratic voters the question of his fitness for a place of such great honor and trust as a seat on the bench of the highest court of the State.

NIGHT PLOWING.

Nightfall will no longer witness the plowman homeward wending his weary way while the lowing kine wind slowly o'er the lea, but instead the plowman will be joyriding over his fields by night, if the tractor engine people can make this sort of thing popular, and profitable. We observe that "night plowing by headlight, the tractor carrying its own storage battery and generating light as it goes along" is about to be demonstrated in the neighborhood. It can be done, we suppose. We don't know whether to say that this will take the romance out of farm life, or aver that it will put some romance hitherto undreampt of into it. Or whether it will take the rigors out or put new rigors in—we don't know. Will the farmer work day and night, or will he lie abed by day?

Plowing from early morn till dewy eve, walking up and down furrows behind a pair of mules, was the stuff that much early American character was made of, and out of the experience came the life ambitions of many of the men who "made the nation." (A humorous statesman once declared that old-fashioned plowing was one of the noblest, most elevating works man could perform—that it was while plowing that he himself formed the greatest resolution of his lifetime. He resolved to quit plowing.) Plowing made easy—a veritable sedentary occupation—almost a nocturnal dissipation—we hope will not revolutionize character or demoralize it. And turning night into day we pray will involve no additional hardships for the already greatest of Christian martyrs, the farmer's wife. As for the old dog that used to trail the mules—will he get up by night and convoy a soulless tractor? The blackbirds and robins that forage in the fresh furrows of a morning—will they turn night owls? Alas for the music that accompanied the plowboy's day dreams! The noisy tractor will make hideous the night and drown even the frogsongs. An enemy to sleep the thing will be—whereas on an old-style riding plow with a reliable team one could drowse the length of the furrows.

We haven't given this thing our profoundest consideration by any means, but we have dwelt upon it enough to convince ourselves that we don't fancy it much. Not that we are enamored of day plowing either—or any special kind of plowing. A really ideal plow, in our opinion, would be a self-regulating, self-turning and self-driving plow that depended on no adventitious human aids and didn't keep anybody up nights or require attention in the daytime, such as feeding, currying, or filling up with gasoline. The pleasantest feature of plowing, as we recall it, was laying off to take the blade over to the blacksmith shop and sitting around while the thing was being sharpened.

THE GAS COMPANY'S METER CHARGE.

The Laclede Gas Light Co. did not lay all its cards on the table in asking the city's consent to change the basis of the quality tests of its product.

It deferred to the city's authority in asking that a change in test conditions be conceded, but it deferred to the State Public Service Commission in asking that a minimum or meter charge of 50 cents a month be restored.

The company's hope of advantage by dodging between the two jurisdictions should not be realized. The concession made by the city would probably not have been granted, had the purpose relative to the minimum charge been known. The quid pro quo of a reduction of 5 cents a thousand for gas seemed satisfactory until it became known that it was negatived by the new charge of 50 cents a month.

During the first months of the Public Service Board's existence, no substantial decreases in utility charges have been made. On the contrary, increases in the charges for railroad passenger, telephone and other forms of service have been authorized. But the public has noted with satisfaction that the board is gradually bringing utilities under stricter regulation. One especially gratifying feature of its work has been its inclination whenever opportunity presented to abolish antiquated meter charges, minimum charges and other irritating incidental charges and make schedule rates cover the full cost of service. This is in accord with the best utility policy of the present.

The company evidently went to the conference with municipal officials with something up its sleeve. It has not dealt fairly with the city. The suggestion for a public hearing on the new rates should, of course, have favorable action.

The change in the test relieves the company of a large item of cost and gives full legal scope to the by-product gas process, making possible enormous revenues in addition to the revenue from the sale of gas. It may be found, not only that the 50-cent charge is unjustifiable, but that a larger reduction than 5 cents a thousand to gas consumers can equitably be made.

LORIMER'S TWO AMBITIONS.

William Lorimer told a gathering of depositors in his insolvent banking institutions that the supreme object of his life at present is to reimburse them for the money they have lost. The depositors cheered and formed an organization to help him do it.

Everybody will hope that Mr. Lorimer will retrieve his fortunes, though just how he is going to do it is not plain. How not to do it is really of greater importance.

He confesses that his ambition to settle with everybody and remove the almost universal distrust with which he is regarded is coupled with an ambition again to be elected Senator. Let us hope, for the sake of his victimized depositors, that the former is not as hopeless as the latter.

MILITIA CAMP SITES ON THE BORDER.

While some of the camp grounds selected by the War Department for the militia along the border seem unsuitable and impose vast inconvenience and personal hardship on the troops, it is not to be assumed that the handicaps are of such a nature as actually to be prejudicial to the health of the men.

To assume that would be to assume that the professional soldiers of the War Department have made no progress in important essentials of war making since the unpleasantness with Spain. Then and since, the citizen soldiery were subjected to much criticism as untrained and not knowing how to take care of themselves in the open, when many of the results giving rise to the criticism were due to the professional soldiers' astounding choice of unhealthful and even actually marshy and miasmic camp grounds for the various rendezvous, when other and highly desirable grounds were close at hand.

As hopeless a pacifist as a Sunday school superintendent would instinctively have rejected some of these camp sites as unavailable even for the annual picnic. Doubtless by this time the departmental experts are convinced that there are better ways of hardening troops and habituating them to the open than by forcing them to camp in discomfort in repulsive, unsanitary surroundings.

BANISHING GLASSWARE FROM OUR NAVY.

Secretary Daniels is said to have ordered all the wine sets on board the vessels of the navy to be collected, sent to New York and sold at auction. He declares, so it is reported, that no legitimate use exists any longer for this equipment of costly cut glass and tinted glass of many graceful shapes and that it is so attractive as to furnish temptation to resort to illicit beverages, but this is carrying things altogether too far.

Isn't grape juice the official drink of our navy at present? How it is to be served if the navy is stripped of its beauteous assets in glassware? Are not attractive containers even more necessary now that formerly to reconcile protesting naval palates to the taste of the unaccustomed new drink? Are the costly silver punch bowls which the various states and cities have furnished the warships bearing their names to go with the glass?

Sold, the alluring goblets will continue their damning course of temptation to the thirsty in private life. Has Mr. Daniels thought of that? It is only too manifest that it is a case for a maritime Carrie Nation. Mr. Daniels should summon the departmental pinnace and pay a visit in state to each of the warships in turn, ruthlessly smashing as he goes all glass enticements to iniquity wherever found on wardroom sideboards.

WESTWARD THE STREAM OF PLEASURE TAKES ITS WAY.

I.

WESTWARD the stream of pleasure takes its way
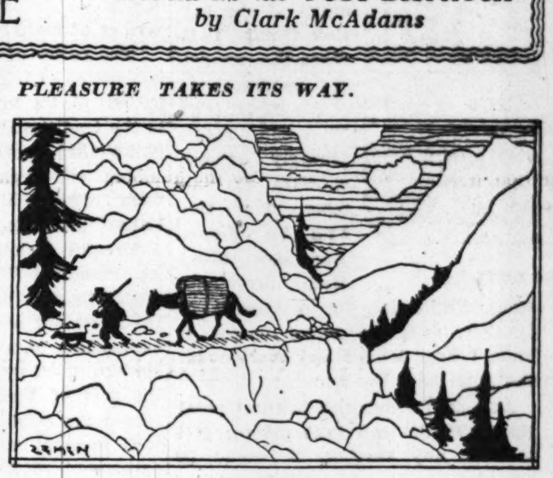
To Colorado and to Glacier Park,
Or else to idle where the geysers play
And know the glory of the moon at dark.
I know full well the charms of that great West,
Its silver waters and its bracing airs,
And would that I as well became its guest
In blest seclusion from the world's affairs.

However, let us
Cheer the rhyme—
It will be there
Another time.



II.

THERE is no fishing that to me compares
With that which seeks the Rocky Mountain trout.
I love the streams that bound down God's own stairs
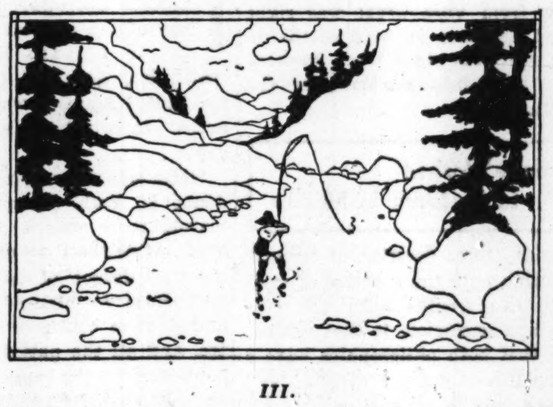
And fill with thunder Nature's own redoubt.
I love the water ousels in the spray,
The sweet, wild music of the canyon wren,
And all the battles of a wet, hard day
Deep in the shadows of some mighty glen.

However, let me
Not despair—
It will be always
That way—there.



III.

SOMETIMES at even when my strength is spent
I look me dreaming to the flaming West,
And there, far off beneath the firmament,
I see the glory of the mountains' crest.
The sun's pure gold is on their flaming tips,
And deep, deep down in some cool solitude,
Where day's last twilight yields to night's eclipse,
I see my camp fire, lit by that sweet mood.

However, poof
For present pain!
I have been there,
And shall again.

Battery A, Laredo, Tex.,
Some Tuesday in July.

THE fires in Hell were going out,
So the Devil called trusty fellows,
And said "Some place upon the earth
Must serve us for Hell's bellows.
So then his serfs, in cheerful mood,
Said, "Satin-it shall he made-O!"
And when they left their handiwork,
They named the spot Laredo.

The Sun was grafted for its heat,
And the wind was added to it—
And the dust was brought from everywhere,
And the Devils came and blew it.
And the big head Devil said of it,
Despite both priest and prado,
The earth has given Hell its fire—
And we'll call the place Laredo!

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

BEAUTY CULTURE.

MOST THANKFUL.—So many hints on fat reducing have been published, we almost suspect that fat people do not read. Electricity is said to reduce. Walk daily at least 10 miles. This is the prescription given a woman who weighed 200 pounds. She began with a city block, and, in three months, was actually walking 10 miles a day. The flesh fell off, so she said. As for her feelings, she was very well. Another way: Go without breakfast, taking only juice of two oranges. Through the morning, when the stomach feels empty, hot water may be drunk. Luncheon should be thin soup or a bit of cold meat and dry, hard toast. Dinner must be without thick soup, or meats or gravies, containing fats. Eat no vegetables with starch, a safe rule being to confine yourself to those which grow below the ground, with the exception of potatoes. Spinach is also good. Drink no milk, beer or anything containing sugar or malt.

ETIQUETTE.

PLEASE.—When a man asks a girl to attend a dance he must meet all expenses and he should try to make that evening as happy as possible for her, paying her all the attention he can. He should always dance the first and last dance with her and take her in to supper. He can dance as often as he likes with her in the meantime, but these three things he must do. He must also see that she is not a "wall flower," that she is introduced to all the girls and men that he knows. (Dentist may be introduced as Dr.)

SOLDIERS AND SOLDIER CLOTHES.

THANKS.—In the U. S. cavalry the troops correspond to the company in infantry. There are two troops in a squadron and about three squadrons in a regiment. Each troop is made up of from 120 to 200 men each. In the artillery the battalion is the administrative unit and is made up of from two to four batteries. The field battery consists of about 175 men and the horse battery of about 165 men. Uniforms of U. S. infantry, cavalry and artillery are much alike. Dress uniform consists of dark blue cloth coat, light blue trousers, cap to match coat. Coat of infantry has a light blue cord running around the collar and cuffs; cavalry a yellow cord, artillery a red cord. Fatigue uniform of the three branches of the service is brown canvas, field uniforms of khaki and olive drab. Different collar ornaments are worn bly infantry, cavalry and artillery with the two last mentioned uniforms. With the infantry uniform is worn an emblem showing crossed rifles, with the reginaments are worn by infantry, cavalry and company on the bottom; the cavalry emblem shows two crossed sabres with the regimental number on top and the company number on the bottom, and the artillery emblem, two crossed cannon, with the regimental and company numbers similarly arranged. In the French line infantry a single-breasted blue tunic with its collar, cuff flaps and shoulder straps in red; baggy madder-red trousers, tucked in ankle boots or worn with heavy hobnail shoes and gaiters; red kepi with a tri-color cockade and ball; blue band and brass ornament, and a heavy blue-gray greatcoat, cut away from the waist to the knees, constitute the uniform. The same style of tunic is used by the chasseur battalions with different colors of trimmings. The trousers, however, are blue-gray with yellow piping, and the kepi dark blue with yellow braid. The dress of the French zouaves is distinctly Moorish in style, having short, dark-blue jacket with red trimmings, extremely baggy, knee-length trousers, white spats and tasseled cap. The Turcos dress similarly, excepting that their trousers are usually either white or blue. French cuirassiers, hussars, dragoons and chasseurs a cheval have red trousers tucked into boots, and blue tunics. the cuirassiers are protected by heavy steel breast and back plates, and wear a steel helmet with brass ornaments, black horsehair tail and sometimes a red "shaving brush" at the front and side. Dragoons also wear helmets with tails. The red kepi is the service headdress of the chasseurs. A half-open vest of light blue with yellow collar, a red sash and trousers to match, is the attire of the chasseurs d'Afrique. The Spahis wear jackets and baggy blue trousers tucked into red morocco boots. A flowing mantle covers head and shoulders. French artillerymen wear black-braided, blue dolmans, with red shoulder cords and red collar, and trousers of the same color. Most of the German troops are fitted with service uniforms of a gray that blends so completely with the landscape that at a short distance it is difficult to detect the presence of a body of soldiers. The cut of the uniforms varies in the different arms. Some of the infantry forces are wearing dark-blue tunics, gray trousers piped with red, Wellington boots, black leather helmets, and gray greatcoats. Like the Russians, they wear footcloths instead of socks. The sharpshooters, known as jaegers, are identified by shakos with drooping plumes, green tunics and gray trousers. Iron and brass cuirasses and high tan boot are worn by the German heavy cavalry, with burgonet-shaped helmet, and blue tunic with gray trousers. The dragoons and Bavarian heavy cavalry have tunics of light blue, trousers of still lighter blue, and black leather helmets with horsehair tails. The German hussars are noted for their rich costumes, decked with ornaments and trimmings. They wear tunics of a variety of colors, fur busbies, gray trousers with lace stripes, Hessian boots, and white pouch belts. The color of the braid and lace marks the identity of the regiment. A dark-blue tunic, with girdle and plastron, gray trousers, and a czapka characterize the uhlan lancers. Lances are carried by all cavalrymen. Nearly all of the German artillery regiments wear dark-blue coats and gray trousers.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BEDFORD, Ind.—All motor tonic formulas are secret. Some do save gasoline.

J. V. D.—In Public Library reference room you will find dictionaries in which pronunciation of all English words is given.

C. C. D.—Credit should have been given you and no doubt would have been had you called in person, provided they found no hose on the premises and no faucet where one could be connected.

C. M. G.—There are several methods of determining the height of a standing tree. One of the simplest is to measure the shadow of the tree and the shadow of a straight pole of known length, set perpendicular to the earth. Multiply the length of the shadow of the tree by the length of the pole and divide the product by the length of the shadow of the pole. The result will be the height of the tree. A method used when the sun is not shining is to set two poles in a line with the tree. From a point on one pole, sight across the second pole to the base and to the top of the tree. Let an assistant note the points where the lines of vision cross the second pole and measure the distance between these points. Also measure the distances from the sighting point on the first pole to the base of the tree and to the lowest vision point on the second pole. Multiply the distance between the upper and lower vision points on the second pole by the longer of the other two measurements and divide by the shorter; the result will be the height of the tree.

LITTLE GIRL.—One writer says: If you are the owner of a handsome Angora or Persian cat, and wish to keep it healthy, leave it alone. Animals at large know how to take care of themselves, and it is only when they get into the hands of over-anxious people that they become dependent. My advice is to drop every patent medicine, drug, powder, pill or lotion, and use common sense. In regard to feeding, unhesitatingly I say, give Tom and Tabby but two meals a day, breakfast and supper. But, you say, "they tease and carry on so." True, so does a child; and, if you feed it at every cry, you send for the doctor to straighten out your own folly. Give cats plenty of outdoor life. In correcting any little disorder of the stomach, if Tabby is troubled with constipation, give her all the raw liver that she wants for a day or two, and then reduce the amount of raw liver and give other food. In cases where Tabby suffers from purging, give her boiled milk with toasted cracker broken in the milk, using this until the desired results are obtained, when you may return to the regular food. Do not feed Angoras with too much fatty meat, and, above all, give them fresh grass every day and catnip occasionally. In winter, give them cooked cabbage or other green vegetables. Another: Angoras must be kept in good condition, since the fur to be glossy and luxuriant must be brushed every day, and once a week vaseline should be rubbed into the roots of the hair. The following day a sponge bath of 10 drops of creoline to a cupful of water will keep the fur healthy and free from dead hair. The mouth of the Angora cat will indicate its degree of health. If good, the roof, gums and tongue will be coral pink. The Persian may be said to be the same as the Angora, since the distinctions are rather indefinite, and Angora is such a small place that the many cats claimed to come from that place in Asia probably came from sections around the Persian Gulf.

NAVIGATOR TRIUMPHANS.

What About the Tariff Commissioners?

THE TARIFF COMMISSION.

Washington Post: A tariff commission will not take the tariff out of politics. It will not take politics out of tariff. The best that it can do is to facilitate tariff making and remove some of the confusion that is due to conflicting figures.

Whether the tariff commission will be of the slightest use, or will become merely an obstacle to progress, will depend upon the kind of commissioners that may be selected. Let a number of college professors and economists be selected and all that the commission will have to show for its labors will be a number of musty reports, which will continue for years to gather dust in the document rooms of Congress. Let successful business men be selected—if such men can be induced to serve—and the commission will be able to do some real service.

COST OF TARIFF TINKERING.

New York Evening Sun: Whether or not the administration has seized upon the commission panacea as the easiest way out of its tariff embarrassment, as seems most likely, it is setting about purchasing some exceedingly expensive experience both for itself and the country. Commissions, tariff or otherwise, do not operate automatically, although it would seem that they are expected to do so, judging from some of the material that is habitually put into them. The practical question is: Where are the men competent to deal with this most intricate problem to be found who will tackle the job at $10,000 a year?

A man or a group of men capable of solving the tariff question would be invaluable in the business world. Do those now in power at Washington think that "deserving Democrats" or "deserving Republicans" could handle it?

JUST POLITICS—THAT'S ALL.

Cincinnati Times-Star: One trouble with the conversion of the Democracy to the tariff board idea is that it was so plainly forced by political considerations. The Democrats now talk about taking the tariff out of politics for the same reason that they talk for preparedness—they are afraid to do anything else.

There is no doubt that the tariff ought to be taken out of politics; that the schedules should be fixed one at a time, without log-rolling and trades between representatives of different districts and different interests. There is no doubt that the rates should be fixed by Congress upon recommendation of an unprejudiced tariff commission.

The country wants a tariff board—but it will probably decide in November that it would rather have in control of the Government a party which led the way in the advocacy of scientific methods of handling the tariff, rather than one which first scoffed at the tariff board idea and then accepted it under obvious compulsion.

BETTER THAN TARIFF WALL.

Ohio State Journal: In the new revenue bill now before Congress, there is an anti-dumping section which is intended to prevent the American market from being inundated with cheap goods after the European war is ended. It provides that merchandise brought from foreign lands shall not undersell the market prices for the same goods prevailing in this country. This is a very important feature of the revenue bill and seems to command general support. It is believed the close of the foreign wars will let loose such a flood of cheap labor that our markets will be inundated by them, not only seriously affecting the wages of American workingmen but the institutions that employ them. So the dumping of foreign fabrics on our shores will paralyze all industries and inflict serious disaster upon the business of this country. The bill is all right, for in protecting the producer it protects the consumer as well.

Where Wilson Is Strong

Christian Science Monitor: Those who sent delegates to St. Louis sent them with a mandate to renominate the man who had succeeded in keeping the country out of war. That he had succeeded in doing this in the face of almost insuperable obstacles was what the democracy of the nation regarded as wonderful and worthy of all praise and all gratitude. If one will go over the speeches at St. Louis it will be found that the passages which struck the chords of feeling most keenly were those which recounted how Woodrow Wilson had preserved the young manhood of the country to mothers, wives and sisters.

Whatever may have been the capital stock of others, the one thing that recommended Woodrow Wilson to the overwhelming majority of his party was his peace record.

Because the national guard has been mobilized it is assumed by the bellicose press that Woodrow Wilson has abandoned his peace policy, that he has reversed himself with regard to Mexico, that he is now about to plunge the nation into war with its southern neighbor. We do not believe it, because we cannot believe that President Wilson misunderstands the temper of the thinking people of the United States. We cannot believe that he could be brought, by any pressure, to look upon a war with Mexico as an undertaking worthy of the country.

The Republican-Progressives

Philadelphia North American: The Progressives who left the Republican party four years ago have no more veneration or affection for it now than they had then. There is nothing in its faded traditions to awaken their loyalty or enthusiasm. They know that it is still in control of low-grade, mercenary politicians; that its aims are selfish, its ideals paltry, its soul shrunken. They know that it lacks vision, patriotism and leadership, and that in Congress its course has been as feeble and as dangerous as that of the Democrats.

Progressives recognize that in the rank and file of the Republican party there is an element of vigorous morality and sound conviction; that vast numbers of its individual members hold the same essential beliefs as do the Progressives themselves. But they cannot ignore the fact that these Republicans have surrendered the management of the party and the framing of its policies to evil and incompetent leadership.

The Progressives are going to use the Republican party as a means to an end, convinced that of the two candidates Mr. Hughes is the more efficient and the more American.

The Submarine as a Cargo Ship

NOT A GREAT RELIEF.

New York Evening Sun: The whole question comes down to this, then: What can Germany's new submarine, or any fleet of submarines that she may be able to put in commission in the near future, do for her in the way of carrying imports? This one, it is said, has room for 1000 tons of freight and she can make a round trip apparently in six or seven weeks—if the accidents of the sea or British cruisers or the nets that enmesh submarines in the blockaded waters do not "get" her. Let us say she can take a thousand tons to Germany every six weeks. But Germany needs grains of all sorts and meat products, and hard rubber and copper and cotton and petrol and nitrates and crude petroleum products, and heaven knows what besides. She needs tens, even hundreds of thousands, of tons of merchandise. How many submarines has she to supply her needs at a thousand tons a voyage apiece? No denying that these vessels may afford relief! Every trifle helps and no doubt cargoes will be assorted to meet the greatest exigencies. But it is, at least, open to the gravest doubt whether there will be enough of these vessels in regular service, say within a year, to render nugatory the British blockade and enable Germany to win the war, assuming that she cannot win it by her internal resources.

As for the rights of these ships under international law, plainly they will have the same status as surface ships. They can always find safety and amity in our ports. They can buy or load what they please and come and go and stay as long as they please, provided they comply with our laws and regulations. On the high seas enemy cruisers, sighting them, may not attack them at once any more than a submarine might licitly attack a surface passenger or freight carrier. But their immunity extends no farther than that of a surface vessel. They may be attacked the moment they try to escape. Escape for a submarine means not running, but sinking; therefore, they may be fired on and destroyed the moment they attempt to submerge. So, now that the enemy prowlers of the sea know they are abroad on the waters and are certain to begin hunting for them the only safety for the Deutschland and her class in making their adventurous voyages will be always to see the enemy first and dive before they are discovered.

THE SUBMARINE WARNING.

Washington Post: In some quarters it is conjectured that the submarine's visit to America is not merely to break the blockade, but to demonstrate to the world, and the United States in particular, that great distance is no barrier to German undersea operations. If the Deutschland could cross the Atlantic, other submarines armed with torpedoes could do likewise. Obviously, the Deutschland could have cruised about in the very midst of the battleships of the Atlantic fleet, and perhaps she passed American war vessels without detection on the trip just ended. The significance of these facts will not be lost upon Congress and the Navy Department. If anything were needed to emphasize the necessity of equipping the United States navy with submarines of great power and means of submarine defense, the voyage of the Deutschland serves that purpose. The plain truth is that Germany excels all other nations in submarine development, although this invention, like the aeroplane, is due to American genius. It is now incumbent upon Congress to stimulate the planning and constructing of submarines that will equal the best. This nation cannot afford to be merely the donor of great inventions to the rest of the world while failing itself to utilize them.

AMERICANS DID IT FIRST.

Washington Times: It is just as well to remember that a whole flotilla of American-built submarines made the trip across the Atlantic, almost without incident, more than a year before the Deutschland accomplished the feat.

The American vessels were constructed in this country and the parts shipped to Canada to be assembled, in order to avoid technical violation of neutrality. So Montreal, rather than a port of the United States, gets the distinction of sending away the first submersibles on such a trip.

Some of these American-built vessels not only crossed the Atlantic, but, after being supplied in England, went on the Levant and took important part in the operations in the Dardanelles.

The submarine remains fundamentally an American achievement; the invention of Holland and Lake; the first war craft of this type was American; the first transocean voyage was made by American vessels; and the big German vessel now lying at Baltimore is little larger than one that the American Government is building.

BLOCKADES TO BE OBSOLETE

Springfield Republican: It is to be doubted that in this submersible merchantman, or her successors, the Germans have found the means of nullifying to any considerable extent the constricting economic force of the British blockade, but in this extraordinary event we do not witness something that will in future wars render the old-fashioned sea blockade utterly futile? That the submersible merchantman is capable of much greater development may be fairly assumed. If the Germans are too much belated to release their oversea commerce from the strangulation of the British navy in this war, they may still have demonstrated by this one voyage that a naval blackade of a strong, advanced nation will hereafter be classed with obsolete weapons as much as the bow and arrow.

Unfit Militiamen

A RECORD TO DEPLORE.

Kansas City Star: Missouri was credited with 3500 officers and men. Five thousand have gone in answer to the call. From these figures alone it may be deduced that 30 per cent of the Missouri troops are raw recruits. The actual fact is that more than 50 per cent will be shown as enlisted after the call and without any previous training.

More than 600 were rejected for physical defects which made their use as soldiers impossible. It was presumed that the physical examination of these men by national guard surgeons and civil physicians was in accordance with standards. The examination at Nevada was admittedly not in conformance with those standards and aimed to give the Government the use of every man physically serviceable. But 600 were rejected on that poor basis of comparison!

It was 12 days after the call before the first Missouri unit moved and 20 days before the last moved and Missouri worked fast compared to other states. Today, more than three weeks after the call, Gen. Wood announces that only 43,000 out of 130,000 in the Department of the East have been sent to the border. Only one-third of the force is sufficiently prepared merely for moving, to say nothing of fighting. In the event of war with a first-class Power the United States could not afford to wait a month or six weeks to get its second line to the front.

These are vital matters. The neglect to appreciate and remedy the defects that are glaringly apparent would mean the loss of tens of thousands of lives unnecessarily if the final test should ever come in a war with a competent Power. It would mean an initial disadvantage which it might take years to overcome.

ARE WE WEAKLINGS?

Minneapolis Journal: More than ten per cent of the men of the Minnesota National Guard were rejected as physically unfit by the United States army examiners. While no record is available, it is assumed that a still larger proportion were found wanting among the men who originally offered their services, as only those passed by the militia examiners got as far as the final tests at Camp Bobleter.

Remember, these rejections were among men who thought themselves fit, men who felt sure they were ablebodied and without important physical defect. How many more there were who would have liked to offer themselves but who did not, because of known imperfections, there is, of course, no way of knowing.

Perhaps army physical standards are higher now than they were in the nation's earlier days. But it is more likely that the average of physical condition among our younger men has fallen. It may be due to present day "hurry-up" methods in business and social life, with their consequent penalty of "nerves." Bad nerves mean weak bodies, the doctors say. It may be that our diet has become too "fancy." It may be that we are not getting the fresh air and exercise our ancestors had forced upon them by their daily existence. Whatever the cause, there is food for thought in the examinations at Camp Bobleter.

BOYS NO LONGER SHOOT.

Dayton News: When Lord Kitchener began building his army he insisted upon six months' hard work in the camps under war conditions. He said a year would be better, but he would be willing to give the men six months' training and then lead them to the front. But he would not allow a man to leave England until he had spent fully that much time in a training camp.

An American in the past could be trained into a soldier more readily than the citizen of any other country. This because the American was already familiar with a gun. There are many American boys with the militia at this time who have had no experience with firearms.

The per cent of enlisted men who cannot shoot at this time is very much greater than in former years, according to the reports of the officers. And the reports can easily be believed. In fact, all one has to do to be convinced of their truthfulness is to look around him. Very few boys use guns at this time. A generation ago every boy went hunting. There is still in the healthy boy the love of adventure and the desire to hunt. But the average boy, both in the city and the country, is deprived of the privilege of hunting to some extent by reason of the more thickly settled communities.

THE MOOSE CALL.

Is the End in Sight?

New York Evening Post: There are multiplying signs that the industrial world is beginning to believe in the coming of peace. From all over the globe our steel trade is receiving orders for ship plates for merchant vessels, while it is widely reported that no war material orders are being given to run after Jan. 1 next. This may be in part due to the increased production of British and Russian factories; none the less, it is possible to deduce some belief in a lightening of Europe's horizon. So far as our own war-order companies are concerned, it was announced last week that the Du Pont powder mills had cut off one shift of men, and the Westinghouse Air Brake Co. is dismantling some of the buildings it used for the making of munitions. In addition, there are known to be numerous cases where plans are already under way to convert mushroom war-order plants into factories for the production of tin plate, dyestuffs and other material needed in the peaceful arts. All of this, be it noted, has disturbed Wall street not at all.

MUNITION INDUSTRY WANES.

Philadelphia Bulletin: A Westinghouse official announces that now that the contract of the company with the British Government for shrapnel has been completed, the crews employed on that work will be discharged, the factories erected for that business dismantled, the machinery sold and the attention of the company given to other lines of production, for which, happily, it has a long list of unfilled orders.

This is only one of many instances which cooperate to indicate that the munitions industry in the United States has passed its high tide and is ebbing, and that the retransformation into normal and peaceful production is already under way.

Income Taxes for All

New York World: Under existing law less than one-half of 1 per cent of the people pay an income tax. Of the 357,000 persons who contributed in 1915, all but 23,000 were assessed on incomes ranging from $3000 to $20,000 a year.

This is class taxation of the most pronounced kind. If not only exempts the great body of citizens having incomes of $3000, if single, and $4000, if married, but it makes a sorry showing in its returns from the very prosperous. It might almost be called a measure to tax incomes ranging from $3000 to $20,000.

The new revenue bill goes from the House to the Senate without change in the exemptions, although the tax itself upon all incomes below $20,000 is doubled. It does not seem possible that members of the Senate can consider this proposition very seriously without discovering the weakness of the theory involved.

As to the comparatively small number who pay surtaxes on incomes in excess of $20,000, the problem is probably one of collection rather than legislation. The evasions must be numerous and glaring. National wealth is increasing as never before in our history, but tax payments on great incomes show few signs of it.

To give this levy the proper scope of a national tax it should apply to all incomes in excess of $1000, possibly $1500 in the case of heads of families. Such a provision, instead of confining the tax to a few hundred thousands, would reach many millions. As the money is needed for national defense, the largest possible number should be put under contribution.

When it was proposed in the House the other day to reduce the exemption to $2000 and $3000 it was stated that by so doing no more than an additional $5,000,000 would be collected. This is an absurdity on its face, but if these exemptions were cut in two there could be no question that the yield in revenue would be very great.

In some foreign countries the exemption is less than $100. In Great Britain it is $600. Our Civil War income tax placed it at $600 and the rate was 5 per cent. The 2 per cent of the present law, if applied to incomes above $1000 or $1500, would carry the payments down to sums ranging from $5 to $25 in millions of cases; it would give our population a much-needed acquaintance with the cost of Government, and it would at once excite a lively interest in all parts of the country in the collection of moneys due on big incomes now hidden.

The Internal Revenue Bureau has no figures at present on the number of Americans having incomes in excess of $1000 or $1500, but two recent publications throw some light on the subject. There are more than 14,000,000 depositors in national banks. In trade or otherwise, men with net incomes of less than $1000 are not apt to have national bank accounts. According to the report of the Wicks committee, one New York farmer in three makes money—that is, acquires a surplus—and one in 28 makes $2000 or more a year. There are more than 5,000,000 owners of farms in the United States. It is known also that there are many small tradespeople, well-paid mechanics and prosperous professional men now exempt who should be made to pay something as a matter of principle and as a test of democracy.

Income taxes have come to stay. More and more they must supersede unequal and juggling indirect taxation. The more widely they are distributed the greater will be the popular interest in Government and governmental responsibility to the people.

Not All Have Gone to the Summer Places—Girls Remaining Home Tell of "Wonderful Times" They Are Having—List of Enjoyments Sounds Like a Perfect Day at a Vacation Resort—They Go Swimming, Lunch at Country Clubs, Dance, Golf, Picnic in the Woods and Motor—Chief Charm Is in the Informality of It All.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

ASK the girls who are remaining late in town, what they are doing and how they are enjoying themselves and they will answer they are having "A wonderful time." And should you ask what they are doing they will tell of a list of things that keep them busy from morning till night that sounds like "a perfect day at a summer resort."

They go swimming in the morning, they lunch at one of the country clubs after a round of golf—perhaps; the motor in the afternoon, go to a swimming party later, or maybe some one will get up a picnic which means getting together the crowd and a lunch in the most impromptu fashion, and all motoring out into the country, where there are fine places for supper.

Two nights a week everyone goes to "Sunset" and to one of the dinner dances at one of the country clubs. So life goes here in summer.

There is nothing very tangible to write about because everything is so informal and on the spur of the moment, but the girls who are here say they love the things they do in summer, the clothes they can wear and all the nice informality of it.

TWO weddings of more than ordinary importance are on the social calendar which at this time of the year is scarcely worth talking about—one tomorrow evening when Miss Virginia Simpson, daughter of Mrs. William S. Simpson, will be wedded to Valle Reyburn, the other in Pantatuck, Conn., Wednesday, when Mrs. Acrata von Schrader will be married to Lauren Carroll of New York.

Miss Simpson's wedding will be quiet, just the nearest relatives and the girls who have been her best friends since her debut two seasons ago.

Mr. Reyburn and his bride will motor from here to Hyannisport, Mass., to spend their honeymoon and will return to reside here.

Mrs. von Schrader, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otto U. von Schrader of St. Louis, married Arthur Hunnewell Shaw of Boston. She obtained a divorce from him shortly after her wedding tour and had her maiden name restored.

Mr. Carroll is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Carroll of Carrollcliff, Tarrytown-on-the-Hudson.

Mrs. James Mason of 5626 Maple avenue gave a card party Thursday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Tom Terry, who will depart this week for Grand Haven and other Michigan resorts.

THE marriage of Mrs. Susie Goode Rogers to George T. Priest, which took place in Rochester, N. Y., Friday, was hardly a surprise, as the engagement was known to the families, and Mr. Priest's attentions to Mrs. Rogers had been a subject of comment since just after Christmas, when they met. Since then they have appeared together at the country clubs, the theaters and always in the same parties.

A week and a half ago Mrs. Rogers took her children on for their annual visit to their grandparents, whose home is in Geneva, N. Y., and who spend their summers in Seneca Falls. While there Mr. Priest went on and it was decided that the marriage should take place quietly in Rochester nearby.

Mr. Priest is the son of former Judge Henry S. Priest. He and his bride are arriving today and will occupy the Priest house at 4320 Westminster place during the absence of Mr. and Mrs. Priest, who departed yesterday for White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

The bride is the widow of the late Lieut. Charles D. Rogers, U. S. A., who died about a year and a half ago suddenly of heart trouble upon his arrival in the Philippines. She is the daughter of the late Robert W. Goode, after whose death her mother, who was Miss Susie Cabanne, married Maj. George W. Goode, U. S. A., a brother of her first husband. She has two children Julia, 4 and George Goode Rogers 2 years of age.

Maj. Goode is in command of the recruiting station here and he and Mrs. Goode have made their home with the latter's mother, Mrs. Julia Chenie Cabanne, at 5365 Cabanne avenue.

The bride is regarded as one of the most beautiful young women in the social set. She is a descendent of Pierre Laclede, the founder of St. Louis and is related to many prominent families.

Mr. Priest was married before to Miss Mabel Wolff, who died three years ago, and has a small son.

He is a lawyer, belongs to the Racquet, Noonday, Bellerive Clubs and is the attorney for the United Railways.

MRS. HENRY SAYLES KILBOURNE JR., whose husband is Capt. Kilbourne of the First Field Artillery, U. S. A., and who was Miss Mary Frances Boyce of St. Louis before her marriage, has been instrumental in organizing a class in elementary hygiene, home care of the sick, and first aid at Schofield Barracks, Oahu, Territory of Hawaii. Capt. Kilbourne is stationed there with his command. Mrs. Kilbourne is a daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Joseph Boyce, 5812 Clemens avenue.

In organizing the class Mrs. Kilbourne co-operated with Brigadier-General John P. Wisser, retired, former commander of the Department of Hawaii; Brigadier-General Frederick S. Strong and the Medical Department at Schofield Barracks. She was assisted by Mrs. Marie B. Lloyd and Mrs. Jane S. McIntyre.

Maj. Horace Bloomberg, Medical Corps, U. S. A., is giving the lectures. The class includes 70 of the wives and daughters of officers and enlisted men at Schofield Barracks. The members will take the Red Cross examination for certificates of efficiency.

Mrs. C. E. Holden of 5189 Maple avenue and her daughter, Miss Marjorie, departed Thursday for their summer home in Green Mountain Falls, Colo.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM C. STEIGERS of 5156 Von Versen avenue departed yesterday for Boston, and from there they will motor to Breton Woods, to spend the remainder of the summer.

Mrs. Otho F. Ball of 5837 Cabanno avenue has returned from a week's visit to Mrs. Austin A. Parker at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Mr. and Mrs. James Francis Murphy of 5339 Maple avenue and two of their daughters, Misses Mary Alice and Elizabeth Murphy, will go to Colorado Springs, Colo., Tuesday evening to remain until September. Another daughter, Miss Margaret Murphy, has returned from a four weeks' motor tour in the East and brought Miss Lucille Meyer of Springfield, Mo., home for a visit. She and her brother, William Murphy, will join the family later.

Miss Veronica Mulvihill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Mulvihill of 5057 Washington boulevard, and Miss Mary Sieling, went to Chicago prior to July 4 for a visit and have been having a wonderful time. They went with a party of friends on a motor trip to Lake Geneva and to Delavan Lake in Wisconsin and will remain there for several weeks. Miss Mulvihill's engagement to Harry Gibbons of Chicago has been announced and she has been the guest of Mr. Gibbons' aunt, Mrs. Harry D. Gibbons, at 400 Sheridan Drive.

MR. and Mrs. D. C. Miller of 5727 Waterman avenue have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Elvira Miller, to Horace V. McKenna of Chicago. Miss Miller was a sacred Heart Convent girl and afterward went to Miss Bennett's school at Millbrook, N. Y., a fashionable finishing school.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller have only returned here from Chicago recently. It was while there that Miss Miller and Mr. McKenna met. The wedding probably will be in the autumn.

Cards have been received here announcing the marriage of Miss Virginia Elizabeth Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Moore of Kansas City, Mo. to Clifford McVicker Snow of St. Louis which took place in Kansas City July 8. Mr. and Mrs. Snow are spending their honeymoon at Old Point Comfort and will make their home in St. Louis in August.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Versen of 2821 Accomac street will depart Sunday for the Snow Islands, Lake Huron, for the remainder of the summer.

Look at the other fellow's Palm Beach suit, then telephone to Colonial Laundry Co.

Mr. and Mrs. William P. Durkan of 376 Walton avenue and their children, Miss Lavinia and Master Billy Durkan, will depart for Colorado the last of the month and will go beyond the Marshall Pass into wild country for a month's stay.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lortz of 37 Lewis place have gone to New York for a visit of two weeks.

Mrs. Henry W. Bond of the Aberdeen apartments and her daughter, Miss Marion Bond, have gone to Narragansett Pier, R. I., for the remainder of the summer.

Misses Mary and Elizabeth Dougherty of 5219 Cabanne avenue have departed for the East to spend the summer. They will first visit friends in Cincinnati and Hillsboro, O., and will later go somewhere on the Atlantic Coast.

Mrs. J. R. Starkey and her two small boys, John Kress and Caldwell Starkey, have gone to Fort Douglas, Ariz., to join Lieut. Starkey, who is stationed there with the Sixth Field Artillery. Mrs. Starkey was formerly Miss Anne Kress and has been visiting her parents, Gen. and Mrs. John A. Kress at 5030 Vernon avenue.

Miss Mabel Laura Bange of 5265 Page boulevard entertained her dancing club last Wednesday with a box party at the Empress and dinner and a very jolly evening afterward at her home. Mrs. A. C. Jaeger, the hostess' aunt, chaperoned the box party. The guests were: Misses Edith Doyon, Mary Shelton, Leona May, Ardeth Freidrich, Martha Johnson, Florence Boeger; Messrs. Walter Craig, Leslie Killinger, Charlie Schulze, Billee Jaeger, Marie Ailer, Irene Skinner.

Miss Anna Weisstein, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Weisstein of 1312 North Leffingwell avenue, and Harry W. Spitzer, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Spitzer of 1323 North Euclid avenue, will be married this evening at the home of the bride. Rabbi Rosententer will officiate. The bride will be attended by two bridemaids—Miss Lillian Weisstein and Miss Margaret Cohn—and they will wear gowns of pink and yellow taffeta covered with tulle. The bridal gown will be of silk net and tulle covered with princess lace and edged with pearls.

Her bouquet will be a shower of orchids and lilies of the valley. The dress will be woven short and the veil will form a long court train caught with chantilly lace. The best man will be a brother of the groom, Saul Spitzer. Following the ceremony dinner will be served for 75 guests, mostly relatives. Miss B. Binkoretz and Miss L. Plows, both of Chicago, came here to attend the wedding. The young couple will depart this evening for a tour of the Eastern and Northern resorts and will return home Sept. 1.

A party was given at 1801 Arsenal street on Henry Schecter's sixtieth birthday, July 9. Among those present were: Misses Freda and Anna Schwalb, Masters Otto and William Schwalb, Mrs. Anna Schwalb, Mr. Otto Heuncke, Mr. and Mrs. George Zemblidge, Mr. and Mrs. Ochsner, Mrs. Bellair, Mr. and Mrs. Clermont and others.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Studt of 2412 Dickson street gave a birthday party last Sunday on their daughter Dorothy's sixth birthday. Those present were: Misses R. Studt, M. Studt, M. Miller, W. Maloney, J. Murphy, M. Malloy, E. Malloy, K. Algeo, G. Algeo, J. Cushing, I. Hauckthorn; Messrs. H. Studt, M. Hoesor, E. Hoesor, E. White, J. Algeo.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard R. Clark of 6170 McPherson avenue announce the birth of a son.

Miss Lyda Campbell of 3526 North Taylor avenue, accompanied by her cousin, Miss Loretta McIntyre of Chicago, will depart July 16 for a tour of the Pacific Coast from San Diego, Cal., to Seattle, Wash. They will also stop at Colorado Springs and Salt Lake City.

Dr. F. T. Grice, 4500A Chouteau avenue and Miss Ruby Isabel Flory were married Wednesday night at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. P. L. Flory, 4226 Swan avenue, by the Rev. A. R. Paul, pastor of the Clifton Heights Presbyterian Church. Only members of the immediate families and a few friends were present. Dr. and Mrs. Grice will take a honeymoon trip later, and upon their return will make their home at 4500 Chouteau avenue. A common interest in tennis is said to have aided in their courtship after a meeting 18 months ago.

Mrs. James R. O'Neill of 4048 Maffitt avenue, accompanied by her daughters, Mae and Lucille, are visiting the Michigan resorts.

Miss Mamie Kurrus of 4312 Pleasand street, accompanied by her brother, Leonard Val. Kurrus, departed yesterday evening for Niagara Falls and a trip on the Great Lakes.

CARELESS USE OF SOAP SPOILS THE HAIR

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy; it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.—ADV.

NATHAN FRANK RETURNS FROM CAMPAIGN TOUR OF STATE

Says People Are Open-Minded as to Senatorial Fight, and Thinks He Will Be Nominated

Former United States Representative Nathan Frank, Republican candidate for United States Senator, has returned to St. Louis from an extensive automobile campaigning tour in the central and southeastern sections of the State.

An unintentional injustice was done to Mr. Frank in a political article in Thursday's Post-Dispatch in which, without taking his candidacy into account, it was said that Walter S. Dickey of Kansas City would be the Republican senatorial nominee.

Mr. Frank said that his campaign tour convinced him that the people are open-minded as to the senatorial fight. He believes that he, and not Dickey, will be the nominee. In his campaign he is laying stress on the fact that in the last 43 years no United States Senator has been chosen from the eastern or southern position of Missouri. At present, he says, people are most deeply interested in the gubernatorial nomination and there is no organized effort for any senatorial candidate.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE BARS ULTRA-FASHIONABLE CLOTHES

Prospective Students Notified That Dresses to Be Worn Next Year Must Be Modest.

PHILADELPHIA, July 15.—No girl with an ultra-fashionable wardrobe will be admitted to Swarthmore College when the institution reopens in the autumn. This edict has gone out from Josephine Meeter, dean of the women.

Reports were circulated last term that the girls were not living up to the traditions of the old Quaker college and its customs in regard to dress. A letter has been sent to every parent and guardian who is planning to send a student to Swarthmore in the fall, saying that all clothes that do not meet the approval of the authorities will be remodeled and that those who object will be sent home.

(Modes of Today)

It is not necessary to use a painful process to remove hairy growths, for with a little delatone handy you can keep the skin entirely free from these beauty destroyers. To remove hair, make a stiff paste with a little powdered delatone and water. Spread this on the hairy surface and in about 2 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. Oil and Gas Cases Approved.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Secretary Lane today announced approval of oil and gas leases recently disposed of at auction, embracing Osage Indian lands in Oklahoma. The new leases cover 680,000 acres. New oil leases have been granted to sub-lessees covering their former holdings to the extent of 190,000 acres, leaving about 1,500,000 acres of the old lease to be leased for oil in the future. New gas leases cover about 900,000 acres.

Churchill Says Kaiser Was Bent on Having a War

iating than any ever imposed upon an independent State? On Saturday Servia submitted. On Sunday it appeared that even this was not acceptable to His Austrian Majesty. During that day a wave of fear and excitement swept across Europe. That night first measures of British naval precaution were taken and declared.

Still, unless war had been irrevocably willed by Germany, which we couldn't then know, there seemed bulwarks between Europe and disaster. Reason recoiled with indignation from the chain of consequences threatened, in the name of the Balkan quarrel, to hurl into mortal conflict against each other the mightiest States of history, and to condemn the leading races of mankind to miseries and butcheries beyond all measures.

To those who had believed in Germany, which for more than 40 years had waged no war, it was inconceivable that there should be no remedy, no break in this monstrous concatenation only that one thing should lead to another in a senseless way till all were dragged into the abyss. Others who had been forced to watch more closely the military and naval aspects were oppressed by a sense of deliberate German purpose, of cold decisions taken months, even years, before, of preparations long maturing, of a terrible design. But, still the Agadir crisis had passed away, safely surmounted.

AND then on top of all this momentous uncertainty came the special problems of Great Britain. We were free from all legal or formal engagements. One hundred and sixty thousand British was the most that even if we had sided with her France ever asked for or expected. All our military and naval discussions with the French staffs had proceeded on the avowed and accepted basis that the British nation must be free to choose its own course when the moment came. Still, the French counted on us. They believed that, not for a war of revenge, but in resistance to naked aggression, they could count on us. They had made their military, even more, their naval dispositions, in that hope—not, Thank God, unfounded.

And what would be our position anyhow if they went down in the struggle and we were left to face a Germanized continent? And is it not in any case the ancient duty and special mission of this island power to prevent the military domination of Europe by any single State? Has not that always been our task? Do we not here subserve some cause in the vast economy of the universe? Still, by cool temper, by good faithful intention, by earnest assiduity, not unbacked by some force, peace might be preserved.

The foreign policy of Sir Edward Grey in the momentous hours which followed—for every hour might have counted—every hour will be brought under the scrutiny of posterity—was simply not to encourage France and Russia into an ambitious course by any assurance we should take their side, not to let Germany suppose that we were afraid or unable to fight her, to try somewher , somehow, to get both sides to parley around a table. To this must be added the Admiralty policy—"ready." And had there not been a deliberate, overriding intention to make war on the part of Germany, to which intention Emperor William had consciously and resolutely given his support, Sir Edward Grey would unquestionably have succeeded. But against the ram of stubborn purpose nothing could avail.

Could England Have Bluffed Germany?

It has often been asked whether Britain could have prevented war at this stage by an immediate declaration that she stood by France and Russia. It was not possible in the state of public or parliamentary or cabinet opinion which then existed to make such declaration without tearing the nation in half. But had it been possible, would it have succeeded? The answer, according to all we know today, is a certainty that it would not.

We cannot now tell at what precise moment the Emperor's decision to make war was taken. Whether it was weeks, or months, or years before the event is not yet provable. Perhaps it was after Agadir, perhaps it was when the Balkans defeated Turkey; perhaps, it was when the $50,000,000 capital tax in Germany was decreed. Perhaps it was not taken until the murder of the Archduke at Sarajevo.

The preparations, however elaborate, have ever prolonged, however extensive were not necessarily malignant. The rather dubious maxim: "Si vis pacem" etc., can always be invoked. But at some point in this system of world-wide, life-long preparation came the decision to pull the trigger. We can be sure, or almost sure, the point had already been passed in the last week of July, 1914, and that the will that decreed the terms of the Servian ultimatum had already resolved to launch the armies.

A strange week to live. A week of passionate argument and grave action. A week lived in a world of small compass, but of immense importance. A week lived, on one side, of the Horse Guards parade among only a few well-known faces, in tumultuous anxiety, and on the other in a vast, smooth organization, working with exact precision, and beyond only the vague impressions of wondering, inquiring eyes and ever-growing turmoil or discordant counsels, heard, or half heard, as an unnoticed accompaniment.

Each hour dispatches flowed in and the uncertainty as to war grew stronger, the struggle of honest opinion in the Cabinet became more intense, and one after another Sir Edward Grey plied his efforts for peace, and one after another the levers that bring the navy into full preparedness were pulled hard over until at last diplomacy exhausted, the Cabinet was stunned into agreement by the Belgian crime and the fleet ready.

The door of the council room opened, and those whose views had in the end prevailed or been carried by the march of events came out into the open air. War was resolved on.

How to explain it to the country, to Parliament, to the empire? How to convince the millions who in this free land are final arbiters? How to convince the distant dominions and the great dependencies? Not that we doubted the result. The instinct of the British empire is unerring. But the facts and arguments were so numerous and complex, the issue so fearful, so immediate that the task seemed formidable in the extreme. But it was all unneeded.

The same process of conversion and conviction that had convulsed the Cabinet for a week had been simultaneously accomplished in each individual, true-beating heart. Already in every quarter of the globe the British race and all who share their fortunes and inheritances had sprung to arms. Then began what with all disappointments and disillusions, with all mismanagement and shortcomings, long drab periods of toil and suffering stabbing flashes of intolerable pain, shall yet prove to be the most glorious, as it is the most dearly-bought page in the story of our race and island.

Why Society Women Wash Their Own Hair

Few realize how many society women now wash their own hair, not because it is a fad, but because they wish to obtain the greatest possible hair beauty and be sure they are not using anything harmful. The thousands who have found that in washing the hair it is never wise to use a makeshift but is always advisable to use a preparation made for shampooing only, say they get the best results from a simple home-made canthrox mixture. You can enjoy this, the best that is known, for about three cents a shampoo by getting some canthrox from your druggist, and dissolving a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. Your shampoo is now ready. After its use the hair dries rapidly with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.—ADV.

Life in Trenches Vividly Described by Pierre Loti

the least sign of an attack they will pour out of a thousand holes; but for the moment, in the whole width of the expanse, one hardly sees even one or two blue cloaks, which prowl from one shelter to another.

AND a terribly noisy desert, for, besides the continual detonation of artillery, more or less near, you hear some kind of huge beetles, as it were, flying overhead, which make almost as much noise as aeroplanes when they go past, but which, from their velocity, are invisible; they go past at haphazard, and when they dash their heads hard against the soil one sees pebbles, earth, fragments of iron, spurting up like a sheaf. On the horizon toward the east is silhouetted against the sky one of those funeral mounds of rubbish which mark the sites of former villages, and it is there that the monstrous beetles fall most ferociously, each time splashing up a spray of plaster and dust; a bombardment which is as stupid as it is useless, since all this is already dead.

Today also, a day of universal mud, two kilometers here, in this region where so many of our poor soldiers are condemned to live, represent at least 10 elsewhere, so difficult is it to walk. The mud grips you to the ankles and you cannot draw your feet out of it, because it sticks like birdlime. The wind remains cold, but in the midst of a sky that is so blue glows a sun that bake's one's head, and beneath the steel helmet, which grows heavier, the sweat stands in beads on the forehead.

Trenches Represent Enormous Toll.

This is the first time that I have found myself so absolutely and infinitely alone, in the midst of this stage setting of immense desolation, which today, as it chances, is sparkling with light, and is only the more mournful for that. Until I reach the little wood to which an errand of duty calls me I need think of nothing; I need not occupy myself with anything; I need not avoid the shells, which would not give me time to avoid them, nor even choose the spot to set my foot down, since it sinks in everywhere equally. And so it comes that I drift back again to the mood of former days, to my mood before the war, and all these things to which I have grown used, I see and judge as though they were new.

Only a score of months ago who would have imagined such a face of things? Thus, these countless excavations—white, because the soil of this region is white—excavations that stretch on all sides and which mark across the wilderness multitudes of zebra-tracings, is it possible that they mark out the only paths along which our soldiers of France can move today with a sort of half security? * * * Little sunken ways, some of them full of curves, some of them straight, which have been named "guts," and which we have had to multiply, to multiply to such a point that the earth is furrowed by them to infinity! What an enormous sum of toil they represent, these mole paths, lying in a network over hundreds of leagues! If we add the trenches, the shelter caves, all these catacombs that plunge down into the hearts of the hills, one's mind stops dead before such a total of excavation, that might seem the work of centuries.

Amazing Mazes of Barbed Wire.

And these things that look like fishing nets stretched on all sides, if one were not informed in advance and accustomed to them, could one divine what they can possibly be? You might think that gigantic spiders had been spinning their webs among these myriads of posts, sometimes planted in straight lines, sometimes forming circles or half moons, tracing across the wide expanse designs that must be cabalistic in order better to ensnare and envelop the Barbarians. And besides they have terribly reinforced them multiplying them twice, nay 10 times, since my last passage, these stake nets and our web-spinning soldiers have had to make among them turnings and passages, with the enormous reels of barbed wire which they carry under their arms.

But there is one thing that you can understand at the first glance, and which adds to the grim horror of the whole scene, and that is the enclosures sprinkled here and there, the wooden fences that shut in closely packed groups of poor little burial crosses, made of two pieces of wood. That you can tell at once, alas, and see exactly what it is. Here they lie, therefore, under the thunder of the big guns, as though the battle was not yet finished for them, our dear departed ones, our unknown, magnificent heroes—whom even those who weep for them cannot now come nigh, because death is passing ceaselessly in the air above their silent little gatherings.

Tree Seems Like Real Shelter.

Ah! To complete the unreality of it all, here comes a black bird of gigantic wing-stretch, a monster of the Apocalypse, that flits past noisily high above me. He flies on toward France, seeking doubtless the more sheltered region where women and children begin to be found, with the hope of slaughtering some of them.

I walk on, if one call it walking, this wearisome and inexorable process of plunging through the mud. And finally I arrive at the little grove of trees where we are to meet. I am glad of it, for my helmet and cloak had become a heavy burden under this unexpectedly burning sun. It happens that I am the first to arrive, the officer whom I have summoned—to discuss new defense works, new lines of trenches, new burrows—is without doubt the big outline making its way hither, but he is still distant, and I have still a few moments to continue my meditation of the way hither before it is time to become once more concentrated and exact. It is clear that the place is not left entirely alone, for these poor, half-stripped branches offer no more resistance than mere sheets of paper to the huge humming beetles that pass through them from time to time; but all the same a little wood like this keeps you company, shuts you in, spreads something of illusion about you.

Bombarding an Aeroplane.

I am on a bit of rising ground, from which I look down on all the terrible landscape, the succession of monotonous hillocks zebra-shaped by whitish "guts," and the few trees disheveled by shrapnel bullets. In the further distance these intertwined wires, stretched in all directions, sparkle in the sun, somewhat like "the Virgin's threads," which spread over the meadows in spring. And on all sides the detonations of artillery keep up their accustomed rumble, which goes on unceasingly here, night and day, like the roar of the ocean against the cliffs.

Ah! the huge bird has found someone to speak to in the air! I see it all at once assailed by a host of those little tufts of white cotton—bursting shrapnel—which look so innocent, but which are so perilous for birds of its breed. It turns about hastily; its crimes are put off for another time.

From behind a nearby rising ground come forth a group of men in blue, who will reach me before the officer who is coming over there. It is the chance one, the one among thousands of these little processions which one meets incessantly, alas! along the battle front and which form, so to speak, part of the stage setting. At its head four soldiers are carrying a stretcher, and others are following, to relieve them. Attracted also by the illusionary protection of the branches they stop instinctively at the entrance of the little

BACKACHE CAUSED BY TIRED MUSCLES

How to Correct It

Of all of the muscles of the body those of the back are the only ones that never get and rest or relaxation except when we lie down.

The small of the back is the location of powerful muscles corresponding to the tenderloin in beef and that is why a pain in these often over-worked muscles makes us place our hands on the small of the back.

Like all of the other muscles of the body these back muscles are nourished by the blood. When the blood becomes thin and carries insufficient nourishment these over-worked muscles are the first to feel the effect. Backache is therefore the first warning that the blood is getting thin and impoverished.

A distinguished medical authority, writing for a popular magazine, said that backache is simply plain muscle fatigue made acute by poisoned blood, and has most mercifully nothing whatever to do, ninety-nine times out of a hundred, with either the kidneys, the internal organs or the spinal cord. The best and only permanent cure for backache is to clean the blood of the poisons that are causing it, and to give yourself an immediate rest, or wholesome and relaxing change of occupation.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills build up the blood and sufferers from backache would do well to try this treatment before giving way to worry over a fancied organic disease. Rest and the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will correct most forms of backache.

For people who work too hard or dance too much and sleep too little, better habits and a course of treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are all that are needed to drive away the pains and aches that are warnings of a coming breakdown. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a tonic for the blood. They give strength and vigor, drive away that constant tired feeling and put new life into fagged muscles. Read what they have done for others.

Dull, Heavy Backache

"I had a dull, heavy backache which caused me a great deal of suffering," says Mrs. W. H. Williams, of Blanchard, Me. "My heart palpitated and I would often feel faint at my stomach. In going upstairs I would have to rest because of shortness of breath. I was very nervous and could not sleep well. I was hysterical and would cry over the least little thing. I became greatly run down, was pale and had no ambition.

"I was treated by several doctors but without relief. Altogether I must have been under doctors' treatment for ten years. Finally I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills upon the advice of a friend. I had not taken them long before I felt that I was being helped. They cured me completely and made me feel like a different woman."

Pain in the Back

Mr. C. E. Legg, of Tipton, W. Va., is another who has used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People successfully in the treatment of backache caused by thin blood.

"My trouble was anemia, as the doctor called it," said Mr. Legg. "There was a good deal of pain in my back. The thin blood affected me in other ways too. I was annoyed by sour risings from my stomach. For months I was under the care of a physician but his medicine did me no good. Meanwhile I learned of cases like mine that had been helped by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I owe my recovery to these pills and I also know that they have helped others to whom I have recommended them. One lady reports that they have done more to relieve her insomnia and nervousness than any medicine she has ever taken. Another friend says they have cured her indigestion and made her sallow complexion a clear one. They have real merit and I know of nothing that would take their place."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills suit most people's needs because they are non-alcoholic and they really build up the blood and strengthen the nerves. Try them whenever your blood is thin. Two books, "Building Up the Blood" and "What to Eat and How to Eat" will be sent free, if you are interested, by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at the nearest drug store or by mail at 50 cents per box; six boxes, $2.50.

To Overcome Sunburn, Tan, Freckles, Wrinkles

If your skin is unduly reddened, freckled or tanned, dab a liberal amount of ordinary mercolized wax on the face and allow it to remain over night. When you wash off the wax in the morning fine flaky, almost invisible particles of cuticle come with it. Repeating this daily, the entire outer skin is absorbed, but so gradually, there's not the slightest hurt or inconvenience. Even the stubbornest freckles are affected. The underlying skin which forms the new complexion is so fresh and youthful-looking you'll marvel at the transformation. It's the only thing known to actually discard an aged, faded, muddy or blotchy complexion. One ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store, is sufficient in most cases.

If sun and wind make you squint and frown, you're bound to cultivate wrinkles and crow's feet. To overcome these quickly, bathe the face in a solution made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half-pint witch hazel. —ADV.

wood to take breath and change shoulders. They come from the first-line trenches, which are three or four kilometers away, and are carrying a "gravely wounded" man to an underground hospital, which is some quarter of an hour away. They also had not foreseen this vicious sun that scorches one's head; they are wearing their helmets and cloaks, and they feel the weight of them as much as that of the precious load which they take such pains to carry steadily; more, they drag along, on each foot, a thick shell of sticky mud which gives them feet like elephants, and the sweat runs in big drops over their fine, tired faces.

Wounded in the Trenches.

"What is the matter with your wounded man?" I ask in a low voice.

In still lower voices they answer me: "He is ripped up the belly—oh! the trench surgeon told us that * * *" They finish the sentence only with a shake of the head, but I understand. For the rest, he has not stirred. His poor hand remains pressed to his brow and his eyes, doubtless to protect them against the baking sun, and I ask: "Why did you not cover his face?" "We did put a handkerchief over it, Colonel, but he took it away; he said he would rather have it like that, so that he can still see something between his fingers."

Ah! but the two last men, besides sweat, have broad smears of blood across their faces and running down their necks. "Oh, nothing much the matter with us, Colonel!" they tell me; "we got that as we came along. We started to carry him along the 'guts,' but it shook him too much; so we came on outside in the open."

Poor, admirable dreamers! To save their wounded man from jolting they have risked all their lives! Two or three of these huge death beetles which ceaselessly hum past have smashed themselves near them against the stones and have sprinkled them with their fragments; the Germans do not take the trouble to shoot at a single passerby like myself, but a group, and especially a litter, is irresistible for them. Of the two who are streaming with blood, one is, perhaps, not much the worse, but the other has an ear torn off, and hanging only by a shred of skin.

"You must get your wound dressed by the surgeon immediately, my friend." I say to ihm.

"Yes, Colonel, we are on our way there to the hospital. It suits exactly."

That is the only thing that has occurred to him to say in complaint: "It suits exactly." And he says it with such a fine, quiet smile, while thanking me for taking an interest in him.

Youth and the Great War.

I hesitate to go closer to look at their gravely wounded man, who has remained without stirring, for fear I might disturb his last thoughts. I do go close to him, however, very gently, because they are going to carry him away.

Ah! Here is a mere lad! A village boy, one can guess that at once by his bronzed cheeks, which have just begun to grow pale. The sun, as he wishes, floods his handsome 20-year-old face, which is at the same time vigorous and candid, and his hand still held like a guard before his eyes, which are set and seem no longer to perceive anything. They must have given him morphone to keep him from suffering too much. Humble child of our countryside, brief little life, what is he dreaming of, if he is still dreaming? Perhaps of his kerchiefed mamma, who wept happy tears every time she recognized his childish writing on an envelope from the front? Or is he dreaming of the farm garden that held his earliest years?

I see on his breast the handkerchief with which they tried to cover his face; it is of fine linen, embroidered with a Marquis' coronet—the coronet of one of his bearers. He had wanted "to go on seeing things," doubtless in his terror of the great night. But even this sun, which must dazzle him, will soon cease suddenly to be recognizable for him; to begin with, it will be the half-darkness of the hospital, and, immediately afterward, will begin for him the long, inexorable night, in which no sun will ever dawn again.

OPERA CHORUS TO BEGIN ITS REHEARSALS IN FRALEY HOME

Residence Leased for Purpose—Singers to Appear With Operatic Stars at Odeon in November.

The old Moses Fraley residence at 3650 Lindell boulevard has been leased as headquarters for the St. Louis Grand Opera Chorus, which will begin rehearsals of Ponchielli's "La Gioconda" there tomorrow, the women's class from 10 a. m. until noon and the men's class from 7:30 to 9 p. m. Rhearsals will continue daily under the direction of Giacomo Spadoni, chorus director of the Chicago Grand Opera Company.

During last week Signor Spadoni gave auditions to 171 women applicants and tested their voices. Of these 65 have been accepted, completing the female chorus. About 30 men have been admitted to membership, and there is an opportunity for 15 or 20 more to enlist.

The chorus will make its first public appearance in connection with the San Carlo Opera Company, which will give its usual two weeks of opera at popular prices at the Odeon during November. Later, the chorus will join foces with the Boston National Grand Opera Company during its St. Louis season. In addition, it is planned that the chorus will take part in several operatic concerts, with imported stars to take the principal singing roles.

This Wife and Mother Wishes To Tell You FREE How She Stopped Her Husband's Drinking

By all Means Write to Her and Learn how She did it.

For over 20 years Jas. Anderson of 16 Pearl Ave., Hillburn, N. Y., was a confirmed drunkard. His case was about as bad as it could be, but a little over twelve years ago his devoted wife, after years of trying, finally succeeded in stopping his drinking entirely.

Write to this woman if you have a relative or friend who drinks

Not only did she save Mr. Anderson but she stopped the drinking of her brother and several of her neighbors as well. All this she accomplished by simple home treatment which she now desires every man and woman who has a relative or friend who drinks, to know all about, for she feels that others can do just as she did.

The treatment can be given secretly if desired and without cost. She will gladly and willingly tell what it is. Therefore every reader of this notice who is interested in curing a dear one of drinking should write to Mrs. Anderson at once. Her reply will come by return mail in a sealed envelope. She does this gladly in hopes that others will be benefited as she was. One thing she asks however, and that is that you do not send money for she has nothing to sell. Simply address your letter with all confidence, to Mrs. Margaret Anderson at the address given above and she will reply by return mail in a sealed envelope.

The Doctor's Advice
By Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Elwood Sts., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

"Mr. W." asks: "What can I do for a long-continued case of constipation? I have headache and dizziness and my complexion is sallow. At night I can't sleep I'm so nervous."

Answer: Continued constipation affects the blood and makes it impure. You need a good blood purifier and laxative. Use three-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur). They aid digestion, act on the bowels and clean and purify the blood.

"S. F. E." writes: "I have a very severe case of dandruff. My scalp itches and my hair is coming out in handfuls."

Answer: Get a jar of plain yellow minyol at your drug store. Wash the hair and while still wet rub well into the scalp plain yellow minyol. Rinse out thoroughly and your scalp will feel clean and active. Repeat this treatment three or four times after washing, and in a few weeks all your dandruff should disappear and your hair become healthy and soft.

"Corpulent" asks: "What will overcome corpulency? I am so fat as to be in my own way. I'm short of breath and cannot stand exercise."

Answer: To reduce safely, use five-grain arbolene tablets. They are the most reliable reducers I could prescribe. Many are pleased with results from arbolene.

"Misery" writes: "I have been a worn-out man for the past few months. My physical and mental forces are much impaired. I do not seem to be able to think clearly. I am much depressed all the time and my usual ambition and energy seem to have died. I have headache and pains in my back."

Answer: Your condition is identical to thousands of others brought to my attention yearly. Yes, your physical and mental forces are, as you say, much impaired, but you need not be alarmed over your condition. The use of three-grain cadomene tablets should soon put you back in normal condition and fit to combat any troubles. Cultivate regular habits of living.

"Mite" asks: "I seem to be shrinking in size. I am very pale and thin. I do not feel sick, but I'm very weak. I want to increase my weight."

Answer: You are an anaemic, and the food you eat does not properly nourish your system; three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets cause proper food assimilation and increase weight and strength. Take them with your meals. Sold in sealed packages.

"Mrs. Ella M." writes: "Please prescribe for me again. This time for my kidneys. I have chills and fever, look bad, have puffs under my eyes. Sometimes my back hurts."

You should get almost instant relief from the use of balmwort tablets. I have prescribed these in numerous cases of kidney trouble and they have given excellent results. Most drug stores carry these tablets and they come in sealed tubes with proper directions.

Diabetes Can Be Relieved

Notwithstanding the advance of medical science during the past century, Diabetes still continues to baffle the most learned medical men. Thus far no one has been able to discover a definite cure for this dreaded disease and its ravages. However, much progress has been made in relieving the suffering of the afflicted. The most satisfactory results have been obtained by sufferers from Diabetes through the use of Warner's Safe Diabetes Remedy, which is compounded and prescribed solely for Diabetes and has been the means of relieving thousands of sufferers who thought themselves beyond all aid. Rev. Alvin H. Morton of Cashmere, Wash., R. F. D. No. 2, writes as follows: "I had Diabetes and was given up by all the doctors of my town. I took Warner's Safe Diabetes Remedy and am now perfectly well."

Curling Iron Kills Hair; New Method Improves It

Many a woman loses the silky, fluffy and brilliant appearance of her hair through habitual use of the hot curling iron. Certainly it can do the hair no good to dry up its natural oil, singe the life out of it, making it harsh, brittle and dull. And there's no excuse for continuing the use of that destructive instrument, now that we know what can be accomplished by applying plain liquid silmerine.

The use of this harmless product really preserves the life, lustre and beauty of the hair, and the curly and wavy effect is perfectly natural looking and most captivating. If you've never tried it, by all means procure a few ounces from your druggist and use enough to moisten your hair from root to tip, putting it on with a clean toothbrush. The liquid silmerine is neither gummy nor greasy, but quite pleasant to use.—ADV.

NOTED EXPONENT OF THEORIES FOR LONGER LIFE DIES

Elie Metchnikoff, Famous Bacteriologist, Who Experimented on Self, Succumbs at 71.

PARIS, July 15.—Prof. Elie Metchnikoff, the famous bacteriologist, is dead.

Prof. Metchnikoff was world-famous as an exponent of theories for the prolongation of human life. He was most popularly known as the great advocate of the "sour milk cure" for old age, believing that the principal agent in senile decay was the continuous auto-intoxication of the body through the putrefaction of matter in the large intestine and that the bacteria which cause such putrefaction could be effectively combated by preparations of milk soured by cultures of selected lactic acid bacilli. Later Prof. Metchnikoff went so far as to declare that the large intestine was as useless in the human body as is the appendix, and prophesied that the day would come when it would be a commonplace operation to remove it.

He was the discoverer in 1912 of a new microbe, which he called the "glycobacteria" in the intestines of a dog and in a paper before the French Academy of Sciences he announced his belief that the inoculation of the large intestine in human beings with this germ would go still further than the sour milk treatment toward the prevention of senile decreptitude. The "glycobacteria" it was explained, were sugar bacilli of which the large intestine stood in need because the sugar that was ordinarily taken into the body had already been digested and absorbed by the blood before it had reached the large intestinal tract.

Statement of Discovery.

Of this discovery, Prof. Metchnikoff himself said: "In the course of my recent researches I found that there exists in the large intestines of human beings a certain quantity of poisonous substances, which are called indols and phenols, and which have been proved responsible for the gradual decay of the system, known as old age. These can be destroyed only by sugar, but in the ordinary way any sugar or sugary substances taken into the system are digested long before they can reach that far. This applies to some extent to the lactic acid treatment which I have advocated for some time past. The problem has been, therefore, to discover some means of producing sugar within the colon by some means after digestion, and my present claim is that I have found a sugar-producing microbe, which I call 'glycobacteria,' and which is only to be found in the intestines of the dog. It may be objected that dogs are not specially long-lived. My answer to this is that the dog is a carniverous animal and it is proved beyond doubt that animal food produces the largest quantity of these poisonous substances which it is our aim to destroy. Should it be possible to give the dog a large quantity of vegetables, he would undoubtedly be immune from a great many diseases which are now caused by the presence in his intestines of poisonous indols and phenols.'"

Experimented on Self.

In the course of his studies, Prof. Metchnikoff experimented upon himself to some extent as well as upon animals, and it is said that he inoculated himself with the new "glycobacteria. His theory as to the sour milk treatment may be traced in part to the environment of his youth. He was a Russian, born at Kharkoff, May 15, 1845. In that region and particularly in neighboring Bulgaria, a surprisingly large portion of the inhabitants live to be centenarians, and Metchnikoff believed that their longevity was due largely to the fact that their diet included the bacilli of sour milk.

Following his education at Kharkoff, Metchnikoff studied at Giessen and Munich, and in 1870 he was appointed professor of zoology at Odessa. He held this post until 1882 when he resigned to devote himself to private researches into the anatomy of invertebrates. It was while working at lowly organized forms of life such as sponges that he first made the observations which constituted the basis of all his subsequent work. In 1888 he had attracted the notice of Louis Pasteur, the founder of the famous Pasteur Institute for the treatment of rabies in Paris, and he was invited to become one of Pasteur's associates. In 1895 he succeeded as the director of the institute, a post which he held to the time of his death.

In his study of longevity, Prof. Metchnikoff came to the belief that it should not be uncommon for people to live to the age of 150 years. He found that every indication that the human mechanism was calculated to last far longer than it actually does. His researches showed among other things that animals which had no large intestines lived to an advanced age, particularly birds, which preserve their youthful agility and spryness to the end of their long span. In the case of human beings he found that even among those whose sufferings were terrible, there were few who wanted to be put out of their agony by death. They all wanted to live.

"This," said Metchnikoff, "shows that death between the ages of 60 and 80 is not natural. It should not occur so soon. There is some cause for it, which should be discovered and remedied." If the normal specific longevity were attained by human beings he believed that old and not degenerate individuals would lose the instinct for life and acquire an instinct for death and that as they had fulfilled the normal cycle of life, they would accept death with the same relieved acquiescence as they now accept sleep.

In 1908 the Nobel prize for medical research was divided between the late Dr. Paul Erhlich of Berlin and Prof. Metchnikoff. The $20,000 which he thus received he devoted entirely to the furtherance of scientific researches. Personally he was not well off, and throughout his long life sacrificed all but the plainest living necessities to the cause of science.

A LOOK AROUND

By Clark McAdams.

ONE must go into the country to appreciate the extent of the mail order business. It is an astonishing development with which those of us who have not lived in the country within recent years are for the most part quite unfamiliar. Your average countryman has his library of catalogues and exercises much the same choice in selection that one can exercise in the city by running around from one store to another. I know of one case near St. Louis in which the buyer ordered a house. This was a two-story frame dwelling with the usual stream lines and appurtenances. It came knocked down, and had only to be assembled and painted. The owner was tremendously tickled about it, and claimed a saving of something like one-half. The neighbors were agog. I saw the house set up. It looked like a good competent homestead, and has, so far as I know, adequately served that purpose.

It is not dreaming, perhaps, to suppose that one may shortly be able to buy in this way a very good western town. The mail order houses are already carrying dwellings and barns, and it does not overtax the imagination to foresee that they will soon be handling a complete stock of everything that goes physically to make up a town. One's order in such a case might very well be as follows:

"Please send us a good western town for a population of about 800. We will require one of your XX town halls, 15 assorted store buildings, 200 residences sized down from your 208 to your 612, a Little Hercules waterworks, one electric plant of your Prometheus pattern, a two-story school and six good country churches. It will be a dry town, and drug stores should be accompanied by the usual rear shed. We are ambitious to start out with a bright modern look, and hope from time to time to avail ourselves of the bargains you offer in such refinements of civilization as country clubs and art galleries. Check is inclosed."

Has the army, perhaps, looked into the mail order catalogues? Is it possible that they have omitted anything we could possibly need? It is a very complete business. It may not be able at this time to fill such an order as would avail an unprepared republic to conquer a country like Mexico, but if that is so it is because there has been no good means of foreseeing the demand. That is all the mail order business requires—the demand.

DOES THIS SETTLE THE SHARK DEBATE?

IT looks as if we finally had the goods on the shark. If so, it is a pity, for we are one degree nearer that monotonous era in which there shall be nothing to debate. That sharks will attack men has been averred always, but it has not been, so far as I know, accepted as a scientific fact. I have at any rate known men not unfamiliar with the sea—one of them the author of a book on sea fishes who inquired exhaustively into the subject—to insist that the man-eating shark is one of our popular myths.

A friend of mine, who served an apprenticeship in the navy and sailed the seven seas, assured me after the first stories of the attacks on the Jersey coast were published that he had never known a shark to attack a man and had always believed they would not do so. He said he had frequently swum in waters infested by sharks, and that upon one occasion he had with others of the crew swum off the bow of a ship when marines were shooting sharks off the stern.

Yet it does seem that the man-eating shark is a fact, and it would be silly to doubt the evidence we have had in the past week. Why it should suddenly become possible so easily to prove that the shark is a man-eater when evidence against him has been so elusive for centuries is a mystery.

Something of the same uncertainty which has led so many fish men and sailors to doubt that a shark will attack a man applies to our own alligator gar. This great fish is not uncommon in the Mississippi River. It could easily pull a man under. It grows to a length of seven feet, has sharp teeth with which it could easily rend flesh, and its power in the water is prodigious. Yet it has never been proven to the satisfaction of science that the alligator gar will attack a man. It has been reported to have done so many times, but investigation has not, at least to my knowledge, verified one of those reports. We swim in the river as people have swum in the sea. We know there is a fish there which could easily pull us down if it chose, but we have thought it wouldn't. If we are mistaken about it, as it seems that people on the seashore have been mistaken about sharks, we cannot get to the bank any too soon.

MORE MISINFORMATION ABOUT THE POSTOFFICE

DESPITE the popular impression, not every rural mail carrier has an automobile. I understand that this is largely because no adequate provision is made for excess baggage when Harold Bell Wright cuts loose with a new novel or there is a deluge of mail matter for some other cause. (I am probably wrong about this, and will be brought to book exactly as Mr. Usher was, but one cannot always contain all one hears.) At any rate, the plodding horse is still on the scene, and not every whirl if dust in the distance is the mail carrier getting about in his Ford. A carrier whom I know says the margin of profit is in some cases so slight that whether he makes anything or not almost depends upon what is put in the postoffice. For instance, he may make money on letters, and still lose money on the Government's garden seed or some similar glut.

The best story of the hardships of a mail carrier I have heard was told me the other day by a St. Louisan who has been fishing down in New Mexico. We are both familiar with a route there which leads up hill and down dale to such an extent that the service may be said to be picturesque.

My friend tells me that recently the route was captured by a Mexican. This displeased one of the dwellers in a remote part of the mountains, who promptly avenged himself upon the new carrier by going out and mailing in five tons of oats. Getting five tons of oats to their destination busted the Mexican, and a white man carries the mail again.

Profit in the Government service is frequently frail. I know a lamplighter on the Mississippi who told me he had turned one of his lights over to another man because it did not pay enough.

"What did it pay?" I asked.

"After deducting the cost of gasoline and lubricating oil, I had 24 cents a month," he answered.

Of course, there was always a prospect that the Government tender might come along and move that light back to a 50-cent profit, but the lamplighter was not attracted by it. The light seemed to be getting away from him, and he gave it up.

However, these things are probably nothing. Wait until the Government owns the railroads!

SHORT METER.

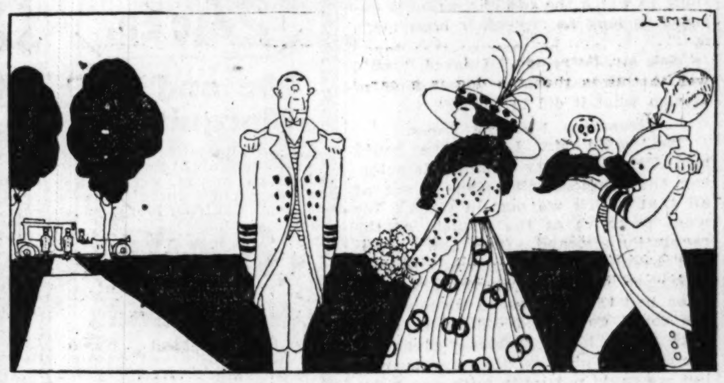
WET gas, dry gas,
Any kind at all;
We will not complain a bit
If the bills be small.

Dry gas, wet gas,
All the same to us,
And if there isn't any bill
We won't make a fuss.

Jests and Jingles

By
W. H. JAMES

ARABELLA'S MODEST WISH.



MISS ARABELLA SIMPKINS BROWN, although it may seem funny,
Will tell you with a pretty frown she doesn't care for money.
She'd merely like to have enough to buy the things she wanted,
Such trifles as a sable muff, a country house that's haunted,
A big imported limousine, a steam yacht white and racy,
A foreign maid called Imogene, who'd changed her name from Casey,
A butler straight from Buckingham with chilled and haughty manner,
Who'd proudly mutter: "Thank you ma'am," while carrying the banner,
An Adirondack bungalow for week-end merrymakers,
With 700 rooms or so and half a thousand acres,
A town house on the avenue in stately isolation,
A royal mansion, through and through, compelling admiration,
A little block of Standard Oil, ten thousand shares or twenty
To save her hands from needless toil and give her coin a-plenty.
And, lest the wolf should prowl around, a-howling and a-crying,
She'd like to own that bit of ground the Woolworth's occupying.
But otherwise she wouldn't care to be so very wealthy,
In fact, she'd think it very fair to be just rich and healthy.
A fortune, say, like Hetty Green's would meet her modest wishes—
Just now she's out behind the scenes, a-doing up the dishes.

THAT EXAMINATION.

"Name, please."

"Henry L. Weeke. They call me Hank for short."

"Aha! A short Hank is soon curried."

"I'm an excavation inspector, not a hostler."

"What beats two pair?"

"I used to know, but I forgot."

"What is an excavation?"

"A 'nobody home' sign where the dirt used to be."

"Would you bluff with a pair of deuces, or stay out?"

"I can't remember. I've reformed."

"Suppose you found an excavation at night without a danger light on it?"

"If it was Sunday night I'd put the lid on till midnight."

"Then what would you do?"

"I'd open it up again and close it at 1 o'clock."

"What's a bobtail flush?"

"Something like an Efficiency Board, I think, but I'm not sure."

"Ah! We'll change the subject."

"It needs changing."

"How wide and how long is a ditch?"

"I don't know, but it doesn't stick out of the ground much."

"Can a loo-loo be played more than once in a night?"

"It seems to me I played it twice once."

"Did you ever use a pick and shovel?"

"Not a shovel, but when they offered me two good jobs I took my pick."

A LITTLE VAUDEVILLE.

"MORNING, Jinks."

"Howdy, Binks. I see that German submarine came over."

"You're all wrong."

"How's that?"

"It came under."

"How often are those boats going to come across?"

"O, whenever they take an ocean."

"It must be stuffy in a submarine."

"Comparatively speaking, yes."

"Were you ever in a submarine?"

"No, but I rode in an upper berth in a Pullman."

"What's that boat going to take back?"

"A nickel cargo."

"O, I see. It's a jitney liner."

"Yes, they're going to fill the boat with nickel and they're going to take a little rubber, too."

"If the boat's filled with nickel how can they take a little rubber."

"Through the periscope."

"The crew must have suffered awful hardships coming over here."

"How's that?"

"They had two phonographs on board."

"Did they make good time?"

"No, ragtime."

"Say, you know what you said about taking a little rubber through the periscope?"

"Sure. What of it?"

"Well, on the surface that's a good joke."

"I thought you'd see it."

"Sure. When you sprung it I had to come up for air and then I saw it."

"You ought to come up for air a little oftener."

"How's that?"

"Then you'd see more of my jokes."

"I'd need a tank of oxygen for most of them."

O SUM GO.

CHINA submarine is wonderful boat,
Goes up for sink and down for float;
Is downside up when it leave some town
And comes up next time upside down.

Li Yuan Hung, new President man,
Is build big submarine fast as can;
Will show all Germans how to do
With very fine style go-down canoe.

Will bring sharky fin and mocky bird tongue
For dining room table of Li Yuan Hung;
Then everybody bow and bend him knees
When China sink-boat rule the seas.

Franklin K. Lane Tells What Wilson Has Done in Mexico

there can be but one answer to that question—No!

"To have recognized Huerta would have been a two-fold injustice. First, to the people of Mexico, and secondly, to all the people of South and Central America. To give the Commander-in-Chief of an army recognition as President under such circumstances would have been to announce to all ambitious military officers that they had but to ally themselves with a successful junta, seize the Government, murder the lawful incumbents and announce the overthrow of all law and a supreme military dictatorship in order to gain the recognition of the United States, we being thoroughly aware of all that had happened!

"Americans are justified in the pride that through the operation of the Monroe Doctrine there is gradually growing up in the New World a civilization that will make old-time revolutionary methods impossible, that will carry forward all of the 21 republics to the unification of our international interests in the true spirit of Pan-Americanusm. We have so amplified the Monroe Doctrine that we are virtually the copartners of the republics south of us, and to proclaim that the violation of their constitutional laws would not in the slightest interfere with our recognition of a conspiracy to murder lawful executives, and overthrow their established republican forms of government would have been rightly considered by the American people as the most cowardly and short-sighted policy imaginable. Condemnation would have arisen not only from the people of the United States, but from all the nations of the Pan-American Union.

"During Huerta's regime we learned much of the ability of the Mexican as a casuist. The notes that came from Mexico were models of the seventeenth century style of diplomatic state papers. President Wilson attempted, it will be remembered, to find a basis upon which there could be set up in Mexico a government that we could recognize. There was nothing pre-emptory about our attitude in the beginning of the diplomatic exchanges.

"Our whole effort was to obtain a republican form of government in Mexico which would have the people back of it, and guarantees against the establishment of an absolutism on our Southern border under which the people of Mexico would so chafe that we should have a constant state of revolution there.

"Many of the best Mexicans were in sympathy with the attitude that the United States took toward Huerta. They knew that stability of government was not to be hoped for under a man of his temperament and disposition. After it became evident, by continued negotiation which ended nowhere, that Huerta was standing, so to speak, in the City of Mexico heaping insolence on the United States, President Wilson gave notice that Huerta must go.

Tampico Incident Followed.

"Then followed the Tampico incident. Our sailors landed at Tampico and were arrested, marched through the streets in ignominy and eventually returned to their boat. The Admiral in charge was so incensed at their treatment that he immediately made upon Huerta a demand that a national salute should be fired in astonement for the insult to the flag. Again the Mexican Government attempted to continue its policy of diplomatic quibbling.

"Meanwhile the revolution had gained such headway in the north that it was difficult from day to day to say which force held or occupied the greatest portion of Mexicon territory. Huerta was keeping up his resistance because he was being supplied with ammunition from abroad. A ship was reported ready to land at Vera Cruz with a cargo of arms, and as a warning to Huerta and in proof of the seriousness of our purpose to bring Huerta to a recognition of our attitude, the order was given to seize the custom house and occupy the port of Vera Cruz.

"We did not go to Vera Cruz to force Huerta to salute the flag. We did go there to show Mexico that we were in earnest in our demand that Huerta must go, and he went before our forces were withdrawn. The occupation of Vera Cruz was carried out with difficulty, with loss of 10 of our brave sailors and marines, and if aggression and intervention had been our aim we could have easily seized the railroad to Mexico City and occupied the capital.

"The menacing attitude of the Mexican troops surrounding our force of occupation at Vera Cruz made hostilities appear imminent, and again the strongest kind of pressure was brought to bear upon the President to intervene, that we should go into Mexico and take matters into our own hands. This is the one thing that the President has set his face against from the first. It is the thing to which the administration is opposed so long as any other hope holds out."

"But, Mr. Secretary," I asked, "could not the United States have done in Mexico what it did in Cuba?"

Situations Not the Same.

"No," said Mr. Lane, "we could not. That is a very common delusion, but the Mexican situation is not at all that which we met in Cuba. We went in there at the request of the revolutionists, and after the Maine had been sunk in Havana harbor, and such authority as there was in Cuba had thus evidenced its hostility. We could go in and did go in there with some heart fighting alongside the revolutionists against a monarchy, but we could not go in with any heart to fight aginst the Mexicans who are struggling to find a way to popular government. But to return to facts:

"We had sought to bring to our sympathetic support all of the South American countries. They also were anxious for a settlement of this trouble upon some basis that would safeguard the interests of Mexico and conserve that unity which is the soul of the great Pan-American movement. Some of them thought that they saw a greedy band from the north reaching down with no benevolent purpose, and if it laid hold of Mexico none of them knewn but that it might be their turn next.

"This fear of the big brother is a very real one in Latin-America. They do not know us intimately; they are suspicious of our motives. They think the Mexican war of 1846 was unjustifiable aggression on our part; they think of the Panama incident as a robbery; they misconstrue our purpose in Santo Domingo, and in Nicaragua, and they do not trust us. They fear that the spirit of imperialism is upon the American people, and that the Monroe Doctrine may be construed some day as a doctrine that will give the whole Western Hemisphere to the United States; that it is a doctrine of selfishness, and not a doctrine of altruism.

"Those who are familiar with the feeling of the South and Central American countries toward the United States know that just at that time, when our forces occupied Vera Cruz a very intense feeling had seized upon Latin-America. They believed in their hearts that we were on our march southward, and that the President's Mobile speech and other generous utterances of the same sort were to be taken in a Pickwickian sense.

"When they presented a plan of mediation, the United States had no choice but to accept it. Indeed, if we had refused to accept Latin-America would have been justified in doubting our good faith. No one that I am aware of, either Republican or Democrat, has ever criticised the President for accepting the mediation of the Argentine, Brazil and Chile.

Waived Claim to Indemnity.

By the protocols signed at Niagara Falls on June 23, 1914, the United States agreed that the selection of a provisional and a constitutional president be left wholly to the Mexicans and we guaranteed our recognition of them when chosen. This made clear our desire not to interfere in any way in the settlement of Mexico's domestic troubles and as a further proof of our disinterested friendship for the Mexican people the United States agreed not to claim any war indemnity or other international satisfaction from Mexico. We had gone to Vera Cruz 'to serve mankind.' Our only quarrel was with Huerta and Huerta got out on July 16, 1914. Our forces were withdrawn from Vera Cruz on Nov. 23 following.

"Three days after Huerta left Mexico Villa began levying taxes on his own authority and it was plain that the successful revolutionists would soon be fighting between themselves. Both Carranza and Villa agreed to a conference at Aguascalientes, and it was stipulated that no soldiers were to be there, but Villa turned up with an armed force that terrorized the convention and prevented it from recognizing Carranza and in a short while open warfare began between the two factions.

"Vilal and Cazzanra had broken and there was a double sovereignty claimed even on our border in Northern Mexico. Things were going from bad to worse, and it was suggested in the Cabinet that there should be some determination by the United States as to which of the rival claimants to power in Mexico should be recognized as a 'de facto' Government.

"Secretary of State Lansing thereupon called a conference of the representatives of the Argentine, Brazil, Chile, Bolivia, Uruguay and Guatemala and asked them from their knowledge of the situation—for a considerable portion of the information in the hands of the United States came through the representatives of these countries in Mexico—to co-operate with him in the determination of the claimant to be recognized. These six Latin-American Catholic countries unanimously recommended the recognition of Carranza, and in furtherance of our Pan-American policy this recognition was at once given by the United States and Latin America.

into Mexico on peaceful errands murdered; we have seen our own towns upon the border raided, and Americans slain on American soil. These outrages prompted President Wilson to send our own troops into Mexico, and this course cannot be otherwise construed than as a recognition of the fact that the de facto Government in Mexico recognized by ourselves, and by other nations is not fulfilling the duty which one government owes to another.

"We are in Mexico today, and how long we shall stay and how far we shall go depends upon the policy, and the power to keep the peace of the Carranza Government, but we shall not go further than we have gone until every effort to secure effective Mexican co-operation fails."

Discusses Needs of Mexico.

Mr. Lane then proceeded to an examination of the principles governing the policy of the United States toward Mexico, and of the needs of the Mexican people. He said:

"There are things that a democracy must always be willing to fight for. But what thing is there that any American can say we ought to be willing to fight for in Mexico. Is it because railroads built with American capital have been damaged, that mines have been shut down, or even that American citizens have been killed by outlaws and bandits?

"All those things we can and do very much regret, but who will say that they are great principles for with a democracy should be willing to sacrifice the blood of its sons. Who can formulate out of the whole history of the past six years any other determination than this: That we should resist the temptation to fight where pride and interest move us in that direction, and that we should and will fight when we are attacked, and when we find no other means by which our interests can be safeguarded and Mexico be given any hope for itself.

"We have been on the edge of war—aggressive war—with Mexico several times in the last three years, but each time before the determination was made that we should discard our hopes, there has opened some way by which reasonable men might expect that Mexico could prove herself able to take care of her own problems. The one man whon can justifiably criticise President Wilson for his Mexican policy is the man who honestly believes that Mexico cannot be brought to stability of government and responsibility except through the exercise of an outside force. That man is consistent, and the only cirticism I have to make of him is a criticism of his judgment.

"There is no question that we could easily over-run Mexico. I believe we could do it with a comparatively few men, although we would have a united Mexico against us. There would be no glory in such a war, and there is not one man in ten thousand in this country who really wants such a war. It would be repugnant to every American tradition and would discourage the friendship of every other American nation.

We feel ourselves to be so superior spiritually, mentally and physically to these people that there could be but one outcome. Indeed, the slightest [illegible] of the most temporary character would be a humiliation to us. Of course we could conquer Mexico, and after a good deal of guerilla warfare we could bring Mexico to a state of quiet."

Change Would Not Last.

"Then we could hold her while we administered to her the medicine that we believe she needs. We could have what we call a general cleaning up, the rebuilding of her railroads, of her wagon roads, the construction of sewers for her cities, the enforcement of health regulations and all the other things that go to make up the outward and visible signs of order and good government."

"But don't you see that the peace we would bring would be a peace opposed by force, the government we would give to Mexico would be the kind of government that we have and which makes life tolerable to us in our communities. Its standards would not be Mexican standards, its ideals would not be Mexican ideals, its genius would not be Mexican genius. The moment we withdraw from Mexico there would be a return after a very short time to Mexican standards.

"What Mexico really needs and must be allowed to do is to raise her own standards; it is to give herself a cleaning up by herself. That is bound to take time but in no other way can Mexico get a government that would be expressive of her own ideals, that will be expressive of some aspiration of her own as to what her civilization should be, and in this we want to be of help to Mexico if she will alow us to do so.

"The Mexican problem as a problem depends upon your attitude toward other peoples. Mexico is a land to conquer and the Mexican people are a people to be conquered and subordinated and the country and its resources made ours, if you look upon a smaller and less highly civilized country as a proper object of explorittaion. On the other hand, Mexico is a country out of which something greater can be made and the Mexican people are a people who have possibilities and can be helped to become a self-governing nation, and if you take that attitude toward Mexico, you are bound to sympathize with their struggle upward.

"In other words, where we find that conditions justify revolution, if we think it our business to go in and work the revolution to our profit, we must condemn the President's policy; but if, where we find conditions justify revolution, we want to give that revolution a chance to work out from the inside, we must hold up his hands."

"What are the things Mexico needs, Mr. Secretary?" I asked. "What is necessary for a return to peace and order?"

Mr. Lane said: "The things that Mexico needs now are few, but they are fundamental. A land tax system which will make it impossible to hold great bodies of idle land for selfish reasons and which will make it unnecessary for the Government to sell concessions in order to support itself. A school system

They have just been made up from a surplus stock of Summer materials that were purchased before the sharp advance, and represent the best, most popular and most desirable patterns and fabrics of the season.

The assortment comprises shirts in the French-cuff and laundered-cuff styles and in a wide range of fabrics, including satin-stripe pongees, fine corded madras, mercerized poplin, woven-yarn ripple effects, solid-color poplins, high-count percales and other seasonable weaves—in an excellent variety of patterns.

Every man who responds to this advertisement will be impressed by this sale's magnitude and value-giving and will instantly recognize its importance as a money-saving occasion.

Every size from 14 to 17½ and an extra selling force insure a satisfactory selection without delay.

This is a sale like those of the past that have gained and held the patronage of so many Saint Louis men, who know, from experience, that it pays to attend Vandervoort's Special Selling Events.

by which proper education may be given to all the people as it is given in the United States. If Diaz had done this, as he promised, he would have created an active public opinion in Mexico which would have made the present conditions impossible.

"Along with the primary schools go agricultural schools in which modern methods of agriculture should be taught. The army might well be used as a sanitation corps so as to insure against the recurrence of those plagues which so affect trade relations with Mexico and the health of the people. With these things Mexico would be well started on the way toward that better era which her more intelligent revolutionists thought she had reached in the early days of the Diaz administration, some 40 years ago.

"Everyone in Mexico is united upon the proposition that the present system is based upon privilege and is unjust. I have talked with 20 of the wealthiest and most intelligent men who belonged to the Diaz regime. All have admitted the fact. Some have even volunteered the statement that Mexico is in a feudal state, and that the land belongs to great proprietors, who work the peons and keep them in a semi-slave condition. If the facts were better realized, the people of the United States would not stand for the labor conditions that exist in Mexico, and for the peonage, which is only a form of slavery.

"One morning 10 years ago I was on a coffee finca—a great estate high up in the Sierra Madre—and I asked a peasant who labored from sunrise to sunset what he was getting for his day's work. His answer was 60 cents in Guatemalan money, which was equal to 10 cents in gold. Here was a strong, able-bodied agricultural laborer earning $3 a month. I asked him why he did not go down to the railroad, where the American contractors would pay him 50 cents or more a day. His answer was: 'I would not be from here one mile before Don Porfirio would have reached out his hand and drawn me back to jail!' I said, 'Why, could he arrest you?' and the answer given me falteringly and in fear was, 'Because I owe the store.'

"He had lived and worked on that finca for 12 years, and alive or dead, he is there today unless he has run away to join an army in the revolution. I asked that Mexican peon where he had come from and he pointed across the mountains to a valley where his people had lived for a thousand years. 'Why did you leave there?' I inquired. His answer was that 'Don Porfirio had given the land where he was born to a Chinaman.'

Chinamen Brought In.

"From an investigation I made myself, I found out that this was literally true; that the land, which was the hereditary possession of these Indians, had been taken from them by the government and given to a great 'company' on terms which one can only guess; that the 'company' had sold the land to a syndicate, in which there were no Americans, upon condition that it should be populated under a law somewhat similar to our homestead law, with the reservation that it was neither to go to Mexican natives nor to citizens of the United States and the immigrants with which the syndicate was populating that part of Mexico were Chinamen.

"I crossed a bridge on the Camino Real. 'The last time I crossed that bridge,' said the peon who was with me, 'the Governor of the State was lying there dead. He had become ambitious and presented to the people a program of reform. Doubtless he hoped to be another Juarez, and Don Porfirio had ended his ambitions.' The peon of Mexico—and out of possibly 15,000,000 inhabitants, at least 12,000,000 are peons—is a kindly and gentle creature under normal conditions, disregardful of his own life, but not anxious to make war on any one. The peon has had it forced upon his mind that he belongs to a definite sphere of life, and so he is without ambition and without foresight, but he is not without intelligence, and he makes an excellent workman when taught. All he needs is a chance to live and a chance to learn, land to cultivate and schools to go to. Is it conceivable that to add to the miseries of these struggling people any American citizen would want to make war on them?

Pioneering Spirit Alive.

"We of the United States have the impulse that all virile people have. We feel conscious of our ability to do a job in nation-making much better than anyone else. Read over Kipling's poem, 'The White Man's Burden.' It was not so much the white man's duty to clean up unsanitary conditions on the outskirts of civilization and to develop the backward peoples of the earth that he was expressing as it was our perfect, self-complacent appreciation of our supreme ability to do the cleaning up better than any other people on the face of the globe.

"There is a good deal of the special policeman, of the sanitary engineer, of the social worker and of the welfare dictator about the American people. We are quite conscious that in the development of this great country of ours, in our march across the continent, we have done a perfectly good job, and the pioneering spirit is very much alive. It is one of the most fundamental instincts that have made white men give to the world its history for the last thousand years.

"As a great nation dedicated to democracy, we cannot undertake a war of conquest against a people because their moral development has been neglected by their former rulers. We can, however, insist that these people shall make safe our borders and give protection to the lives and property of our citizens who have settled in Mexico at her invitation."

"But is there no way, Mr. Secretary, in which the United States can help Mexico on the road to progress?" I asked.

Mr. Lane said: "To directly offer help to Mexico would be looked on by them as an insult, like slapping them in the face. This is a kind of pride that is purely Latin. It is an inheritance that comes to Mexico by way of Spain, along with the ideals that Cervantes ridicules in Don Quixote; but it is so real a thing that no progress can be made with recognizing it. So I say that to tell Mexico what she shall do in our straight out American fashion, to say to Mexico we are going to help you without being invited to do so, is equivalent, under present conditions, to a declaration of war.

Two Courses Open.

"The Mexicans do not believe in our professions of altruism. We must say to Mexico one of two things. Either you must keep our border safe and protect the rights of our nationals in Mexico, which you have not done, or we will invade your country and restore order ourselves; or we must say to Mexico we understand the effort you are making to give the people a chance for life, liberty and pursuit of happiness and we will gladly help you if you ask our help to accomplish this end.

"The last is the policy that the United States has been seeking to put into effect. The difficulty in doing this arises almost solely out of the difficulty we Americans have in persuading the people of Latin-America that our intentions are really honest.

"Nor is this altogether to be wondered at. Latin-America has known the American chiefly as a seeker after concessions, a land grabber and an exploiter. Even where the American has bought property, as many have who today hold perfectly legal title to the land, they are absentee landlords and every just criticism that the Irishman has had to make against the absentee English landlord can be made against the absentee landlord in Mexico.

"He does not become part of Mexico; he does not throw in his lot with the Mexicans. He is willing to spend his money there and employ labor, but he has nothing in common with the people of the country. The Mexican feels that the American goes there only to get rich out of the land and labor of Mexico, that he comes to exploit, not to develop."

Mr. Lane had risen. He was standing on the raised veranda of his camp overlooking the placid waters of Lake Champlain. "There are just two more things that I want to say," he continued.

"There has never been a time since the United States established the present Mexican border under the treaty of Guadelupe Hidalgo when raids, small or great, have not taken place across that border, and sometimes Americans have been the raiders—we may as well acknowledge that fact. Furthermore there never has been a time since the United States was founded when Mexico itselw was as a whole in the control of any one government. Even Diaz never had the Yaqui Indian country, never really controlled Sonora.

"A policy of force alone has been a failure both as far as the Mexicans are concerned and in protecting American life and property. American life and American property have both been repeatedly assailed and destroyed during every administration. The protection of our people there has always been a problem and I believe always will be a problem. This hazard any foreigner takes who goes into a country filled with people who would risk their lives for a horse or a saddle.

"Further, I say this. That looking at Mexico solely from the standpoint of allowing our miners, our engineers and our capitalists to develop that country for their own benefit and only incidentally for the benefit of Mexicans a policy of force is all that Mexico needs. It is the only policy that has ever been tried upon the Mexican people and it has proved a success for the exploitation of the country by outsiders. If, however, we look at the Mexican question from the standpoint of the Mexican, it

HOW TO REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT

A SIMPLE, SAFE, RELIABLE WAY

People who are over-burdened with superfluous fat know only too well the discomfort and ridicule that over-stout people have to bear.

If you are carrying around five or ten pounds of unhealthy fat you are unnecessarily weakening your vital organs and are carrying a burden which destroys the beauty of your figure.

There is no need of anyone suffering from superfluous fat. If you want to reduce your weight in a simple, safe and reliable way, without starvation diet or tiresome exercise here is a test worth trying: Spend as much time as you can in the open air, breathe deeply and get from Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. or any good druggist a box of oil of korein capsules; take one after each meal and one before retiring at night.

Weigh yourself once a week so as to know just how fast you are losing weight and don't leave off the treatment or even skip a single dose until you are down to normal.

Oil of korein is absolutely harmless, is pleasant to take, and helps digestion. Even a few days' treatment has been reported to show a noticeable reduction in weight, footsteps become lighter, your work seems easier and a lighter and more buoyant feeling takes possession of your whole being.

Every person who suffers from superfluous fat should give this treatment a trial.—ADV.

Mexican Policy of President Reviewed by Secretary Lane

policy of force adequate to the problem? No one who has studied it will say so! The truth is:

"Mexico will never be a nation in any real sense, nor will the Mexicans ever be a people of agricultural, commercial, industrial or political consequence until the individual Mexican has had an economic and an educational chance. He must be tied to Mexico and not to a landlord by the ownership of a piece of land; he must be able to read and write so that he may know what the needs of civilization are. This policy is that which I characterized as a policy of hope and hopefulness. It is not founded on doubt and despair. It refuses to recognize the Mexican who can only be shot into keeping order.

"If we despair of these people, who is to be their friend? Are we Americans to see Mexico forever remain a land of a few rich and cultivated gentlemen, and 12,000,000 half-starved, ill-clothed and illiterate peasants, men, women and children, kept in slavery and subjection and ignorance, a few people into whose lives comes nothing that raises them above the beasts of the field?

"The people of the United States cannot conceive of such conditions. Is it not time to try another policy than that of force alone, which has failed so miserably and wrought such woe? Is President Wilson to be criticised because he believes that it is not idealistic, not outside the range of reasonable hope to think of America as the hopeful friend of Mexico? Why may not Mexico be led to see that we are honest in our willingness to help and that we can do it?

"President Wilson has clearly seen the end that he desired from the first and he has worked toward it against an opposition that was cunning and intensive, persistent and powerful. If he succeeds in giving a new birth of freedom he most surely will receive the verdict of mankind."

HEMSTITCHING while you wait, 5c per yard on straight work; curtains, table cloths, sheets, pillow cases. Plume Co., 620 N. B'way.

7 MEN FREED IN PEABODY CASE

Five Released by Salem (Mass.) Court Under Indictment in Boston.

SALEM, Mass., July 15.—The Suffolk County Grand Jury, having assumed jurisdiction in the investigation of the death of Miss Margaret Ward of Peabody, whose body was found in an automobile here on July 5, after it had been brought from Boston, the local court today discharged the seven persons held as accessories.

Five of the men released—Charles R. O'Connell of Peabody, a lawyer; James O'Connell of Lyon, his brother; George A. Bardwell of Boston, Thomas J. Sexton of Salem and Dr. J. J. Shanahan of Peabody—are under indictment in Boston on various charges in connection with an operation which caused the woman's death and with the removal of her body.

PROHIBITIONISTS DOUBT IF FORD WILL TAKE NOMINATION

Straw Vote of Delegates Indicates There Will Be No Choice on First Ballot.

CHICAGO, July 15.—A straw vote of the delegates to the Prohibition national convention which will be held in St. Paul July 18 to 21, the tabulation of which was completed today at the offices of the National Committee here, indicates that there may be no choice on the first ballot.

Party leaders now believe it extremely doubtful if Henry Ford will consent to make the race if nominated. His wife and business associates are said to be opposed to his becoming a candidate.

The straw vote of the delegates which was taken by mail is said to be divided between six candidates, with three former Governors in the lead. They are J. Frank Hanly of Indiana; Eugene N. Foss of Massachusetts and William Sulzer of New York.

Keokuk and Burlington trips on Streckfus Steamers are proving very popular. Meals and entertainment fine. Folder gives full details.

BOULEVARD SYSTEM FOR PEKIN

American Firm Will Build Eighty Miles of Roads.

PEKIN, July 15.—An American firm has closed a contract with the Chinese Government to construct 80 miles of boulevard connecting Pekin with the Western Hills and the Marco Polo bridge, one of the most famous bridges on the Han River.

The new boulevard system will give Pekin a circular boulevard system and afford transportation to a large new suburban residence section in the foothills west of the Chinese capital.

ORPET FOUND NOT GUILTY OF KILLING MARION LAMBERT

Jury Out Five Hours and Reaches Verdict for Student on Third Ballot.

ONE FOR CONVICTION

Illinois Trial Lasted Nearly Two Months; More Than 1000 Veniremen Examined.

WAUKEGAN, Ill., July 15.—William Orpet, the university student charged with murdering Marion Lambert, a high school girl and his former sweetheart, was found not guilty by a jury in Judge Donnelly's court late today, after five hours' deliberation.

Three ballots were taken. The first two stood 11 to 1 for acquittal. Foreman O'Shea stated that by agreement of the jurors the name of the member who voted for conviction would not be made public.

Probably 50 persons were in the court room waiting for the verdict. Orpet was brought from his cell and Judge Donnelly came in from the court house lawn where he was chatting with the lawyers.

The defendant, as usual, was seated between his mother and Mrs. Edwin Taylor, his landlady at Madison, when the jury filed in.

Orpet Shakes Jurors' Hands.

A woman about 50 years old, dressed in black, who has attended every session of the court, made an inarticulate sound—something between a sob and a shriek. She never explained her interest in the case except to say that she was "a friend of humanity." Orpet was silent, but made his way to the jurors and shook their hands, one by one.

The defendant, his father and mother, his brother, Mrs. Taylor and intimate friends then went into the witness room, where their privacy was safeguarded by a bailiff. Half an hour later they emerged.

"We'll go home now, William," said Mrs. Orpet, and they left the courthouse by the back stairs.

The jurors were locked up at 2:50 o'clock this afternoon to consider a verdict.

They carried with them instructions from Judge Donnelly which James H Wilkerson and Ralph F. Potter, Orpet's counsel, considered highly favorable to the defendant, in their interpretation of reasonable doubt as applied to the series of baffling circumstances which constituted the principal part of the evidence. Five superfluous counts of the 10 in the indictment against the defendant were stricken out by the Court.

Orpet sighed in relief when the last word was spoken by Judge Donnelly.

The forenoon and 45 minutes of the afternoon session were occupied by Attorney David Joslyn in the final summing up for the State.

The rumpled bed at Madison, the alibi letetrs, the flight from Helm's woods and the defendant's alleged freaks of memory were pictured with a sinister sequence from which he said no conclusion other than guilt could be drawn.

"Never Mind the Experts."

"He got the cyanide of potassium in Madison and brought it with him to Lake Forest," said Joslyn. "He took it into Helm's woods with him and administered it to Marion Lambert in liquid form. Never mind the experts, gentlemen of the jury, use your common sense. Liquid alone could have made those circular spots on her cloak, and liquid alone could have reached her stomach. You can't swallow a dry powder, and you know it, especially when death from the fumes, as the chemists testified, comes so quickly as to preclude the act of swallowing."

While the exhibits were being collected on a table in court preparatory to being delivered to the jury, the lawyers, except Joslyn gathered about to watch. Frank Lambert, father of Marion, came to Joslyn's side and they talked earnestly. Joslyn appeared to be talking sympathetically to Lambert who was facing the jury, and from time to time patted his arm.

"I object to this scene as contrived to influence the sympathies of the jurors," said Attorney Potter, and Judge Donnelly ordered Lambert to return to his own seat. Joslyn joined the other lawyers. The jury was then led out and most of the spectators left the building.

Jury Foreman Elected.

James C. O'Shea, a music dealer of this city, was elected foreman of the jury. He has had previous experience as a juror.

Excerpts from Judge Donnelly's instructions follow:

"The jury should not go beyond the evidence to hunt up doubts nor must they entertain such doubts as are chimerical or conjectural.

"The Court instructs the jury that although the jury should be satisfied from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the deceased Marion Lambert died from a cyanide of potassium poisoning, still if the jury further finds from the evidence that she had the same opportunity for taking the poison herself, without the aid of the defendant, that the defendant had to give it to her and if it is possible from any reasonable manner to explain all the facts and circumstances proved on the trial consistently with the hypothesis that she did take the poison herself for the purpose of killing herself, then this is sufficient to raise a reasonable doubt and that the

YOUTH DROWNS IN MARQUETTE POOL; BODY UNIDENTIFIED

Discovered When Guards Drain Off Water After Finding Clothing in Locker.

When life-guards went through the lockers at the Marquette pool, Minnesota avenue and Osage street, at 9 o'clock last night they found the clothing of a young man in one of them. They started to drain the pool, and at 11:10 o'clock found the body of a youth, about 18 years old. Efforts at resuscitation failed and the body was sent to the city hospital, thence to the morgue.

The youth was about 5 feet 10 inches tall, and weighted 160 pounds. He had heavy brown hair. There was nothing in his suit to identify him. His outer clothes consisted of a blue serge suit, blue shirt, lavender socks, blue hose supports and black button shoes.

Up to a late hour this morning the police had not learned his identity.

Rodowe Abeken, Superintendent of Recreation in the park system, said that the boy must have gone into the water previous to 8:30 o'clock, as he did not remember anyone going in after that time.

1000 REJECTED KENTUCKIANS WEAR NIGHTGOWNS, BLANKETS

Uniforms Taken Back by Government, Men Have no Clothes for Trip Home.

LEXINGTON, Ky., July 15.—One thousand men rejected from membership in the Kentucky National Guard may have to go home clad in nightgowns or blankets. Government officials in rejecting them ordered that their uniforms and equipment be turned in to the mobilization officers immediately. For two days hundreds of men have been going about Fort Thomas clad only in pajamas, blankets or night shirts. National Guard officers, held personally responsible for all uniforms and equipment, refused to take chances by allowing the men to wear their uniforms home. The guard officers also face responsibility of getting the rejected men back home.

2625 SCREENED BUILDINGS TO BE ERECTED ALONG BORDER

They Will be Used by Troops as Kitchens and Dining Rooms and Will Cost $500,000

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., July 15.—A half-million dollars will be spent by the Quartermaster's department in the erection immediately of screened buildings to be used at kitchens and dining rooms for troops. Notification that the War Department had authorized the expenditure was received at departmental headquarters today. The buildings will be erected all along the border, the present plan providing for 2625.

Approximately 2000 Minnesota troops passed through San Antonia today on the way to border stations.

FIRE-FLY SALUTE FOR MIKADO

School Children Release 10,000 Bugs Before Imperial Palace.

TOKIO July 15—Foreigners witnessed an unusual and beautiful scene this month when 10,000 fireflies were released at night by school children before the imperial palace in salutation of the Emperor.

The children gathered the insects in one of the suburbs, inclosed them in tiny wooden cagees and marched to the palace. At a signal the luminous insects were set free, flying over the palace—a cloud of scintillating spots of fire. From the ancient palace rampart a court official acknowledged the tribute by waving a paper lantern bearing the imperial crest.

12 MEN HELD UP IN DOWNTOWN 'CLUB,' POLICE ARE TOLD

Three Armed Robbers Said to Have Obtained $800 in Cash and $600 in Jewelry.

SHOT FIRED IN PLACE

Tailor Says He Lost $822—Buzzers, Cards and Chips Found in the Rooms.

A report was made to the police late yesterday afternoon that three young men had entered the "Mutual Co-Operative Association," on the third floor of 203 North Seventh street, covered with revolvers the dozen men present and robbed them of $800 in cash and $600 worth of jewelry. A shot was said to have been fired at one of the men when he attempted to throw his pocketbook behind an air shaft.

The police were told of the robbery by Richard H. Meyer, a tailor of 604 Pine street, who says he is a member of the association. He said he was the heaviest loser, having been deprived of $822 in cash and jewelry. According to his story, the three young men, who were neatly dressed, entered the clubroom and asked to be admitted to membership, saying that they had been sent by a saloonkeeper at Garrison and Easton avenues.

They were given application blanks and signed them with the names C. O'Brien, Frank Ryley and E. Shay. Instead of handing in the appplications they handed out blue steel revolvers and ordered the 12 men in the clubroom to throw up their hands. They all obeyed and the robbers lined them up with their faces to the wall and while two kept revolvers pointed at them the third searched each one.

Meyer stays they took from him $622 in $100, $50 and $20 bills and also bills of smaller denomination and a diamond ring valued at $200. From Frank Vass, who gave his address as the club room, they took, Meyer says, a $300 diamond ring, a $35 watch and $4.50; from Joseph Campbell of 1804 Locust street, $125 and a gold watch and chain valued at $35, and from others small amounts.

Bullet Is Fired.

The search had not been finished when G. H. Riley attempted to throw his pocketbook behind the airshaft. The bullet that was fired at him struck the airshaft and dropped through it to the Rex barber shop on the first floor, striking the floor near Miss Blanch Simmons of 5209 Cote Brilliante avenue, a manicure girl.

Without waiting to search the rest of the men in the line, the robbers ran from the room. Afterwards the three application cards were found on a pool table in the place.

Joseph Solder, one of the men who was not searched, had $150 in his pocket.

The police found the doors of the clubroom fitted with buzzers, and there was a safety chain on the outer door. Scattered about were cards, dice and poker chips.

Members of the club say that it was recently organized and that they applied for incorporation June 15. They say there are no officers and that the members merely drop in for a game of pitch or pool.

The police, in view of evidences that there had been gambling in the clubroom, did not give full credence to the robbery story as reported and will make further investigation.

MRS. HUGHES TO ACCOMPANY HUSBAND ON WESTERN TOUR

Candidate Neverless Will Avoid Social Functions and Stop Only at Hotels.

BRIDGEHAMPTON, N. Y., July 15.—On his trip to the Pacific coast Charles Evans Hughes will be accompanied by Mrs. Hughes, who is taking the keenest interest in her husband's campaign for the presidency. On several occasions Hughes has explained that his wife is his "chief adviser."

It was made plain today that the presence of Mrs. Hughes on the trip will not alter the Republican nominee's plan to devote most of his time to speech making and eschew receptions and social affairs as much as possible. Mr. and Mrs. Hughes will stop only at hotels. Scores of invitations to become the guests of men of prominence have been refused with the accompanying explanation that perhaps later in the campaign, if Hughes covers the same territory, he will be glad to accept the offers of hospitality.

NEGRO SUMMER GARDEN OPENED ON CLAYTON ROAD

Fidelio C. Sharp, Whose Country Home Is Opposite, Asks That It Be Closed.

MUCH MUSIC AT NIGHT

Dance Floor and Kitchen Erected and Dodgers Tell of Joys Awaiting Guests.

Dodgers distributed yesterday calling attention to the joys of life to be experienced at "W. M. Scott's big colored country garden" led to the discovery by Fidelio C. Sharp that in his absence a resort for negroes had been established across the Clayton road from his handsome country home, west of the North and South road, St. Louis County.

Sharp called up Sheriff Bode and asked him to close the country garden. The Sheriff promised to investigate. Sharp will ask Prosecuting Attorney Ralph tomorrow to join with him in an injunction suit to close the place on the ground that it is a nuisance.

Disturbed by Nocturnal Music.

The country garden was opened July 4 on a 40-acre tract owned by a Mrs Crow of St. Louis, who is said to value it at $100,000. Sharp, the nearest neighbor, returned home a few days ago Nocturnal music from the opposite side of the road disturbed him, but he did not investigate until one of the country garden dodgers fell into his hands yesterday. This is what he read:

"Ha! Ha! Ha! Where are you headed for now? Out to W. M. Scott's big country garden, the coolest place in St. Louis County. Our place is a place of enjoyment. Everything good to eat. Barbecue meats of all kinds. Spring chicken like mother used to fry them. Good music, dancing pavilion and order. Everyone is welcome to come and bring your family. We must have good behavior. Every lady attending this garden July 15 will be given a souvenir. Joy riders and auto parties, take a ride out to the country garden. Without you visit this colored garden your summer fun will be a blank. Admission, 10 cents."

Dance Floor on Place.

A negress who refused to give her name was the only person at the colored country garden when a Post-Dispatch reporter went there yesterday evening. She said that a three-year lease had been obtained. There is a dance floor near the Clayton road, about which colored lanterns are suspended. In a booth nearby is a coal range for the cooking of meats. Back a little farther is a farm house. On a sign is the legend: "W. M. Scott's Stock Farm. Poultry, Eggs and Chickens."

Sharp does not believe that the owner knows what use is being made of her property. He says she has given him written authority to tear down any signs that are set up on her land. He will notify Scott to take down the stock farm sign and if it is not removed, Sharp says he will tear it down.

Sharp is a member of the Clayton Neighborhood Association, which has been active in opposing whatever members consider undesirable invasions along the Clayton road.

LABOR COUNCIL TAKES UP CASE OF PRISON ORCHESTRA

Will Add its Protest to Use of Organization When Union Musicians Might be Employed.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., July 15.—The Central Trades and Labor Council last night took formal action against the practice of Warden D. C. McClung of using the prison orchestra at private and public functions where union musicians could be employed. The Council decided to write to Gov. Major, Warden McClung and the State Board of Pardons and Paroles, indorsing a letter recently sent to Gov. Major and the Prison Board by the local Musicians' Federation, in which the use of the prison orchestra for such purposes was condemned as unfair to organized labor. It is claimed in the letter that Warden McClung used the prison orchestra in preference to a union orchestra at the Country Club dance, July 4, which was attended by Gov. Major and Mayor Thomas. It is also said that the orchestra was used at open-air concerts and picnics at a local park.

NO GUN SALUTE FOR GOVERNOR

Shortage of Powder Causes Abandonment of Courtesy in Iowa.

DES MOINES, Iowa July 15.—No seventeen gun salute was given when Governor Clark arrived at the Iowa mobilization camp this afternoon to review the troops. The reason was a shortage of ammunition. A proper salute was given when the Governor reviewed the troops before, but Gen. Allen said he did not have enough powder to repeat the courtesy.

The shortage of powder follows inability of the War Department to furnish the Iowa guards with munitions.

369 DEATHS FROM 1863 NEW YORK PARALYSIS CASES

27 Child Fatalities in 24 Hours Ending Yesterday Morning—Fewer New Victims.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Eighteen fewer infantile paralysis cases were reported today than on Friday. One hundred and forty-four new cases and 27 deaths was the total of the destructive malady for the 24 hours ending at 10 a. m. This brings the whole number of cases up to 1863. The deaths now number 369.

A marked falling off appeared in the number of new victims reported from Brooklyn, where the number dropped from 122 to 87, and a disturbing increase in Manhattan, where the number jumped from 14 to 30. Slight increases were reported in Queens and Richmond and a decrease of two in the Bronx. The total deaths for the day were four less than for the day before.

Those fighting the disease attached little importance to the decrease in figures, as they do not look for any immediate response to the many preventive measures being taken, although what is being done is looked upon as certain to show results eventually.

Two important additions were made to the fighting forces. One was a gift of $50,000 to the city from the Rockefeller Foundation, together with the announcement by Mayor Mitchell that Dr. A. H. Doty, former health officer of the port, would take control on Monday of a new bureau which is to assume charge of keeping track of persons who move from infected areas to new districts.

The second came from the Government in the person of Surgeon C. E. Banks of Milwaukee, who will take charge of a squad of 50 men to examine all children leaving New York for other states, issue health certificates to those who are entitled to them and notify health officers at the destinations of the prospective new arrivals.

T. R. DENIES THAT HE SAID HUGHES MIGHT BE 'GOLD BRICK'

Names New Jersey Progressive Chairman Hopkins, Author of Charge, for Ananias Club.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., July 15.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt tonight vigorously denied ever having expressed the opinion that Charles E. Hughes might "turn out to be another gold-brick," as charged by Progressive State Chairman J. A. H. Hopkins of New Jersey on Friday.

Hopkins asserted in his statement that during a conversation with the Colonel in the early part of the year, Roosevelt at that time refused to go on record in favor of the nomination of Hughes, adding, according to Hopkins, that he had "sold the party one gold brick and did not intend to run the risk of doing it again," and a little later made the remark that Hughes might eventually reveal himself as one. Hopkins also stated that he had sent the Colonel a letter to Oyster Bay, under date of July 11, recalling to his mind this alleged conversation and requesting a reply.

The Colonel was highly incensed tonight when he was shown the newspaper story containing Hopkins' remarks, and after reading the report carefully, immediately nominated and elected Chairman Hopkins to membership in the Ananias Club.

"I have never received any letter from this man Hopkins," he said angrily, "but his statements, if they have been correctly quoted, are false, absolutely false."

U. R. CARS INCREASE 3 PER CENT; PERSONS HAULED, 10 PER CENT

Last Quarter's Report Shows 61,206,942 Fares Transported in April, May and June.

With an increase of about 3 per cent in the number of cars, the United Railways Co. hauled an increase of 10 per cent in passengers in the quarter ending June 30, compared with the same relative period in 1915. In the three months up to July 1, the total of passengers transported on all the company's lines in the city was 61,206,942, of which 1,261,577 represent half-fares. This was an increase of 5,571,629 over the like quarter of 1915.

The average number of cars in service on week days in the period covered by the latest report was 1259 daily, against 1223 daily for the corresponding quarter in 1915. This was an increase of about 3 per cent. The average number of cars in operation on Saturdays during the last quarter reported was 1199, and the average on Sundays was 795. Last year the equivalent figures were 1157 and 788.

The car trips in the quarter just reported totaled 1,641,114, with an aggregate mileage of 10,035,347. In the same quarter of 1915 the trips were 1,535,366 and the mileage was 9,699,118.

30,187 IN MILWAUKEE PREPAREDNESS PARADE

100,000 Assembled Along Line of March—Saloons Closed Voluntarily and Business Generally Suspended.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 15.—The official figure on the number of persons who took part in today's preparedness parade was given out this evening, after the last section had passed a given point, as 30,187. The parade started at 2 o'clock and finished at 5:15. It is estimated that 100,000 people assembled along the line of march.

Threatening weather before the pageant and showers later lessened the number of marchers. Business generally was suspended and the saloons closed voluntarily for the first time in the history of the city.

$50,000 A YEAR MAN, 32, LEAPS 10 STORIES TO DEATH

Paul Smith, Salesmanager for Chalmers Automobile Co., Jumps From Hotel Window.

WAS ALSO A PHYSICIAN

Gave Up Medicine Because of Interest in Baseball—Had Put Through $6,000,000 Deal.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Paul Smith, vice president and general sales manager of the Chalmers Motor Co. of Detroit, leaped from the window of his room on the tenth floor of the Hotel Biltmore here today and was killed.

His physician, wife and friends attributed his act to a complete nervous and mental collapse following the successful completion of a business deal in this city said to have involved $6,000,000. The deal was for the transfer of the agency of the Chalmers company.

Smith, who was 32 years old, came to New York last Monday. He complained to friends that he was ill, asserting that he did not believe he ever would recover. He remarked that the strain of spending 23 nights a month on trains was too much. He sent a telegram yesterday to his wife urging her to join him here. She arrived this morning and when she had turned her back for a moment to arrange breakfast, which had been served in their rooms, Smith disappeared through the window.

Smith was born in Vermont. He was graduated from the University of Illinois and practiced medicine a short time. He once was a cowboy and worked later in the stockyards at Kansas City.

He started in the automobile industry as a factory hand in Detroit. He was connected with the Studebaker, Lozier, Goodyear and Metzger companies before going with the Chalmers concern two years ago.

He is said to have disposed of $22,000,000 worth of automobiles in one auction sale. He received a salary of $50,000 a year and had been called "the highest salaried and most underpaid" sales manager in the country.

His wife was Miss Adah L. Pitts of West Plains, Mo., whom he married in 1905. Smith was a baseball fan and always insisted that the reason he gave up medicine was that it left him too little time for baseball. He said he could not stand being called out of a game in the middle of an inning.

SUFFRAGISTS PLAN A LETTER BOMBARDMENT OF HUGHES

Congressional Union Leaders Charge Him With "Straddling" on the Votes Issue.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The leaders of the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage announced today that they would bombard candidate Hughes with letters and telegrams from women voters to see if they could bring him to their side of the fence. They charge him with "straddling" now.

"If Mr. Hughes desires the votes of the women in equal suffrage states," said a congressional union campaigner today, "he cannot carry water on both shoulders. He must be for us or against us. He is not frank with us."

If the plans of Miss Anne Martin of Nevada are carried out, Mr. Hughes will receive thousands of letters and telegrams within the next few days. An endless chain call for women volunteers for a quick and terrific bombardment has been sent out.

Of the total of 178 deaths, 13 were caused by pneumonia, 20 by Bright's disease; five by diphtheria, one by measles, and one by whooping cough. There were four suicides, three homicides and 10 accidental deaths.

FUMIGATION CAUSES FIRE CALL

Police Sergeant Sees Smoke and Turns in Alarm.

Firemen groped through a dense smoke and chemical fumes on the first floor of the Jack Daniels Distilling Co. at 117 South Broadway last night looking for a fire until the night watchman returned from a nearby barber shop, where he had been getting a haircut, and told them that the building was being fumigated.

A police sergeant passing the building saw the smoke and turned in an alarm.

President and Party on Cruise.

OLD POINT COMFORT, Va., July 15.—The naval yacht Mayflower, with the president, Mrs. Wilson and a party of relatives on a week-end trip from Washington, cruised today outside the Virginia Capes. The vessel did not come to Hampton Roads. The Mayflower anchored late last night in Tangier Sound, half way up Chesapeak bay, leaving early this morning.

BRITISH TAKE THREE MORE SECTORS IN THE GERMAN SECOND LINE

Third Line Penetrated at One Point and All Previous Gains Are Held.

NEW SUCCESSES ARE ON POZIERES-GUILEMONT LINE

LONDON, July 16, (Sunday)—The British forces have held all the ground gained in Friday's advance and taken two or three more small sectors of trenches in the German second line, which are regarded as important. At one point the German third line has been penetrated and a lodgment effected.

At their greatest advance the British are four miles beyond the German line, which they crossed 13 days ago. In all 10,000 prisoners and quantities of war material have fallen into British hands.

Yesterday's gains in the German second line are referred to as "important successes" in the official communication issued at midnight. The British captured the whole of Delville Wood and repulsed a strong counter attack, according to the statement.

The text reads:

"Heavy fighting continued all day in the Pozieres—Guillemont sector of the German second line, as a result of which further important successes have been gained by our troops.

"East of Longueval, despite the enemy's desperate resistance, we captured the whole of Delville Wood and repulsed a strong counter attack with severe losses to the enemy.

"North of Bazentin-in-le-Grand our troops penetrated the German third line at the Bois de Faureaux, in which we obtained lodgment. In this neighborhood a detachment of the enemy was successfully accounted for, by a squadron of dragoon guards—the first opportunity for mounted action afforded the cavalry since 1914.

Bazentin-Le-Grand Wood Taken.

"West of Bazentin-le-Grand we captured the whole wood of that name and repulsed two counter-attacks. Here, among other prisoners, we captured the commander of a Bavarian regiment with his whole staff.

"East of Ovillers a further advance has been made and our troops have fought their way to the outskirts of Pozieres.

"During the last 48 hours our aeroplanes have been much hampered by unfavorable weather. Throughout the whole of the fourteenth, the clouds were seldom at a higher altitude than 500 feet. Despite this drawback, much valuable work was done.

"In one of our bambing raids an enemy train was derailed and a coach overturned, while in the aerial combats in the last 24 hours we destroyed three fokkers, three biplanes and a double-engined aeroplane, and forced another fokker to land in a damaged condition. All our machines returned safely to our lines."

2000 Prisoners Taken.

An earlier statement issued by the War Office told of the Germans being forced back to their third line positions at one place, and of the capture of over 2000 prisoners.

The statement from the front, timed 12:50 p. m., follows:

"All continues to go well on the British front and at one point we forced the enemy back to his third system of defense, more than four miles to the rear of his original front trenches at Fricourt and Mabetz. (This advance is on a width of approximately two miles.)

"In the last 24 hours we have captured over 2000 prisoners, including a regimental commander of the Third Guards division, and the total number of prisoners taken by the British since the battle began now exceeds 10,000. Large quantities of war material also have fallen into our hands."

Artillery Fighting at Verdun.

The official communication issued by the French War Office in Paris tonight reads:

"On the right bank of the Meuse the bombardment was very violent on both sides in the sector of Fleury. There was no event of importance on the rest of the front."

Belgian communication:

"Last night the Germans attempted an attack against our advanced posts in the neighborhood of Oudstyvekenskerke. They were completely repulsed.

"Today our batteries of all calibers carried out in the region of Het Sas a destructive fire against German works. It was replied to feebly."

Cavalry Used for the First Time in 18 Months on West Front, by British

BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE, via London, July 15.—After the breach was made in the second German line yesterday, cavalry detachments, English and Indian, for the first time had the reward of their year's wait since trench warfare began. They went straight in the face of the Germans who were forming a new defense line between the strong points of Highwood and Delville Wood, which the British infantry was attacking.

It was 7:30 in the evening when they rode forth from the cover where they were waiting orders to cross the fields, after their patrols had felt the way, with clear going ahead and behind them the demolished trenches of the first and second lines and an area of shell holes, which made difficult their progress to their rendezvous. Infantrymen who witnessed the sight could hardly believe their eyes.

When some Germans with automatic rifles, which are virtually portable machine guns, blazed from a wheat field, the dragoon guards set their lances and charged, wheeled and rode back through them as might have been done in the Napoleonic war. Thus, for the first time in 18 months of continuous warfare on the Western front with its continuous bayonetting, bombing, gassing and shelling, an enemy was impaled from a horse. The surviving Germans who had not forgotten their drill, tried to receive the horsemen in their sweep back, with the bayonet.

At another point, as the cavalry swept across the wheat fields, the surprise of the Germans was as manifest as if some apparition had appeared.

The cavalry went ahead until they found the infantry had not yet taken Delville and Highwood and were signaled to fall back and dig in until relieved by the infantry. They brought back more than 30 prisoners—the survivors after their charges.

At one time, when a machine gun was troubling them, a British aviator in a monoplane flying at a height of 300 feet, circled four times as he poured the contents of his machine gun into the Germans.

One division, whose loss was only one man in the capture of a section of the second line on its front was not so happy as the calvarymen who at last had seen action.

GERMANS RETAKE POSITIONS IN THE RUSSIAN CENTER

BERLIN, via London, July 15.—Parts of positions in the Skorbowa region north of the Volhynian sector, which were taken from the Germans by the Rissians on July 3, have been recaptured by German troops under Prince Leopold, the War Office announced today. More than 1500 prisoners were taken.

The army headquarters statement on operations along the eastern front, says:

"Army group of Field Marshal von Hindenburg:

"Russian detachments which attempted to cross the Dvina, near Lennewaden, northeast of Friedrichstadt, were repulsed.

"Army group of Prince Leopold: In the region of Skrobowa, parts of positions on the first line of defense, which had been held by the enemy since his first attack on the morning of July 3, were recaptured as the result of our attacks. Eleven officers and more than 1500 men were taken prisoners.

"Army group of Gen von Linsingen: The situation is unchanged.

"Balkan front: An enemy detachment, which attacked a Bulgarian advance post southeast of Glevgeli, was repulsed. By the shelling of Gulemenli, northeast of Lake Dorian, seven Greek civilians, among whom were four children, were killed."

Austrian Report Tells of Repulsing Russians in Galicia.

An attempted Russian attack southwest of Delatyn, the statement adds, failed.

Petrograd Reports Repulse of Attacks in Center.

PETROGRAD, July 15.—The Germans made a determined effort yesterday to force back the Russians in the region of Baranovichi, where heavy fighting has been in progress for some time. Three times the Germans launched attacks in massed formation. The War Office announced today that these attacks had been broken down and that the Russians initiating a counter-attack, made further progress.

The Russians also announce that in the caucasus they have captured a fresh series of Turkish positions northwest of Erzerum and are 10 miles from Baiburt, which is 70 miles northwest of Erzerum.

SUBMARINES SINK BRITISH AUXILIARY, 3 PATROL BOATS

BERLIN, by wireless to Sayville, N. Y., July 15.—The Admiralty announced today that on July 11, German submarines sunk a British auxiliary cruiser and three patrol boats. The announcement follows:

"On July 11, a German submarine destroyed in the North Sea British auxiliary cruiser of about 5000 tons. On the same day German submarines off the British coast sank three British patrol boats. The crews were captured and one cannon was taken.

"An Austro-Hungarian submarine on the afternoon of July 10 sank an Italian destroyer of the Indomito type.

"One of our aero squadrons bombarded effectively military establishments and railroad stations at Paua."

The Indomito, laid down in 1912, was 293 feet long, displaced 680 tons and was armed with one 4.7-inch gun, four 12-inch pounders and two torpedo tubes.

Sweden Protests to Russia Against Capture of German Ships.

LONDON, July 15.—The Swedish Minister at Petrograd has been instructed to protest to the Russian Government against the capture of the German steamers Worms and Lissabon, it has been announced officially in Stockholm, says a dispatch to the Post from that city. The protest is made on the ground that the steamers were captured in Swedish waters.

A report was received in Stockholm July 11 from Skelleftea, a small seaport in Sweden on the Gulf of Bothnia, that Russian torpedo boats had captured the German steamers Worms and Lissabon. The steamers were taken to Finland, as also were the Captain and 24 members of the crew of the Worms, all of whom were Swedes. For the first time this summer German submarines have appeared in the Aland sea, according to a Stockholm dispatch to the Daily Telegraph. The heavy traffic between Sweden and Finland in these waters is becoming increasingly precarious.

Vienna Tells of Repulsing Italians Ten Times at Same Place.

BERLIN, by wireless to Sayville, July 15.—The repulse of heavy attacks by Italians on the Austrian front in the Trentino, between the Brenta and the Adige, is announced in the Vienna headquarters report of July 14.

The statement says:

"Intense activity continues between the Brenta and the Adige. Strong Italian forces repeatedly attacked between Cimadieci and Monte Rasta. The enemy 10 times attacked northeast of Monte Rasta, being in each case repulsed by our troops, who maintained all their positions, the enemy sustaining the heaviest losses."

Revolting Arabs Have Wiped Out All Turkish Resistance in Mecca.

LONDON, July 15.—The revolt against Turkish rule in Arabia is making progress, having resulted in the complete wiping out of all traces of Turkish resistance at Mecca, according to a Reuter dispatch from Cairo today.

After the fall of Mecca on June 13, says the dispatch, certain elements of the garrison continued their resistance in forts near the city. In order to avoid bloodshed the Grand Sheriff, in command of the Arabian forces, suspended attacks. The forts have now surrendered, according to today's advices.

Since the proclamation of Arabian independence, the total captures from the Turks include 10 field guns, 10 mountain guns, 15 machine guns, 100 officers, 2500 soldiers and 150 civil functionaries.

WE MUST LEARN TO THINK INTERNATIONALLY, SAYS DR. NICHOLAS M. BUTLER

President of Columbia University Declares New World Order Was Born With War—American's Part in Future.

By DR. NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER.

President of Columbia University.

THE old world order changed when the sun set on Friday, July 31, 1914. The old international order passed away as suddenly, as unexpectedly and as completely as if it had been wiped out by a gigantic flood, by a great tempest, or by a volcanic eruption. The old world order died with the setting of that day's sun and a new world order is born with birth pangs so terrible that it seems almost incredible that life could come out of such fearful suffering and such overwhelming sorrow.

What has America to do with it all?

How do these matters affect us, secure in our protection across 3000 miles of sea, living under other political institutions and under the dominance of other political ideas and with different economic and social interests?

Ask the cotton grower in the South. Ask the copper miner in the far Soutnwest. Ask the lumberman on Puget Sound. Ask the banker in Philadelphia, in New York, in Boston or in Chicago. Ask any one of these whether the European war affects him and how, and get his answer. Ask the student of civil and political liberty. Ask the trained liberal who believes in human rights, in the free development of small nations, in the sanctity of international obligations, and in the supremacy of international law. Ask any one of these whether he knows that there is a war on the other side of the world and whether it affects him and his interests and get his answer.

Our Brother's Keeper.

In this new outlook that confronts us we are not called upon, as I see it, to depart in principle or in practice from sound American policy, but we are called upon, I think, to consider whether, as the keeper of the conscience of democracy, as the most powerful exponent of political and civil liberty on the globe, we are not in some sense our brother's keeper, and whether we have not some political and moral contribution to make to a stricken and distracted and overturned world.

I would not have the people of these United States forget the injunction of Washington. I would not have them depart from the path of established policy that has been trodden so long and on the whole so wisely. I would not have them make an alliance, entangling or otherwise, with any single nation or any group of nations on the globe. But I would have them enter into such relations of intimacy and influence with every nation that the spirit and convictions which animate and permeate the American people might be made a contribution to the world's civilization when this war ends.

I would endeavor to show to Europe how clear across the sea we have solved and are solving some problems that are in kind their problems. I would try to show to Europe that whatever may be the difficulties and the conflicts which grow out of differences of race and of creed and of language, those difficulties are only increased by political repression, while they are decreased by an extension of civil and political liberty. I would try to show that, on the whole, and despite the dangers and difficulties and the many and obvious embarrassments which accompany it, a national policy of freedom, of hospitality and of equal opportunity solves more problems than it leaves unsolved, and that, on the whole, it solves more political problems than any other alternative policy that has yet been presented for the government of men.

I would not interfere for a moment with the internal concerns of any European nation or with their just ambitions, their alliances and their rivalries, but at a time like this I would not throw away the lesson of a 125 years of life and government under the Constitution of the United States. I would make a world figure of Washington. I would make world figures of Hamilton and Jefferson, of Marshall and Webster. I would make a world figure of Abraham Lincoln. I would make their names, their faces, their public acts and the great tendencies and institutions that they organized and represented, the property of the whole civilized world for the benefit of all mankind. For this or for any such policy of international influence this nation must prepare.

Object of Preparedness.

There is much talk among us of preparedness and justly enough; for while we fix our eyes on the stars we must keep our feet on the firm earth. We must deal not with facts as we would like them to be, but with facts as they are. But there is an aspect of this important question that has hardly been touched, and I have not yet seem it even adverted to by any spokesman of the present administration.

That question is this: What is to be the object of your preparedness? What are to be the policies that you are going to teach, to defend and to extend over the earth? What are to be the ideals that you are going to hold up before yourselves and then before the other nations of the earth?

Armies and navies are not ends; they are means. But means to what end? For what are we going to prepare?

Are we going to prepare to make this nation first a model nation home and then a model nation abroad? If we are going to do this then we have a policy. If we are not going to do this then we have no policy but only a proposal for expenditure.

Our American ideals are not vague or uncertain. They have been stated for us in language that the whole world can read, in words that will remain forever familiar where the history of freedom is read and studied. They have been written for us particularly in four great historic documents. You will find them in the opening paragraphs of the Declaration of Independence. You will find them in Washington's farewel laddress to the American people. You will find them put with all terseness of classic literature in the immortal address of Abraham Lincoln on the battlefield of Gettysburg. Those great documents have stated for us the aims, the ideals and the purposes of this Government, as well as the aims, the ideals and the purposes of the people in founding and in maintaining this Government. It is for a fuller comprehension of those aims, those ideals and those purposes, for a more complete carrying out of them at home, and for a more effective teaching of them abroad, that we must prepare.

Thinking Internationally.

When Mr. Joseph Chamberlain returned to England after his famous trip to South Africa, he told the English people that the time had come when they must learn to think imperially. So it may now be said that the time has come when the American people must learn to think internationally. We must learn to think in terms of our relations with the whole world, and we must learn to think of other peoples than ourselves with such sympathy, with such kindliness and with such understanding as will enable us to appreciate the point of view, the opinions and the institutions of those whose experiences have been different from our own.

I like to think that the hand of fate has brought to us out of this terrible war a new and unexpected call to achievement; first at home in putting our own house in order, and next abroad in teaching the peoples of the world a lesson that the founders and the fathers have taught us.

We cannot depend upon the heightened temperature of war fever to keep us warm forever. There will come a time when our business temperature will fall to normal or below unless there be nutriment upon which to keep our body-politic warm and in good health.

We have got to face under these new conditions the world-old problem of how to provide justly for equal opportunity, and how to provide an economic basis for individual existence in order that men may be able to live at all.

It is hardly worth while to preach ideals of government to a starving man. We must provide, first wisely, justly and securely for our internal economic organization, in order that we may be able to do these new international deeds of which I speak. In other words, while our whole problem, national and international, is bound up together, it becomes immensely larger and immensely more important than it has ever been before, because we have now discovered these innumerable points of contact with other nations and we see the meaning and significance on one side of the world of some public act or economic policy that has its origin on the other. This is all a part of the task that I call learning to think internationally. It will affect our domestic problems and our domestic policies, as well as our foreign problems and our foreign policies.

Call for Leadership.

Unless I mistake the signs of the times, this nation is crying out for leadership. It is crying out for a voice that will give expression to its political conviction and to its moral purpose in tones that every American will understand. Unless I mistake the signs of the times, the American people would like a leadership whose ear is not continually fastened to the ground. We wish, we need, we long for a determined, clear and sympathetic voice that will do for our day and generation what Abraham Lincoln did for his. A voice that will look down into the hearts of the plain people, that will know the conditions that influence their lives, that will understand the motives that guide their action, that will sympathize with their ambition, with their difficulties and with their failures, and that will call them up to the high places of the earth as did those voices that called our fathers up to their great achievement. Give us leadership. Give us a mind to seek, a heart to feel and a voice to proclaim what the American people of this day and this generation aspire to do at home and abroad.

Strikes East St. Louis Street Head First, Neck Being Broken and Skull Fractured.

William J. Berner, 47 years old, an electrician, of 715 State street, East St. Louis, Ill., was thrown from a westbound Belleville car when it rounded a curve at 5000 State street, at 10 o'clock last night, and was killed.

Berner was riding on the rear platform of the car and hit the ground head first. His neck was broken and his skull fractured. He was married and had several children.

M'ADOO ARRANGES CONFERENCE TO PLAN FIGHT ON SHARKS

WASHINGTON, July 15. — Secretary McAdoo today arranged a conference for early next week between the coast guard, life savers along the New Jersey coast and officials and citizens of coast resorts at which sharks have recently appeared.

The meeting probably will be held in Asbury Park, and will be for the purpose of determining some means of combating the menace.

MEXICAN ARMY OFFICER SAYS NEW REGIME IS PLANNED

El Paso Hears of Move to Eliminate Carranza, Possibly Obregon, in Favor of De la Barra.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

EL PASO, Tex., July 15.—An entirely new movement for the pacification of Mexico through the elimination of Gen. Carranza and possibly of Gen. Obregon also, in favor of Francisco de la Barra is reported here as about ready to be launched. It involves practically all the divisional commanders of the northern part of the republic, according to a Carranza paymaster under the command of Gen. Jacinto B. Trevino, commander of the Division of the Northeast. The paymaster, a Colonel, arrived at the border today.

The principals named in the new movement include Gen. Trevino, Gen. Francisco Murguia, commanding in Tamaulipas; Gen. Nafarrate at Tampico, Gen. Gonzales at Juarez, Gen. Herrera at Parral and Gen. P. Elias Calles of Sonora.

Alleged Scheme of Chiefs.

The paymaster called attention to the fact that Gen. Corranza has sought to enforce, by decrees, certain so-called reforms as a preliminary to a revision of the Constitution and the calling of a national election, and added, "It is the idea of the northern army chiefs that, since the masses have so lost confidence in the Carranza regime that they will no longer accept the Carranza currency issues except under compulsion, and are turning to Villa in their dissatisfaction, the proper course is to expel the present heads of the Government and immediately call a national election. At this election the people would choose their own candidate for President and Vice President and elect members of Congress."

As a presidential candidate the chiefs would, according to the paymaster, propose Francisco de la Barra, who was executive ad interim, with presidential powers, between the downfall of President Porfirio Diaz and the accession of President Francisco Madero.

Time of Revolt Indefinite.

At just what time the revolution was planned to break out the paymaster said neither he nor anyone else, unless the actual heads knew, but that it would in all likelihood develop while the bulk of the Mexican armies sent to the border in the expectation of war with the United States remained in the North under their control. There was no suspicion so far, he stated, of any inclusion of Farncisco Villa in the new alignment.

Another Mexican officer, also at the border today from Chihuahua City, said it was currently reported at Chihuahua capital that the allegiance of Gen. Trevino to Gen. Carranza was not as firm as it might be and that hints of trouble were heard on every hand. Thus far, however, there has been no overt act or word to confirm the rumors, he said.

Grand Jury Overlooks Prisoners.

VAN BUREN, Ark., July 15.—The regular grand jury overlooked two brothers, in jail on the charge of burglary and grand larceny, and Judge James Cochran had to empanel a special grand jury to consider their case. They were indicted.

jury should render a verdict of not guilty.

"Nothing short of proof so clear and convincing as to exclude every reasonable hypothesis of his innocence will justify a conviction and without such proof the jury must find the defendant not guilty.

"A mere probability is not sufficient to warrant a conviction. To warrant a conviction the defendant must be proven guilty so clearly that there is no reasonable theory that he can be innocent when all the evidence has been considered.

"When the evidence fails to show any motive to commit the crime charged to the accused this is a circumstance in favor of his innocence.

"Unless you find beyond all reasonable doubt in considering the evidence that the defendant had cyanide of potassium in his possession just prior to the death of Marion Lambert, then you should find the defendant not guilty.

"When the guilt of a defendant can be established, if at all, only by a proof of series of facts necessarily dependent upon each other, so that a reasonable doubt as to anyone of the facts would prevent a moral certainty of the defendant's crime, in such case it is incumbent on the prosecution to prove beyond a reasonable doubt each and every one of such facts, and where the proof fails as to these facts, so that a reasonable doubt intervenes, then the entire chain of evidence gives way and the law does not regard the charge proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

"Flight, though a circumstance to be weighed against the defendant, is not of a conclusive character and it may not be evidence of guilt if it appears that there was any other motive for flight other than a sense of guilt.

"If there are two theories, one for guilty and one for innocence, then adopt the innocent theory and acquit."

Trial Took Two Months.

The case of Marion Lambert and William H. Orpet in the course of its development, became one of the most perplexing in the annals of criminal history. Trial of the case, including selection of a jury, occupied the better part of two months. More than a thousand veniremen were examined before a jury, said by counsel upon its selection, to be above the average in intelligence and character, was chosen.

Last summer, young Orpet, then a pallid, slender youth of 19, of sharply regular features, somewhat vain of his college opportunities and undisciplined as to character, returned from the University of Wisconsin at Madison for a vacation at home. He fell in love with Marion, according to his letters. She had completed her junior year at the Deerfield High School and was then 17 and known for her gaiety and laughter.

When Orpet returned to college in the fall of 1915 frequent letters were exchanged. Orpet destroyed hers; she saved his and they remained after her death to speak of the great fear of exposure that came upon her. Orpet, in testifying, said that he was certain that these fears were groundless. Once he mailed her a bottle of molasses and water "to ease her mind," and he brought a similar compound with him for the same purpose when he entered Helm's woods, near Lake Forest, with her on the morning of Wednesday, Feb. 9, last.

His Explanation of Trip.

Orpet testified that he made the trip to allay her fears and to explain a story which had reached Marion that he was engaged to Celestia Youker, but the elaborate efforts which he made to keep the trip a secret, and his subsequent conflicting statements of it to officers developed into the most damaging evidence against him.

On Feb. 8, Orpet, at Madison, left three letters, post-dated Feb. 9, with his friend, Otto Peterson, to be mailed on the latter date. One was to his mother, one to Marion, and the third to Marion's friend, Josephine Davis. They were worded to make it appear that the writer was in Madison on Feb. 9, the day he kept his tryst in the woods with Marion, and she came to her death.

Orpet explained on the stand that the alibi letters, as they came to be known, were written so that if by accident he were seen at Lake Forest and word of the fact reached Marion's parents, who objected to him, or his own parents, who expected him to remain faithful to college duties at Madison, they would accept the letters as conclusive evidence to the contrary. The letter to Josephine was to corroborate that to Marion. Josephine testified that she never received it.

He Goes to Lake Forest.

On the afternoon of the eighth, in a dark overcoat which he said he had borrowed to wear with a dress suit to a party which he expected to attend on the twelfth, carrying the bottle of molasses and water in his pocket, and leaving behind him the alibi letters and a bed rumpled to deceive his landlady, the student proceeded to Lake Forest. Arriving there, he arranged by telephone to meet Marion on her way to school the next morning, walked about for a while to make certain that his parents had retired and entered the McCormick garage, where he spent the night on a cot.

In the morning he and Marion met and walked through the snow into the woods. Orpet testified that there was little conversation, and he could recollect only the purport of it. He offered her the "medicine," and she refused it. He started to leave, but she called him back and asked if he was going to write to her any more. He said there seemed to be no use of it, and started away again.

"Something made me look around—I don't know what—and I saw Marion lying in the snow," related the defendant on the stand. "I returned, kneeled over her for maybe a minute. I noticed the moist powder in the lines of her hand. Her eyes were glazed. Then a kind of fog came on my brain and I don't remember much after that except that on reaching the road I threw away the 'medicine' and made my way on foot to Highland Park, caught a train, and that evening arrived back at Madison." Marion's body was found the next morning.

WOMAN SUING OCULIST FOR BREACH OF PROMISE

MISS GENEVIEVE HESSE.

WANTS $25,000 FROM OCULIST FOR ALLEGED BROKEN PROMISE

Woman Sues Married Man Who, She Says, Courted Her for More Than a Year.

Miss Genevieve Hesse of 6456 Manchester road filed suit in the Circuit Court yesterday against Dr. Gustave Moritz of 5037 Cabanne avenue, an oculist at 609 North Broadway, for $25,000 for alleged breach of promise.

Miss Hesse, in her petition, alleges that Dr. Moritz, posing as a single man, courted her for more than a year and promised to marry her, naming Jan. 5, 1915, and again June 18, 1916, as the wedding date. She says he visited her at her home, took her out to visit friends, introduced her as his fiancee and took her to places of amusement. She says she learned in May, 1916, that he had a wife.

The plaintiff was until recently forewoman in a shirt factory. She says she was discharged because of the annoyance caused by Dr. Moritz calling her on the telephone.

Dr. Moritz, who lives with his wife and daughter, when seen by a Post-Dispatch reporter, denied the allegations. He said he once told Miss Hesse that if he was ever free he would marry her. She knew, he says, that he was married and knew that at one time he and his wife lived apart for ten or twelve days.

Miss Hesse is 24 years old. She became acquainted with Dr. Moritz when she went to him to have her eyes treated, about two years ago.

CORRESPONDENT FINDS ST. LOUIS GUNNERS ARE WELL FED AND PROTECTED

Two Doctors Guard A Battery's Health and Menus and Cooking Seem to Visitor to Laredo Camp to Be Satisfactory.

By Claire Kennamore.

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LAREDO, Tex., July 15.—The private of A Battery who wrote the letter printed in the Post-Dispatch today in the "Letters to the People" column, protesting against quantity of food and lack of medical attention, must be a young man of dainty appetite. If the battery always feeds as well as it did today, there can be no well-established complaint.

As to medical attention, I would expect a complaint from most any other organization than from this, since Capt. Frank Rumbold, the commander, is a doctor and Capt. L. T. Pim, the surgeon, has been with A Battery for more than 20 years. Neither of these officers seems of the class which would neglect a needy man, but I would expect neither of them to be lenient with a slacker.

In investigating reports of suffering among the men, I did not go to the officers, but to the enlisted men. However, what I learned in essence follows. The 155 men of A Battery are fed from one mess, presided over by Sergt. Ira C. Money, who in times of peace is an adjuster for a credit clearing house. He is a Spanish War veteran and seems a very competent man for such a place. The head cook is Frank E. Hillegas, who before the Spanish-American War served with Gomez in Cuba and who is an electrician in St. Louis. These men know their business as well as mess Sergeants and cooks of the regulars and their equipment is superior to many messes I have seen with the regulars.

For breakfast there is served mush made of corn meal or oat meal and corn syrup, stewed prunes with a syrup enriched with corn syrup, coffee, light bread and bacon or beef. The following foods are served at dinner and supper, alternating and mixing them so as to give variety: Beef steak or "slum" ("slum" is a rich, thick stew made of beef, tomatoes, potatoes and sometimes macaroni or similar paste); rice, bean soup and baked beans, stewed apricots or apples, canned salmon, stewed tomatoes, potatoes, mashed or German fried, iced tea or coffee, light bread.

Good as Regulars.

Now that is a line of food on which a man may grow fat, or on which he can do a lot of work, or with which he can cure dyspepsia, but it is not a menu to tempt an epicure. After investigation of army rations in nearly all camps from coast to coast and in Mexico, investigations made with knife and fork, I am in a position to say that A Battery's "grub" is quite as good as that served to regulars anywhere on the border.

Men coming out of civilian pursuits into the field, living in the open and doing the hard work on the drill ground and in camp that these men are doing, develop marvelous appetites. When moved into a strange land, with suspicious water and questionable foods, these appetites become menaces to the health. Capt. Pim and Capt. Rumbold differ as to how much the men should be allowed to eat. Capt. Rumbold believes that they will not develop internal disorders, however much they eat, if it is wholesome food, if they sleep with their stomachs covered up. Capt. Pim believes they should not be allowed to take on overloads of food until they become hardened and acclimated. On the days when the "shots" of typhoid toxin are administered he cuts down the food, which is the custom universally followed in the army. After these injections the men have slight fever and are a bit light-headed. On other days Capt. Rumbold prevails and the men eat without restraint.

After dinner today a squad of about a dozen Mexican children gathered near the mess and carried away the remnants of the meal. There was probably enough for a meal for a dozen healthy men.

None of the used foods are kept over. All stuff not eaten or given away goes into the incinerator, as there is no arrangement for keeping it. Hash in this mess is made from beef newly cut from the quarter and chicken patties, if they ever have them, will come from new chickens.

Surface Water Bad.

Surface water about Laredo has an evil name, and Dr. Pim's guards against it are effective to the point of fastidiousness. All water used for drinking or cooking is boiled and hydrant water is forbidden for washing mess kits or cooking utensils.

It is difficult for men to believe that any man needing medical attention has been unable to get it with this outfit. Frankly, I believe that they are "babied" in a way. A Battery is an old, firmly established unit, and Capt. Rumbold, like Caesar and Miles Standish, knows each of his men by name. In his tent were the Captain, First Lieutenant John J. Lonergan, Chaplain of the First Missouri, and myself. The Captain was discussing arrangements to permit such of his men as wished to to attend mass. The Captain was talking in a mild voice, when he looked out of the tent and roared in a deep military tone: "Hey, blank,"

"Yes, sir."

"Where's your hat?"

"In my tent, sir."

"Well, you get it on and don't you come out again without it, you hear?"

Then resuming the former manner, he said:

"You have to watch them like children. They don't know about the sun."

After I had watched Capt. Pim superintend the rolling down of a man's sleeves to the elbow he told me that he has had but two cases of sunburn where blisters have arisen. I doubt if a doctor in the regulars would devote time to treating plain sunburn blisters.

One night soon after the battery reached here there came a real rain, which flooded the tents, wet the bedding and made everybody generally miserable. This is known as the "night of the flood."

The camp retreated into a large frame building nearby. The next day Dr. Pim saw every man in camp and sent five of them to the hospital on suspicion. All were out the next day. Sick call is at 7 each morning and at that time any man who wishes to can see the doctor. An infirmary is also maintained, according to regulations, where the simple and accepted remedies can be obtained at any time. The surgeon is also available at any hour of the day or night for emergency cases.

I have talked today with 20 enlisted men of A Battery, and it is true that some of them are very dissatisfied. They do not like the camp site, which is very bad, nor the climate, nor the accommodations. Some persons have an almost fanatical repugnance for cenetipedes, tarantulas, scorpions and rattlesnakes. A Battery now has a centipede and a scorpion preserved in alcohol, both fine specimens. One was found in a bed and the other in a tent. A lively imagination can populate a tent with all sorts of monsters, and some of the boys are not sleeping well. This insomnia will pass away as the education of these men progresses, but I doubt if some of them ever reach the point where they can sleep calmly on the ground, the possible bed-fellow of an acrimonious rattlesnake.

Their officers point out to the enlisted men that these things are the fortunes of war. It is not the fault of equipment, regulations or commissary. As soldiers, they answered the call and as soldiers 90 per cent of them are meeting the difficulties. When they joined the battery they could hardly have expected to meet the enemy in the gloomy but comfortable old pile on Grand avenue.

So far as I am concerned, the army bed roll of a blanket and tarpaulin never was sufficient to make me quite happy at night on the hard ground, but soldiers are supposed to be content with it, and I have heard no regular complain.

No Finger Bowls.

More blankets are not needed here for warmth, but to make the beds better. The seasoned soldier does not want a soft bed, because he has to carry it, and he chooses the light bed.

There is an axiom that the only right a private has left is to grumble and complain. I incline to the belief that some of the men are exercising that right without due cause. Their lot, in point of food, comfort, care and protection, is better than that of the 15,000 men with Pershing in Mexico, who do not kick.

These men are now soldiers of the United States, standing guard in an evil land. Two miles away from their camp is the camp of the enemy they may be called on to fight. Their guns, parked outside the tent doors, can drop shells in a most populous Mexican city. They may be called on in an hour to protect Americans against attack. Strawberry shortcake and finger bowls do not go with this job.

As in nearly all camps of the regular army away from posts, food for the officers and men comes out of the same pot. They mess in different places on food prepared by one cook over one fire. In this instance, the fire is natural gas, and the cook proudly contends that his is the first camp kitchen in the field using natural gas in the entire history of the United States army.

Corporal Thomas J. Christman was today made Sergeant, attached to section five of the battery.

Lloyd Wait, private, was made Corporal and attached, as acting Sergeant, to section seven.

Letter Complaining of Food and Equipment in A Battery.

Following is the letter from a private in A Battery received by the Post-Dispatch and published yesterday:

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Just a word from a private of Battery A. We see by the St. Louis Globe-Democrat that we are getting plenty to eat. Now we boys are in a position to state facts. And we would like to know just who is getting enough to eat. Surely, not Battery A. Now take July 11, for instance: For supper we had one small spoonful of rice and a very small portion of syrup, no coffee. Now that is just one meal out of many. Some are worse; some are very little better. Very few have full equipment, and we are compelled to sleep on the ground with just a blanket, and for some time the most of us had no blanket at all. Quite a few of the boys have been sick and have not had proper attention. Ninety per cent of the boys are ready to quit if they had a chance. I, myself, am ready to leave, and have talked to a great many and they all talk the same. They are disgusted, as I, myself, am. It could hardly be worse. Now I don't know if this will be printed or not, but have shown this to most of the boys and they agree it is very mild. So we sure hope this will appear so the people of St. Louis will know just what we are putting up with. It is sure hell, if there is one on earth.

A PRIVATE OF BATTERY A., N. G., MO., U. S. A. Laredo, Tex., July 12.

2000 MORE MEN ARE NEEDED BY MISSOURI GUARD

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LAREDO, Tex., July 15.—The Missouri militia needs about 2000 men to bring it up to war strength, and how they are to be obtained is a problem which is worrying Brigadier-General Clark and his staff.

Orders from Washington to recruit up to war strength were accompanied by further instructions to have this work done by officers and noncommissioned officers of the organization who were not in the field. Since all Missouri officers and the full force of the men [illegible] here, there is no one left at home to do the recruiting.

According to officers here, Adjutant-General O'Meara has retained just sufficient men to run the office.

It is believed that strangers or inexperienced men going into the State to recruit would be unable to get 50 men for each regiment, when each regiment needs 500 or more to bring it up to standard.

Gen. Clark believed that the best method would be to send three noncommissioned officers and three privates of each regiment back to their respective territories to do the recruiting. Coming from the field, they would be much more attractive to the prospective recruit than the man who had stayed at home, and officers of the National Guard do not believe there will be much trouble in getting the requisite men.

There are plenty of officers and men here who will be willing to accept the detail to go home and recruit.

More Militiamen From Central District Start for Border.

CHICAGO, July 15.—Militiamen from several states in the central district started for the border today or began entraining, the first movement from this district in some time.

The Second Regiment of Minnesota departed in the afternoon.

South Dakota's only regiment of national guard was ordered to entrain at Redfield.

The Eighth Ohio Regiment, the first Ohio troops to go to the border, is expected to entrain within the next 24 hours.

The Thirty-second Michigan Regiment entrained today. The regiment is believed to be en route for El Paso.

Wilson May Ask Taft to Serve on Mexican Dispute Commission.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—According to prominent administration officials here, President Wilson probably will ask former President Taft to serve as chairman of the American Commission which will be apointed to co-operate with a Mexican commission for the settlement of the country's difficulties with Gen. Carranza.

Before leaving Washington, according to these officials, the president also determined to ask Judge Victor J. Dowling of New York, to serve on the commission with Mr. Taft.

Oklahoma National Guard Ordered to Mexican Border.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., July [illegible]—Orders for the Oklahoma National Guard to proceed to the Mexican border as soon as possible were received here tonight from the War Department. The destination of the Oklahoma contingent was not announced. It is expected that the first train will leave Fort Sill, where the troops mobilized, late tomorrow.

MISSOURIANS ON PROVOST DUTY

LAREDO, Tex., July 15.—Missouri militia tonight are doing the provost duty of the town. Besides this work [illegible] of the First Regiment patrol the segregated district and details from the Second guard the water works and [illegible] watch and guard at the Indian ford. The ford in other days was the [illegible] place for revolutionists and smugglers. Gen. Mann, commandant here, said today that the Missouri militia was the first to have the provost duties intrusted to it.

COBBLER TO SHARE IN FORTUNE LEFT TO HETTY GREEN

Michigan Man One of the Heirs to $3,000,000 Estate Bequeathed in 1863.

CHARLOTTE, Mich., July 15.—One of the heirs to the estate that was in charge of the late Hetty Green is Horace A. Merrill, a cobbler. In 1863 the estate was worth $3,000,000. By the death of the "richest woman in the world" the estate will be divided among heirs, how many no one knows. Also, what the estate is worth now no one knows, but Horace Merrill, now 68 years old, making a bare living here, knows he is an heir and that in due time he will receive his share, and that presumably it will be sufficient to care for him in his old age. He lives in a shack back of Fred Murray's shoe store, where he is employed as a cobbler. Letters which he produced from an old trunk in the shack apparently substantiate his claim that he is a bona fide heir.

Sylvia Ann Howland died in England in 1863. She was an aunt of Hetty Green and the Howland will provided that her estate, then worth $3,000,000, was to revert to heirs after the death of Mrs. Green, who was to receive the interest during her life.

Merrill is an heir from the fact that his mother's father was a Howland. Merrill's mother died before the Howland will was made and Merrill, a brother and sister who reside in New York were named among the heirs at the time the Howland will was made.

A daughter, Georgia Puffer, wife of a farmer living near Battle Creek, who has 13 children, is the only relative the old man has in this section of the country. He said that with the aid of the money he expects to get he will take life easy and help those who have been his friends in the past.

"There were 53 Howland heirs in [illegible], but how many there are now I do not know," Merrill said. "My brother has no children and I suppose that in the event of his death my sister and myself will receive his share of the estate. Last February I received a letter from a man in Boston asking me about my heirs and my relatives and that letter told me that some day I would receive part of the estate.

"However, that was no news to me, as I had known about it for more than [illegible] years. I have been a cobbler for [illegible] years and have had my trials and tribulations, yet I always felt I could help myself until perhaps the last year, which has been a hard one on me."

ALDERMEN ARE TO ASK GAS COMPANY TO PRODUCE BOOKS

Committee Desires to Ascertain Concern's Profits Under New Schedule.

THREE INQUIRIES BEGUN

Disapproval of "Gentlemen's Agreement" Between Mayor and Company Grows.

Disapproval expressed when Mayor Kiel entered into a "gentlemen's agreement" with the Laclede Gas Light Co. for a change in the standard of gas furnished in St. Louis, has increased in volume and vigor since the disclosure that the corporation received permission to establish a monthly minimum charge of 50 cents. The rates under the new schedule will be 75 cents a 1000 cubic feet for the first 7800 feet, and 55 cents a 1000 for each additional thousand up to 14,600 feet. Beyond that figure the price will be 45 cents a 1000.

Two committees of the Board of Aldermen and at least one citizens' organization have begun an investigation of the "gentlemen's agreement," which they contend the Mayor and other executive officials were without authority to make. After a conference with Mayor Kiel yesterday noon, Alderman Edward Scholl, chairman of a special committee appointed Friday to conduct an inquiry into the subject, said that the gas company would be asked to produce its books so as to determine the concern's profits under the new schedule.

The resolution directing the appointment of the special committee of the Board of Aldermen recited that "secret agreements on behalf of the city are against the spirit of our charter and frequently detrimental to the public interest." The committee was instructed to ascertain the scope of the agreement with the Laclede company, the provisions of the corporation's franchise and to report next Friday. Besides Chairman Scholl, the members of the committee are Aldermen Otto, Baur, Barney L. Schwartz and Bergt.

Opposed to Minimum Charge.

Members of the executive committee of the Tenth Ward Improvement Association are opposed to the agreement and especially to the establishment of a minimum charge, according to Arthur Stoehr, president of the organization.

"I have polled our executive committee, and I find that practically all of them depreciate the Mayor's action in concluding this agreement with the Laclede company," Stoehr told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday.

"We think that if any change in the tests was requested or contemplated the Board of Aldermen is the proper department before which to consider it. The Mayor certainly had no authority to attempt to bind the city and commit us to the payment of a minimum charge. I shall call together our executive committee, and urge our members and other organizations like ours to appeal to the Public Service Commission to set aside the approval that has been given to the Laclede company's new rates until we can have hearings and conduct investigations to ascertain whether they are fair and equitable."

Alderman Schwartz, in addition to his membership in the secial committee selected Friday is chairman also of a special committee appointed March 10, 1916, to "investigate the manufacture of gas and report the advisability of additional proceedings before the State Public Service Commission to reduce gas rates in St. Louis."

Made Inquiry Into Rates.

Chariman Schwartz is an attorney and said he had been making an inquirty into the Laclede's rates.

"Seventy-five cents a thousand is not low enough for gas in St. Louis in view of the many economies that have been effected in the business, and especially since the concession made to the Laclede in substituting heat units for candle-power as the test of efficiency, means an increase of thousands of dollars a year in the corporation's earnings.

"In my opinion, as an attorney, the Mayor was without authority to enter into any agreement with the Laclede on behalf of the city. At the same time I feel sure the Board of Aldermen is just as much lacking in power to fix rates for gas or any other public service. This is purely a matter for the State Commission to regulate.

"It is my plan to get my committee to work after Aug. 1 and gather all the facts we need as a basis for representation to the State Commission. It is likely that we shall hold public hearings."

Although it was news to many that the "gentlemen's agreement" included a provision for the collection of a minimum charge from consumers who used less than 50 cents' worth of gas a month, Mayor Kiel said he understood that the Laclede company was to get that permission.

Hadn't Heard of Minimum.

Director of Public Utilities Hooke said he was not aware that a minimum was to be a feature of the new schedule.

"The first I heard of a minimum," he said, "was when the Mayor asked me to approve the charge to be assessed by the Laclede company. That was Friday afternoon. (The Laclede company's new rates, including the minimum charge, was then approved by the State Public Service Commission). "I told the Mayor that I couldn't O K this minimum out of hand. I shall have to make some investigations first, because the extent of the reduction in rates will depend on what aggregate of minimum charges are to be paid by its consumers. I favor a minimum of some figure, but I can't tell now what it should be."

Mayor Kiel said he didn't regard the stipulation of a minimum as important, first, because he thought the company was already collecting such a charge, and, second, because he felt that not many consumers would have to pay it, since most of them use more than 50 cents' worth of gas a month.

"The trouble is that we tried to give the people something and they suspected that the company or someone else was trying to 'put something over'," said the Mayor.

Holman Issues Statement.

President and General Manager Holman of the Laclede Gas Light Co. yesterday gave out the following statement:

"If Mr. Hooke is correctly quoted, he must have forgotten that the printed synopsis of the rates, including a statement of the monthly minimum, was handed to the city officials during the progress of the negotiations. The Laclede company is not in the business of trying to put anything over on anyone. I know of no way to more fully answer this matter than to say that the question of minimum charge of 50 cents per month on gas bills was put in writing before the city officials and included in the new schedule of rates submitted to them and later filed with the commission. Further, following the final conference with the city officials on the tenth of the month, I gave out written statements to all the papers of St. Louis, in which, in the paragraph referring to the new rates to be established, it was also clearly stated in words that a uniform monthly minimum charge of 50 cents per meter month would be included in the rates.

"These articles were published on the 12th of the month, three days before the schedule was filed with the commission. The minimum feature of the new rates was stated as plainly as any other feature of the new schedule.

"Monthly minimum charges are so universal in the establishing of present-day rates that there hardly seems to be need for any argument on the matter. Practically all gas and electric companies in Missouri and elsewhere have been and are now charging the same or greater monthly minimums."

SENATE EXPECTED TO CONFIRM CLARKE APPOINTMENT PROMPTLY

Judiciary Committee to Take Up President's Naming of Justice Tomorrow.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The appointment of John H. Clarke, Federal District Judge at Cleveland, O., as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Charles Evans Hughes, is expected to be confirmed promptly by the Senate. A call for a meeting of the Judiciary Committee for Monday to consider it has been issued. Two years ago the Senate confirmed the nomination of Mr. Clarke as District Judge, after an investigation had disposed of suggestions that his service as a counsel for a railroad might have impaired his usefulness as a jurist.

HUSBAND OF SLAIN WOMAN CONVICTED MANY CRIMINALS

St. Joseph Prosecutor Had Been Warned Not to Be Candidate for Office Again.

FIVE SUSPECTS HELD

Police Now Believe That Three or More Men Were Concerned in the Crime.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., July 15.—After working on the case all day, police officials have discarded the belief that one man murdered Mrs. Oscar McDaniel, wife of the Prosecuting Attorney of Buchanan County, and then attacked her husband, last midnight. Their opinion is that at least three, and possibly more, men were concerned in the crime.

Friends of the Prosecuting Attorney believe it was the result of his activity in prosecuting burglars and highwaymen. They point to the long list of convictions he has to his credit. He is just completing his first term in office and several times had been warned anonymously not to be a candidate again. However, he disregarded the threats.

Neighbors of the McDaniels said they heard no sounds of disturbance last night until the revolver duel between McDaniels and his assailant started. The two McDaniel children, who were sleeping in a room adjoining that of their mother, were not disturbed.

Five Suspects Arrested.

Five suspects have been arrested. Most of them were taken from a rooming house to which bloodhounds went from the scene of the murder.

The first police theory was that a man who had been prosecuted by McDaniel and committed to the State hospital upon the grounds that he was insane, killed Mrs. McDaniel out of hatred for her husband. He escaped from the hospital and is said to have sent threatening letters to McDaniel. However, the supposition that he committed the murder virtually has been abandoned.

Mrs. McDaniel, whose skull was crushed at her home, died at Ensworth Hospital here this morning without having regained consciousness.

An assassin fired five shots at her husband, who returned the fire. Neither was hit and the man escaped.

The attack was evidently carefully planned and it is believed to have been the intention to kill both the prosecutor and his wife.

He Gets Fake Call.

McDaniel was called downtown by telephone about 11:30 p. m. The voice at the telephone said his brother was drinking in a saloon and that he had better come and take him home. McDaniel went in his automobile to the saloon designated, and found the call was a fake. He hurried back home, and as he stepped from his car in front of the house a man opened fire on him from behind a tree.

After his assailant fled the prosecutor hurried into the house and upstairs to his wife's room, where he found her senseless on the floor, her head terribly crushed. She had been beaten apparently with a club.

Mrs. McDaniel's diamond ring was taken from her finger and other articles of value are missing from the house. She was 35 years old and a daughter of Judge Luke H. Moss, a pioneer St. Joseph attorney. Three children survive her.

ALL ENERGY NEEDED TO WIN WAR, SAYS SIR EDWARD GREY

English Foreign Secretary in Letter to Constituents Declares Enemy Is Losing Confidence.

BERWICK, England, July 15.—Sir Edward Grey, the Secretary for Foreign Affairs, who has been created an Earl by King George, in a farewell letter to his constituents before becoming a member of the House of Lords, says:

"I have little time to give thought to words except when I can contribute to the conduct of the war. It will need all our energy and much sacrifice yet to secure a safe, lasting and right-minded peace, though it is happily true that things are going so favorably to the allies as to justify the fairest expectation of a satisfactory and final success.

"Every week now the allies are gaining confidence and the enemy is losing it."

ST. LOUIS AD MEN WIN GAME

Defeat Chicago Nine at Comisky Park in Charity Contest.

CHICAGO, July 15.—The St. Louis Advertising Club baseball nine defeated the Chicago Advertising Association team, 4 to 0, at Comisky Park, here, this afternoon. Chalfont, a former star St. Louis High School pitcher, pitched a clever game for the winning team. The contest was played for the benefit of the "Off-the-Street" Club, a charity instituted and fostered by the Chicago association for many years.

Last year the Chicago ad men went to St. Louis and won the game, so the score may now be considered even. The St. Louisans who formed the squad for today's game here were: Bloodworth, Chalfant, Graff, Johnson, Lange, Lepp, Ludlow, McGheehin, Mullaly, O'Hearn, Schacht, Schamachner, Stockton, Lawrence Sullivan and Jack Sullivan.

U. S. RULES THAT DEUTSCHLAND IS A MERCHANTMAN

Decision Not to Be Taken as Precedent; Future Cases to Be Decided on Merits.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The State Department formally ruled today that the German submarine Deutschland, is a merchant vessel and is entitled to treatment as such.

In announcing the ruling, Acting Secretary Polk said it was not to be taken as a precedent and that any similar cases arising in the future would be dealt with on their own merits.

The department's action was based upon reports of navy and customs officers who examined the submarine at Baltimore and found that she was unarmed and incapable of being converted for warlike purposes without extensive structural changes.

Now that the status of the vessel has been fixed so far as the American Government is concerned, every possible effort will be made to prevent news of her movements in territorial waters of the United States from reaching the allied warships which may be waiting off the Virginia coast to intercept her when she starts back to Germany.

Loading of Cargo for Submarine's Return Trip Is Suspended.

BALTIMORE, Md., July 15—The loading of cargo for the return trip of the German submarine merchantman Deutschland was suspended late this afternoon, and although a permit was obtained for work tomorrow, it was undecided tonight whether it would be taken advantage of.

A second gang of stevedores was today put to loading the rubber that is to be carried to Germany. It originally was intended to ship this commodity in the bags in which it had been packed, but it was found that this would take up too much space. The removal of the rubber from the bags consequently will cause lengthening of the time for loading and it is considered improbable that the Deutschland could get away with full cargo before Monday night. No nickel so far has been loaded on the submarine, while apparently less than 50 tons of rubber have been placed in her hold.

Capt. Koenig, the submarine's commander, and Admiral Axel von Eckerman, chief engineer of Construction of the Swedish navy, were guests of Mayor James H. Preston at dinner tonight.

Capt. Koenig, on his arrival, told the customs officials that he would depart within 10 days, and it was afterward stated that 12 days might be spent in port, because of the time consumed in unloading. Today the members of the submarine's crew were notified by the captain that they might accept invitations for entertainment up to July 24.

SENATOR BORAH FORCES OUT PROVISION OF NAVAL BILL

Gave President Power to Compel Firms to Produce Materials in Wartime.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Consideration of the enlarged naval building program was postponed in the Senate again today but will be taken up Monday.

Senator Borah forced out a provision to permit the President, in time of war or when war is imminent, to compel firms, manufacturers or individuals to produce such materials as the country may need. Vice President Marshall sustained his point of order that it was general legislation in an appropriation bill.

Charges that attempts were being made to inject politics into the line of the navy were made by Senator Weeks during an unsuccessful fight against a provision to permit the secretary to designate annually 30 civilians for 10 years to positions in the engineering departments of the navy with the rank of ensigns.

ST. LOUISAN LEFT MEXICAN FIANCEE IN FLIGHT TO U. S.

H. L. Filsinger, Superintendent of Mine at Pachuca, Says He Will Return and Wed Girl.

Reaches St. Louis After Box Car Trip to Vera Cruz and Voyage on Army Transport.

Harry J. Filsinger, 32 years old, of 3128 Lafayette avenue, superintendent of a silver mine belonging to the United States Smelting and Refining Co., at Pachuca, Mexico, 60 miles north of Mexico City, returned to St. Louis Friday. In his hasty leaving he was parted from his fiancee, Guadalupe Sainz, 22 years old an attractive Mexican girl, whom he was to have married on August 3.

Filsinger with a number of other Americans received word from an American agent that the United States might declare war on Mexico. He arose from a sick bed, bade goodbye to his fiancee and went to Mexico City in a motor truck. His fiancee is the daughter of one of the officials of the Mexican Government during the presidency of Diaz. Filsinger has been superintendent of the mine for six years. He says he will marry Senorita Sainz when he returns to Mexico, which he proposes to do as soon as conditions are settled.

Came in Army Transport.

The 600 Americans who were tied up at Mexico City for four days because the Carranza Government refused permission for them to ride on the Mexican Railroad, were able to get out when the United States Smelting & Refining Co. supplied 11 box cars with an engine, which took them to Vera Cruz. The journey to that port being uneventful. From there many of the Americans returned to the interior of Mexico when they learned that war was not likely. Filsinger came to the United States in the army transport Sumner.

Food is scarce in the interior of Mexico, Filsinger said, and when it is obtainable, the prices charged for it are high. Filsinger said that he had bought a side of bacon weighing four pounds a few days before he had departed, which cost him $7 in gold. Ham is about $1 in gold a pound. Flour, the American kind, is not to be had at any price. Breakfast cereals, which sell for 10 cents in the States, cost 75 or 80 cents in Mexico.

Peons in the Mines.

Peon labor is also scarce. "The mines at Pachuca employ thousands of peons, supply all their clothing, sleeping quarters and food, while paying them $1 a day in gold, and at that we have a hard time to get enough to work the mines properly."

Filsinger said: "During the recent revolutions, the soldiers would be stationed outside of the mines and force the peons to enetr the army. Those who joined the army in this manner never returned to Pachuca."

M'LEAN SUES TO GET ALL OF LETTERS LEFT BY HIS FATHER

Does Not Want Correspondence Produced by Either Side in Will Contest.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Justice Gould, on petition of Edward B. McLean, sole heir of John R. McLean, today ordered Francis T. Homer of Baltimore to show cause why he should not turn over to the plaintiff all letter which were found among the effects of the elder McLean. Edward B. McLean is endeavoring to prevent any of the private and strictly personal affairs of his father becoming public property through legal proceedings that will result from his attempt to upset the McLean will.

"My attorneys advised me," McLean said, "that such of these letters as have a bearing on the legal points in controversy are of far greater value to my side of the case than they could possibly be to that of the trust company.

"Under no circumstances, however, would I use them, and I shall not permit them to be introduced in evidence on the other side, if I can prevent it. I am determined that these letters shall not be exhibited to the public, even to win my lawsuit."

A friend of the late Mr. McLean is said to have declared today that if the letters in question should be published "they would lift the lid off Washington and blow several embassies out of the water, resulting in the recall of at least one Ambassador." At least three embassies, he is quoted as saying, would open their coffers to prevent the publication of McLean's correspondence.

He is said to have declared the letters affect Senators, presidential campaigns and diplomats and "contain a big chapter of American history, which, however, should remain unwritten."

ST. LOUIS PRIEST PUTS ONE OVER ON BROTHER CHAPLAIN

Scatters Flaming Handbills Advertising Sunday Services in Laredo Camp.

LAREDO, Tex., July 15.—The Missouri militia has but two chaplains and it is conceded tonight that First Lieut. John J. Lonergan, chaplain of the First Infantry, a Catholic priest of St. Louis, has put one over on Capt. C. Haley Maloney, an Episcopalian, chaplain of the Fourth Infantry.

Both clergymen announced services for tomorrow and Capt. Maloney called on various officers and asked that word of his meeting be spread.

Father Lonergan appeared about noon today with a sheaf of hand bills, with black heading in inch high type "Catholic Services," then, in smaller type, announcing the services in detail. He did his own distributing and posting.

CANDIDATES FOR GOVERNOR REPLY TO POST-DISPATCH QUESTIONS ON PROHIBITION

Majority Say They Have Not Pledged Themselves to Sign State-Wide Dry Bill or Other Temperance Measure With "Health and Safety" Clause.

The Post-Dispatch on June 29 printed an editorial under the caption: "What Candidates Are Pledged?" in which the following open question was addressed to all of the Democratic and Republican candidates for the gubernatorial nomination:

Have you given or intimated a pledge or promise to any person or oganization, in the event of your election, to sign a state-wide prohibition bill or other temperance measure, with a "health and safety" clause, if a measure of this kind shall be passed by the State Legislature? Would you sign such a bill?

The Anti-Saloon League was reported to have asked several of the candidates to give a pledge in confidence that they would sign such a bill if elected.

The question, as stated in the editorial, was sent to each of the candidates. Replies were received by the Post-Dispatch from five of the seven Democratic candidates and three of the four Republican candidates.

Roach to Make No Promises.

The answers of the Democratic candidates are as follows:

CORNELIUS ROACH—Replying to your telegram of even date, which has just been received, I would advise that I have been asked repeatedly whether I would sign or veto liquor legislation of various kinds when I am Governor. My answer in substance has been that I shall make no promises of any kind as to whether or not I shall sign or veto any legislation on any subject that may come to me for approval when I am Governor. I have said in reply to all such questions, by whomever asked, that my life and conduct constitute the best promise I can make as a candidate. I have said that a Judge sitting on the bench should not indicate how he will decide a case pending before him before he has heard all the testimony. A Governor should be free to act in the light of such information as may be his at the time he is called upon to act. In all cases, as Governor, I shall act as my judgment suggests is for the best interests of the people of the State. I am, however, opposed to denying the voters of the State their right to express themselves at the polls on any subject in which the people may be interested.

Atkinson Has Made No Pledge.

JOHN M. ATKINSON—In answer to your telegram of June 29, I say without hesitation or equivocation that I have made no secret pledge or promise of any kind on this subject or any other subject. If I am nominated and elected Governor I shall be free to pass on every question that comes before me with perfect fairness after considering its merits as well as the demand for it among the voters of the State. I think this fully answers your communication.

Painter's Hands Not Tied.

W. R. PAINTER—Your message just received on my return home. I have not and will not give any pledge, promise or assurance to anyone about the matter of which you wire. If elected Governor I must be free to act on all questions that come before me under my oath of office and the Constitution of my State.

Houchin Would Enforce Laws.

JAMES A. HOUCHIN—Message just received, which is first inquiry that has reached me on subject. I would deem it my duty as Governor to enforce the laws of the State. Laws that may be enacted in the future I would consider as I came to them.

Barker Refuses Statement.

JOHN T. BARKER, one of the Democratic candidates, was frequently asked for an answer to the Post-Dispatch's questions. He made no reply to the messages. Last Tuesday a Post-Dispatch reporter learned that Barker was at the American Hotel. In response to a telephoned request for an answer Barker said he would prepare one. Later the same day a Post-Dispatch reporter visited Barker at the American Hotel. Barker then said he was too busy to give an answer, but suggested he would meet the reporter at the hotel at 5 p. m. that day. The reporter returned at the appointed hour, but Barker was not there.

Lindsey Out in State.

ARTHUR N. LINDSEY, minister and Democratic gubernatorial candidate, did not reply to the question. His wife sent the following answer to the Post-Dispatch's inquiry:

"Mr. Lindsey out in State. Have not been able to get any of your messages to a place in time to catch him, but I know and you know he will do the right thing with the state-wide prohibition bill."

Later Mrs. Lindsey telegraphed that she had sent the question to her husband, but he has not yet sent an answer to the Post-Dispatch.

Gardner Cites Speech.

FRED D. GARDNER, the other Democratic candidate, after stating he had made no such pledge or promise, referred the Post-Dispatch to a speech which he made to Frisco railroad employes at Springfield, Mo., June 6, giving his views of the proper use of the referendum. In this speech Gardner said:

"The referendum provides that all laws upon the petition of a certain per cent of the voters from a certain number of congressional districts, 'except as to laws necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety, and laws making appropriations for the current expenses of the State Government, for the maintenance of the State institutions and for the support of the public schools,' shall be referred to the people and shall take effect and become laws when approved by a majority of the votes cast thereon, and not otherwise.

Provision Far Reaching.

"This provision of the Constitution is far reaching. It transcends the legislative and executive branches of the State Government. The Governor may veto an act of the Legislature, but the veto power of the Governor does not extend to measures referred to the people by the referendum. The Legislature may pass laws over the veto of the Governor, but a referendum vote of the people supersedes the act of the Legislature.

"The exceptions to the referendum in 'For the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety,' are meant to apply to laws passed to relieve conditions such as may arise in the event of war, pestilence, plague, insurrection or similar extraordinary conditions. It is meant to apply to a condition where the damage done pending the reference to the people would be irreparable.

"Suppose the champions of the single tax (among whom there are many able and sincere men) should get control of the Legislature of Missouri and pass acts looking to the carrying out of their theories and should add the 'peace, health or safety' clause to such acts, it hardly could be justified in attempting to prevent the submission of such acts of the Legislature, by referendum vote, to the people.

"Many of the people are sincerely in favor of the single tax, as are many good people in favor of prohibition. It is possible that some day the champions of these theories will be in the majority. If so, the Constitution of Missouri provides ample and fair methods by which laws may be enacted to carry out the will of the majority."

Swanger in No Agreement.

JOHN E. SWANGER of Sedalia, one of the four Republican candidates for Governor, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that he had not entered into agreement, secret or otherwise, with the anti-saloon League with respect to its proposed State-wide prohibition bill, with a peace health or safety clause attached to make it impossible to involve the referendum on it to bring it to a vote of the people.

The anti-Saloon League is actively supporting Swanger, and reports from the State indicate that he will carry nearly all the dry counties.

Swanger said he correctly stated his position on the liquor question in the speech he delivered in St. Louis at 1441 Chouteau avenue Friday night, July 7. He said in that speech:

"Connected with and closely related to the principle of home rule or local self-government is the question of determining the will of the people regarding the regulation and control of the liquor traffic," Swanger said.

"My position on this question has always been unequivocal and openly and frankly declared. In 1908 and 1910 the platforms of the Republican party declared for local option laws as opposed to State-wide prohibition, and also declared for a strict enforcement of all laws regulating dramshops.

"I helped to prepare these platforms and as a candidate sought election on the one in 1908. I indorsed the declarations of my party's platforms then, indorsed them in 1912 in published announcement as a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor and I indorse them now, believing that in such laws are to be found the best expression of the principle of local self-government and as furnishing the most satisfactory method of determining the will of the people on this subject and securing the most effective enforcement of laws regulating such traffic."

Judge Lamm's Position.

JUDGE HENRY LAMM, through Louis Hoffman, president of the Lamm for Governor Club, at Sedalia, his home, referred the Post-Dispatch to his speech in Kansas City, April 20. In this speech Judge Lamm said:

"If my party should nominate me I will either stand in public and private on its public platform, adopted in obedience to positive law and held out as representing its convictions, or I will take the only course that a man of honor can take, that is, refuse to stultify myself by running at all.

"I call all men to witness that state-wide prohibition has never been an issue between the Republican and Democratic parties, as such. By common consent of good men, heretofore that question has not been made the football of party politics. It has been gravely submitted to the vote of the people of Missouri and, if rumor is true, an attempt will be made to submit it again at this next election. The right to submit it and the right to vote on it are unquestioned.

"I know I am treading on delicate ground but I hope I am no coward, and I say to you that I do not believe prohibition will be a campaign issue or a platform issue between the Democrats and Republicans, as such, at the ensuing election; but whether it is or not, I stand by the proposition that no honest candidate can pretend to run on a public platform in favor of local option and home rule or in favor of prohibition and in reality run on a private platform based on private pledges that repudiate that same public platform. A man who would do that thing is going to fool somebody at the end, and, after all, the innate character of the candidate himself, his character for steadfastness and courage and honor and cleanness, is a better guarantee for faithfulness than the making of a private pledge for election purposes. All men know that hypocrisy is not a lost art and that sometimes it happens that those who promise most before election perform the least after election."

McIndoe Would Veto Bill.

HUGH McINDOE, Republican candidate, sent the following reply:

"In reply to your telegram I will say that I have not given, intimated, pledged or promised any person or organization, in the event of my election as Governor, to sign a state-wide prohibition bill or other temperance measure with the 'health and safety' clause if such a measure should be passed by the General Assembly. In a measure of as general interest as a State-wide prohibition bill, the people should have the right to express their will at the polls and for the reason that any such bill carrying the 'health and safety' clause would deny the people such a right, I would exercise the veto power if such a bill were presented for my consideration."

No Reply From Morris.

CHARLES D. MORRIS of St. Joseph was the only Republican candidate from whom a reply was not received.

Each candidate was notified that if no reply was received from him, it would be assumed that he did not wish to go on record on the questions.

CASTRO AGAIN BARRED FROM LANDING IN U. S.

Former President of Venezuela Ordered by Washington to Stay Aboard Ship.

BELIEVES IT IS RED TAPE

Says He Does Not Come to Start Revolution—On Way to Porto Rico.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Gen. Cipriano Castro, former President of Venezuela, who was admitted to the United States in 1913, after being detained on Ellis Island by the immigration authorities for six weeks, was again barred from this country today when he arrived on the steamship Vauban from Port of Spain, Trinidad.

His detention was upon orders received from Washington, it was learned tonight. Gen. Castro was permitted to remain aboard the Vauban to await the outcome of a hearing before a special board of inquiry tomorrow.

Byron H. Uhl, Assistant Commissioner of Immigration, said the charges against Castro were the same as three years ago involving moral turpitude. Uhl explained that a special board of inquiry in 1913 had ordered Castro excluded from the country and that the Secretary of Commerce and Labor had approved this action. Gen. Castro, however, sued out a writ of habeas corpus and was permitted to land.

The Government appealed and, Uhl said, and Castro, who had been required to furnish a bond, voluntarily left the country before the appeal was heard.

General Appears Perturbed.

Castro appeared perturbed when informed by the immigration authorities upon his arrival here that he would not be permitted to come ashore. He denied that his visit was of a political nature.

"Reports that I have come to New York for political reasons or for conferences with Latin-American leaders," said Gen. Castro, "are absolutely unfounded. I have no political interests whatsoever and happen to be in New York simply because I could not go direct from Trinidad to Porto Rico, where my family is. I intend to take the first boat I can get."

No Chance for Revolution.

Castro said that a revolution in Venezuela at this time could not succeed for many reasons, despite the fact that the condition of the country is bad, both politically and financially. He deprecated the possibility of war between Venezuela and Colombia over the boundary dispute owing to the fact that the difficulties were "perfectly negotiable."

Castro indicated that he thought his present trouble merely "red tape."

FORMER AUSTRIAN STATESMAN PUT TO DEATH FOR TREASON

Dr. Battisti, Once a Socialist Member of Parliament, Was Officer in Italian Army.

BERLIN, July 15.—Word was received here today from Innsbruck, Austria, that Dr. Cesare Battisti, former Socialist member of the Austrian Parliament from Trent, has been put to death for treason. Dr. Battisti was captured while serving as an officer in the Italian army during the offensive in the Tyrol and was sentenced to death by a court-martial.

Dr. Battisti was a leader in the movement for the union of Trent and Triest with Italy. He fled to Italy before the outbreak of the war and joined the Italian army.

A dispatch from Brescia, Italy, on June 2 of last year said Dr. Battisti had been condemned to death by the Austrian authorities, though absent from that country. Several months before that time, prior to the entrance of Italy into the war he began a campaign for Italian intervention and large crowds flocked to hear him speak. He was said to have furnished much valuable information to the Italian authorities about the defenses of the Trentino and when the war began enlisted in the Italian army, asking permission to serve as a scout with the Alpine troops.

PARKER CALLS FOR A NEW CONVENTION OF PROGRESSIVES

Vice Presidential Candidate Urges 'Men and Women' to Gather in Chicago, Aug. 5.

WOULD BURY 'BULL MOOSE'

Declares for American Eagle as a New Emblem of Party; Says Leaders Deserted.

By Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, July 15.—A statement and call "To the patriotic men and women of America," to hold a new national convention of the Progressive party in Chicago, on Aug. 5, and nominate candidates for President and Vice President, and continue the party's existence as a distinct political organization, was issued here tonight by John M. Parker, vice presidential nominee of the Progressive convention held in Chicago last June. He urges the Progressives "to eternally bury" the bull moose, which, he asserts, "led his loyal followers into the wilderness," and to adopt in its place the American eagle as the emblem of that party.

Parker does not mention Col. Roosevelt or any other Progressive leaders or any candidates by name. He declares, however, that the Progressives had as supposed leaders "red-blooded Americans, who promised with their 'life blood' to stay with the party to the finish," but that the party had been deserted by a large part of its officers, who could not stand the acid test. He charges that the leaders, for "steam roller reasons, have elected to be steam rolled," and that the time has come when every party working for human welfare and the future of America should unite against both dominant parties.

In criticising the Republican party, the statement indirectly refers to Charles E. Hughes, Republican candidate for President, as "a splendid man," selected by the Republicans "as the mask behind which they hope to again secure control of the state and nation."

Parker declares he does not want office, and states his willingness to withdraw as the Progressive candidate for Vice President and labor in the ranks and on the stump to prove his loyalty to Progressive principles. His inclusion of women in the call is taken to mean that the party is to be unreservedly pledged for woman suffrage and that the women voters in the suffrage states are invited to join the Progressive party and work for its success in the coming elections. Parker's statement follows:

"TO THE PATRIOTIC MEN AND WOMEN OF AMERICA:

"The Progressive party was born of a purpose, which purpose exists for reasons now stronger than at that party's birth. It was born of Americanism, and the call for Americanism was never greater or more necessary than today.

"We had as supposed leaders 'red-blooded Americans,' who promised with their 'life blood' to stay with the party to the finish, but for steam roller reasons they have elected to be steam rolled and, in depriving us of our commissioned officers, have thought an inevitable surrender must follow. This is WRONG, for the rank and file of the Progressives are men who joined that party without the idea of political aggrandizement, but with a view of helping and of raising the prestige of the nation, as a nation, standing for fair play to everybody, favoritism to none, and on this platform we stand today before the country.

"The Progressive ship has been deserted by a large part of our officers. They could not stand the acid test. Their assurance 'never to abandon the principles to which we Progressives pledged ourselves' never to alter their solemn 'contract with the people' proved empty words, a mere scrap of paper.

Deserted in Wilderness.

"The bull moose led his loyal followers into the wilderness, and there deserted them. Let us eternally bury that emblem, and adopt as the new emblem of the Progressive party the national bird, the American eagle, which will always be a patriotic inspiration to look upward, and a constant reminder to be true to those sterling principles which have made America great and brought to this country the bravest and most adventurous spirits of the old world. These, and their descendants are truly loyal, and patriotic Americans.

Work of Steam Roller.

"The work of the steam roller in 1912 caused a revolt in every State in the Union. That same steam roller manipulated by the same able leaders, was worked in the Republican convention of 1916, with even greater force, and the methods of these two conventions were adopted by the Progressive National Committee, as is fully shown by the various votes recorded by the proxies and members present on June 26.

The gentleman elected as President in 1908 was a clean-cut, splendid character, whose long and useful public life was unmarred by a single stain. He could not resist the power of the machine, which, being in supreme control, so stirred the anger of the nation that but two States supported the dominant political party in 1912.

"After four years we find that same party hungry for influence, office and power, again selecting a splendid man as the mask behind which they hope to again secure control of state and nation.

"For 50 years, not patriotic statesmen, but political leaders, have utilized the Southern vote to give them an absolute grip on national affairs and enable the Republican party, through its political bosses, to nominate whom it pleased, controlling that party by means of handpicked delegates from a section where there is no chance to secure a single Republican elector.

Progressive Platform.

"Earnest, patriotic and able men from every State in the Union worked to bring about a radical change from those conditions, which would enable the West, and particularly the South, to handle their own problems, develop as they would do, amazingly, and take a virile part in national life. The Progressive party in its platform unanimously adopted in 1912 and unanimously reaffirmed in 1916, said in part:

"'This country belongs to the people who inhabit it. Its resources, its business, its institutions, and its laws should be utilized, mantained or altered in whatever manner will best promote the general interest.

"'It is time to set the public welfare in the first place.

"'Political parties exist to secure responsible government and to execute the will of the people. From these great tasks both of the old parties have turned aside.

"'The deliberate betrayal of its trust by the Republican party, the fatal incapacity of the Democratic party to deal with the new issues of the new time, have compelled the people to forge a new instrument of government, through which to give effect to their will in laws and institutions.'"

DISAFFECTION IN THE MOOSE RANKS IN MANY STATES

VIEWS of leading Progressives in different states where that party has been active, as to the present situation and the outlook for November, have been obtained by the Post-Dispatch and are presented herewith. There is, it will be noted, no state among those given in which there is not some disaffection over the abandonment of the national Progressive cause, but the estimates as to the extent of the revolt vary greatly:

CHICAGO, July 15.—Harold L. Ickes, former Progressive National committeeman from Illinois, and intimate of Col. Roosevelt, said: "The Progressive party is dead. I am back in the Republican party and will do my best for Hughes."

City Treasurer Charles S. Sergel and City Clerk John Siman have followed Ickes; so has B. F. Harris of Champaign, Ill., down-State leader.

Raymond Robins, who ran for the United States Senate on the Progressive ticket two years ago, intimates he will support Wilson. There will be no Progressive State ticket in Illinois.

Division Among Progressive Leaders in Indiana.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 15.—Clarence R. Martin, a Progressive State leader since 1912, said: "A third ticket now is impossible and impracticable. All Progressives should unite behind Hughes, who is a Progressive."

Edwin M. Lee, Progressive State chairman, said: "So far as I have talked with the Progressives of Indiana, they are not satisfied with the action of the National Committee indorsing Hughes. A Progressive State ticket will be in the field in Indiana this fall."

William Holton Dye, former Progressive national commiteeman, said: "A third ticket would be absolute foolishness; no good could come of it. The question of the preservation of our form of government depends on the election of Mr. Hughes."

Kentuckians Repudiate the Indorsement of Hughes.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 15.—At a meeting the Progressive State Executive Committee repudiated the action of the national committee in indorsing Hughes. "The Progressive party has been betrayed by its leaders," the resolutions declare," and this committee resents being and refuses to be turned over bodily to the Republican party."

George Nicholas, district chairman of the Progressive said today: "I think Mr. Roosevelt made a great mistake in indorsing Hughes before he knew what he stood for."

Matt Holt, State chairman, said: "Most Progressives here are in favor of a third party."

"Ten Per Cent" for Wilson Reported in Tennessee.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 15.—Harry B. Anderson, former chairman for Tennessee of the Progressives, said: "Letters from all over the State show that 50 per cent of the Bull Moose will vote for Hughes and Fairbanks, and 10 per cent will train with Wilson."

John C. Houk of Knoxville, who succeeded Anderson as State chairman, is leading a revolt in East Tennessee, according to reports reaching here, but the Memphis Progressives are taking no part in it, preferring their chance with Hughes.

Many Ohio Leaders Silent as to Attitude Towards Hughes.

COLUMBUS, O., July 15.—Randolph W. Walton of Columbus, Progressive candidate for Attorney-General in 1914, said: "I cannot permit Roosevelt and Garfield to order us to go back into the organization from which we seceded in 1912 and co-operate with the same men we then denounced."

The other Progressive leaders, excepting Garfield, are sitting tight and making no statements as to their attitude towards Hughes.

Wisconsin Moosers Busy in Gubernatorial Nomination Fight.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 15.—Henry F. Cochems, who was urged by Wisconsin Moosers as their vice-presidential candidate at Chicago, said: "Wisconsin Bull Moosers are likely to be too busy in the State fight to pay much attention to the national committee. The problem in Wisconsin is the nomination of F. E. McGovern, a real Progressive, over the LaFollette followers. I cannot say that Wisconsin Bull Moosers would go to Wilson. This is their own affair."

Two-Thirds of Connecticut Moose Vote for Hughes.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 15.—Progressive leaders estimate tonight that approximately two-thirds of the 34,000 votes cast for Roosevelt in this State four years ago will go to Hughes, and the remainder to Wilson, unless there is a third ticket.

Jersey Progressive Committee Refuses to Indorse Hughes

NEW YORK, July 15.

THE Progressive Party of New Jersey, as represented in its State Committee, refused today to indorse the candidacy of Charles E. Hughes and repudiated the action of the Progressive National Committee taken at Chicago.

This action by the New Jersey organization followed a wrangle, in the course of which some hard things were said about the Republicans, and a wide divergency of opinion within the Progressive ranks was made evident.

Everett Colby, pioneer Progressive of the State, tried to put through the resolution of indorsement, and then, seeing which way the sentiment ran, withdrew his resolution repudiating the action of the National Committee. The motion was defeated by a vote of 7 to 5, there being nine members of the committee absent.

By the same vote, some time later, after further debate, the resolution repudiating the indorsement of Hughes which was offered by William E. Conkin of Blairstown, was passed.

Many Iowa Progressives May Support the President.

DES MOINES, Io., July 15.—Caspar Schenk of this city, Progressive candidate for the Senate two years ago, says that many Progressives in Iowa, dissatisfied, will vote for Wilson in preference to Hughes; but he admits that the Progressive vote in the State is comparatively small, and he believes a majority of them are sorry they ever left the Republican party and will go back into the fold without hesitancy, so that, he adds, there is no demand for a third party in Iowa.

Michigan Moosers Seem to Favor a Third Ticket.

DETROIT, Mich., July 15.—There is no apparent weakening in the determination of Michigan Moosers to put a full national, State and legislative third party ticket in the field this fall.

Pennsylvania Organization to Be Kept Intact.

PHILADELPHIA, July 15.—William P. Boland of Scranton, a pioneer Roosevelt booster, said: "Col. Roosevelt has turned around on the most loyal men ever banded together. He has committed political suicide. The action of the Progressive State leaders at Harrisburg, Tuesday, prevents a third ticket this fall. The organization will be kept intact under the name of the Progressive League of Pennsylvania."

Attitude of the Progressives of Colorado.

DENVER, Colo., July 15.—Edward P. Costigan, twice candidate for Governor of Colorado on the Progressive ticket, said: "The National Progressive Committee was not authorized by the national Progressive convention or by the voters in that movement to indorse any candidate other than one of avowed Progressive convictions for President. Under the circumstances, Colorado Progressives have adopted the view that the attempted delivery of the Progressives by the national committee was unwise, unjust and unfortunate."

Reports Demand for Third Party in Washington.

SEATTLE, Wash., July 15.—Emil Brandt, a Progressive State leader, said: "There is a large demand for a third party and a conference will be held in the near future to discuss the question. The real Progressives do not approve of the action of the committee at Chicago."

Francis J. Heney, California Leader, to Support Wilson.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 15.—Francis J. Heney is the only Progressive leader of note in California who has gone over to Wilson. The Progressive party is being maintained as a form.

Progressive Situation in South Dakota.

PIERRE, S. D., July 15.—John Sutherland, Progressive national committeeman from South Dakota, said: "While the Progressive party does not surrender its organization so far as South Dakota is concerned, it will, in this campaign, generally support Hughes and the action of the national committee. So far as I have been able to learn, there has been no demand in this State for a Progressive presidential candidate against Hughes. The Progressives have not surrendered their organization for the future. It will be kept alive for other campaign in which they care to take independent action."

A combination operetta, cabaret and carnival will be the stellar event on the evening of July 31, for the benefit of the babies who are wards of the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund, which means that they are the special charges of the girls and boys of St. Louis and neighbor communities. In the way of variety and the assurance of merit in each division of the affair, "Miss Muffett Lost and Found," as being developed by Mrs. Marguerite Hopkins and Mrs. Freda Mayer Arnold, is rich in promise of entertainment.

The operetta is to be produced in Harberger Hall, King's highway and Von Versen avenue, with a cast and chorus numbering at least 50 children, most of whom have solo parts of more or less extent. But whether it be solo or chorus to which they are assigned is making no difference with the girls and boys, all of whom are popular in the younger social sets of the city. Most of them, too, are members of the Children's Choral, of which Mrs. Hopkins is director, so that they make up an array of well-traned young voices.

For the coming musical event each one is working without regard to personal comfort this hot weather, putting in hours daily in rehearsal not only of the operetta scores, but in perfecting the stage work both in its individual and group details. Mrs. Hopkins devotes herself to the music, and Mrs. Arnold to the staging of the operetta, and the two are giving not less than eight hours each day to the preparattion of the children for the production.

Cabaret and Carnival.

Following the main number of the evening there will be a cabaret and carnival, given on the lawn in the midst of which is Harberger Hall. During this period of the entertainment refreshments are to be sold, and a wide array of dainties and novelties are being provided, which all the children will engage in disposing of. The cabaret will be a striking feature of this section of the entertainment.

One of the numbers which is certain to arouse enthusiasm is a "Song and Dance Review," by little Catherine Louise Arnold, who will find her introduction to the audience as "Betty, the Milkmaid," in the operetta. She is but 10 years old, daughter of Mrs. Freda Mayer Arnold of 5808 Westminster place, yet for two or three years she has been acknowledged one of the juvenile song and dance artists of the city, participating at rather frequent intervals in entertainment for worthy causes with a cheerfulness that amounts to real enthusiasm.

The words of the "review" were written and the dances arranged by her mother. The dances swing in graceful style from the old-fashioned to the latter day and then back to the old-time favorites, including the one-step, the fox trot, the polka and the waltz, the whole forming a peculiarly attractive combination which the little artist has entirely mastered. Miss Arnold began her studies when only six years old and from the first was a pupil of wonderful aptness.

Arrangements have been perfected for the comfort of the audience in the hall no matter what the altitude of the temperature outside. Should it be hot the hall will be cooled by artificial means, circulation of cooling air waves being reinforced with 25 electric fans.

Vaudeville Entertainment.

A vaudeville entertainment in which singing, dancing and recitations were done with singular grace and skill, was given at the home of Ruth Crosby, 5218 Garfield avenue, Wednesday evening, it having been originated and carried to a successful conclusion by the children unaided. The return for the babies' fund was $5. The program included a song, "Someone Remembers and the World Forgets," by Ethel Strassheim; a duet, "Sweet Cider Time When You Were Mine," by Ethel Strassheim and Audrey Gray; "A Butterfly Dance," by Ethel Strassheim; a dance, "The Squaw Worm," by Ruth Crosby and Ethel Strassheim; songs, "Quakertown," and "Tokio," by Audrey Gray; "Wake Up, America," a song, and a Scotch dance by Estelle O'Brien, and two recitations, "Mice at Play," and "What the Little Girl Said," by Ruth Crosby.

Those who participated in this charming entertainment are Ruth Crosby, 5218 Garfield avenue; Estelle O'Brien, 5218 Cote Brilliante avenue; Audrey Gray, 5241 Cote Brilliante avenue, and Ethel Strassheim, 5236 Cote Brilliante avenue.

Several little girls and boys, playmates in the Ashland School, united to give their initial entertainment for the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund at 2921 North Newstead avenue. The outcome was a delightful surprise to the little workers for the benefit of the babies, also to ther parents, amounting to $3.25. Those who contributed to this splendid success, both in entertainment and financial return, are Edna, Edward and Josephine Wienner of 3615A North Newstead avenue; Eugene and Hugh Gunn, 3615 North Newstead; Arthur Ilisch and Irene Hoffmann, 3617 North Newstead avenue; Florence and Esther Hoffmann, 3617 North Newstead, and Rose Castine, 3606 Paris avenue.

Lemonade Sale for Cause.

Felix and Stanley Dreyer and Sanford Leipman adopted the lemonade stand as the means for their annual endeavor for the babies' fund, and, through energy, reinforced by broad popularity in their neighborhood, realized $3.

Little Marguerite Colonna of 5055 Terry avenue, assisted by her brother, Adrian, Horace Cornithous of 5045 Terry and Cecile and George Smith of 5045A Terry avenue, gave a well-organized carnival, designed exclusively for little ones like themselves, the result being an addition of $1.25 to the Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund.

Marie and Sol Brodsky of 1227A Blackstone avenue, and Lawrence Friedman of 1219 Blackstone, conducted a sale of lemonade one afternoon, and forwarded to the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund 51 cents, with the wish for "much success in your noble undertaking." The children range in age from 6 to 8 years.

Relief for Catarrh Sufferers Now FREE
You Can Now Treat This Trouble in Your Own Home and Get Relief at Once.
How the Remedy for Catarrh Was Discovered.
By the new method the nose and throat are treated by an effective local remedy applied directly to the afflicted membranes.
The Elixir, taken into the stomach, has a direct influence upon the mucous membranes of the body and cures the disease by removing the cause.
THIS terrible disease has raged unchecked for years simply because symptoms have been treated while the cause of the trouble has been left to circulate in the blood, and bring the disease back as fast as local treatments could relieve it.
C. E. Gauss, who experimented for years on a treatment for Catarrh, found that after perfecting a balm that relieved the nose and throat troubles quickly, he could not prevent the trouble beginning all over again.
On test cases, he could completely remove all signs of Catarrh from nose and throat, but in a few weeks they were back.
Careful experiments and investigations have shown that as the troubles were expelled from the nose and throat, the real cause of the disease was overlooked and in a short time the Catarrh would return stronger than ever. Mr. Gauss has gone way ahead of the ordinary methods of treatment and has provided a remedy that Removes the Cause and Immediately Gives Relief to the Nose and Throat
Reese Jones, of Scranton, Penn., says that after trying many other treatments, he used this new method and—"My nose is now entirely clear and free and I am not bothered by the disease any more. The New Combined Treatment is worth its weight in gold."
Temporary relief from catarrh may be obtained in other ways, but the New Combined Treatment must inevitably be accepted for permanent results.
Sarah J. Cape, Mount Pelia, Tenn., says, "I suffered the pains and distress of catarrh for thirteen years and needless to state, tried nearly every method. But by your new method I was completely cured and you cannot imagine the joy that has come over me."
Trial Treatment FREE
This new method is so important to the welfare of humanity, so vital to every person suffering from any form of catarrh, that the opportunity to actually test it and prove its results, will be gladly extended without one cent of cost.
A large trial treatment, with complete, minute directions, will be sent free to any catarrh-sufferer.

ITALIAN-GERMAN COMPACT BROKEN, NEWSPAPER SAYS

Rome Charges Berlin With Violating Agreement Respecting Rights of Subjects.

ROME, July 15.—The agreement that has been in effect between Italy and Germany providing for the mutual respect by the two nations for the rights of each other's subjects has been broken off by Italy owing to the hostile attitude of Germany, according to the Giornale D'Italia today. No convention now exists between the two nations, the newspaper declares.

In 1915 Prince von Buelow, then German Ambassador to Italy, concluded an agreement with the Italian Government under which, in case of war between Austria and Italy, Germany and Italy pledged themselves to respect the properties and lives of their respective subjects.

According to official opinion here, Italy has faithfully observed the agreement. On the other hand, Germany is unofficially accused of violating the agreement in depriving Italians in Germany of their liberty of action, preventing me nof miliairy age residing in Belgium from leaving that country, suspending payments due Italians and treating them as subjects of a hostile Power.

The Berlin Bankers' Association has circularized all banks in Germany, instructing them that henceforth by request of the Imperial Foreign Office Italians are to be treated as subjects of a belligerent state; in other words, that payments to Italians in Germany are to be stopped.

How Asquith Used "Kitchener Myth" to Rally England's Hosts for War

ALL FACTIONS FUSED BY GREAT PERSONALITY

Though He Was Not "A Man Who Had Made Himself Into a Machine," the Tradition Founded Upon a Newspaper Man's Stories of His Work in Egypt Fired the Imaginations of Englishmen Till They Demanded Him as a Leader.

By HAROLD BEGBIE.

Fourth Installment.

IT was by the work of a very brilliant newspaper correspondent, the late G. W. Steevens, that the name of Kitchener became suddenly familiar to British democracy, and it was by the work of the same writer that the Kitchener legend took possession of the public mind.

In a series of very dramatic and sometimes brilliant articles, which appeared in a popular London newspaper, George Steevens described the famous march to Khartoum, filling the gray commercial atmosphere of London with the rich colors of the East, with the exciting adventure of war, and with the still more exciting sensation of anxiety. And, like a wise story-teller, Steevens gave his readers a hero in this brave tale of adventure. In one brief article he thrust Kitchener before the roused attention of the British public and made not only the title of "The Sirdar," but the personality of this particular Sirdar a permanent possession of the British mind.

Here was the picture of the outward man:

"He stands several inches over six feet, straight as a lance, and looks out imperiously above most men's heads; his motions are deliberate and strong; slender but firmly knit, he seems built for tireless, steel-wire endurance rather than for power or agility. * * * Steady, passionless eyes shaded by decisive brows, brick-red rather full cheeks, a long mustache beneath which you divine an immovable mouth; his face is harsh, and neither appeals for affection nor stirs dislike!"

From this we pass to the essential fact, the man himself, the spirit of Kitchener. "He has no age," we read, "but the prime of life, nobody but one to carry his mind, no face but one to keep his brain behind." His precision "is so inhumanly unerring, he is more like a machine than a man." He was "The Man Who Has Made Himself a Machine." And the writer concludes that Kitchener "ought to be patented and shown with pride at the Paris International Exhibition. British Engine: Exhibit No. 1, horse concours, the Sudan Machine."

Ideal Hero for Englishmen.

Thus the legend of Kitchener was created. You can imagine the delight of the Londoner as he opened his newspaper every morning to follow the great march across the desert with so new, so unexpected, and so unlike-himself a hero as this Man Who Had Made Himself a Machine. The average Briton is a creature of domestic habits, fond of fireside, easiest in carpet slippers and an old coat, calling the wife of his bosom "Mother," and regarding his olive branches with open pride and indulgent affection. To such a man, then, Kitchener suddenly appeared as a heaven-sent distraction. He found himself contemplating a hero who contradicted all his British notions and yet in some strange fashion braced the softening fibers of his soul. And as the mighty army moved across the desert, the Briton in his armchair smiled easily, wagged his head knowingly, and said: "That young Kitchener will make no mistake. The Sirdar will crush the Dervish and for all."

But this new hero of England was the very antithesis of the Englishman. He was said to hate women. He was said to be merciless and without pity. He would allow no officer on his staff to get married. He broke every man who failed to carry out his orders. He was tyrant, despot, brute. He was everything the average Englishman dislikes.

Perhaps it was this very antithesis which attracted the popular imagination. England was beginning to be made aware that she had many enemies in the world and scarcely a friend. One of her statesmen was to coin the phrase of "glorious isolation." The sudden rise of a new Caesar, a new Napoleon, gave a sense of security to the domesticated Englishman. War with France might come at any moment; Russia had her eye on India; the Balkans would presently burst into flames; Germany would take advantage of the death of the Emperor of Austria;; well, what matter? Kitchener would be there to see that no harm came to us.

One admires in another the quality he most lacks in himself, and admiration multiplies and intensifies that quality until it becomes greater than it is. In this fashion the domesticated Englishman created the Kitchener Goliath—the inhuman, heartless, but unerring giant—the man who had made himself a machine.

Tenacity His Key to Success.

Everything in Kitchener's career has tended to confirm the whole world in this first delusion. He not only pulverized the Dervishes, but smashed the Mahdi's tomb. He came home only to snub lion-hunters and to hasten back to duty. He went to South Africa and prevented Lord Roberts from being too tender with the Boers. He took over the army in India and not only rendered it amazingly efficient, but humbled the most powerful Viceroy of modern times. He returned to Egypt and brought rebellion to a better mind. He installed himself at the War Office and immediately broke the back of the German's advance on Paris. And next the million men drilling in Great Britain, "Kitchener's Army," will utterly destroy Prussian militarism.

So the world reads the story of this man, starting from the first wrong premise of G. W. Steevens, and thinking of him not as a fallible human creature, but as a machine that could not err.

Now, the really fundamental and essential characteristic of Lord Kitchener was not "unerring precision," but tenacity, and this tenacity was little more than the obstinacy of a very slow and laborious mind. All the qualities which go to the making of a brilliant intelligence were entirely lacking in him, so entirely lacking that he was said by those who studied him closely to be unconscious of his own dullness. He was the bulldog, and given plenty of time was unbeatable; but the intuitions of genius never visited his brain; he never saw truth in a flash of inspiration, and unexpected interruption of his plans came to him as crisis or disaster. Further, he was by no means bloodless. He had tastes and occupations entirely outside the narrow circumference of war. He was so little like a machine that he could enter into the trivial fun of a house party. And he made mistakes.

But we may say that on the whole Kitchener's career, as the public know it, justified the delusion which began in the Sudan. He always succeeded. And he never sought popularity. Always something of a mystery, he went about his business in silence and never once did he publicly betray his humanity or give the nation reason to question the Kitchener legend. What would have happened if he had married, I do not know; and how the public would have borne the news that he had become a father I do not dare to speculate. As it was, the real Kitchener did not "give away" the false Kitchener, even in domesticity, and so convinced was the public of the false Kitchener being the real Kitchener, that I feel there is no danger in the world in telling the truth. I shall convert no one.

Why did the Government yield to popular clamour and appoint Lord Kitchener to the War Office?

For myself I regard this surrender as almost the most decisive proof of the imaginative power of the Prime Minister. It was necessary to present a unanimous front to the enemy; it was necessary to give the public a sense of security. By placing Lord Kitchener at the War Office, Mr. Asquith satisfied the entire British nation, and with this satisfaction a wave of enthusiasm for the war rose in every part of the country and swept the whole nation forward in a settled determination to see the business through.

But Mr. Asquith knew, every member of the Cabinet knew, that under the administration of Lord Haldane preparations had been made for the crisis which now visited the empire. All the marvellous organization which carried our gallant army to France, without the loss of a man or a bundle of hay, had been planned years before by the Staff College, under the administration of Lord Haldane. Every perfection of that immense machinery was an established fact. The men were there, the commissariat was there, the medical service was there, the transports were there, and the railways were thoroughly prepared for their task. Without hitch of any kind the most highly organized army in the world left these shores, passed to the fighting line and never once has looked for food or blanket. All this had been thought out, planned for, and prepared in every minutest detail by Lord Haldane.

One thing, however, was lacking.

In the supreme moments of a nation's history, the personality of a man who has the confidence of the people is a possession of almost incalculable value. Mr. Asquith, who had been the object of pitiless partisan attack for some years, and Lord Haldane, who was actually accused of pro-German sympathies, could not, in spite of their obvious merits, arouse the enthusiasm of the entire nation. One man alone was able to do that, and this man was a Tory of Tories, whose views about Liberalism, of course, were very well known to the Government. Nevertheless, Mr. Asquith decided that Lord Kitchener should be called to the War Office. By that decision he relieved the tension of a very critical situation, and made it plain to all who could understand that he was a statesman of imagination. Was there ever a more telling and more ironical stroke? The wonderful legend of Kitchener, in a moment of the gravest danger, acted upon a practical nation and a great empire with a force not to be equalled by the reality of a greater man.

In this sense it may truthfully be said of Lord Kitchener that "he came at the right hour, and he was the right man." In the opinion of a singularly able politician, Mr. Lloyd-George, with his swiftness of thought, his impatience of red tape and his willingness to delegate authority, guided by young military opinion, would have made an incomparably better Secretary of War than the real Kitchener. But this same observer sees very clearly that the better administration of Mr. Lloyd-George would nothing like so splendidly advantage the nation as the personality of Lord Kitchener. It was the personality of Lord Kitchener, the great Kitchener

Stomach Troubles Due to Acidity

SAYS NEW YORK PHYSICIAN

A well-known New York physician, in speaking of dyspepsia and its proper treatment, says that so-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, wind, stomach-ache and inability to retain food, are, in probably nine cases out of ten, simply evidence that fermentation is taking place in the food contents of the stomach, causing the formation of gas and acids. Wind distends the stomach and causes that full, oppressive feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies largely in the fermenting food, causing the formation of excess acid. Such fermentation is unnatural, and many involve most serious consequences if not corrected.

To stop or prevent fermentation of the food contents of the stomach and to neutralize the dangerous acid and make it harmless, a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, probably the best and most effective corrector of acid stomach known, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water immediately after eating, or whenever wind or acidity is felt. This stops the fermentation, sweetens the stomach contents and neutralizes the acidity in a few moments. Fermentation, wind and acidity are dangerous and unnecessary. Stop or prevent them by the use of a proper antacid, such as bisurated magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist, and thus enable the stomach to do its work properly without being hindered by poisonous gas and dangerous acids.—ADV.

legend, which gave to the awakened and rather startled people of Great Britain, at the outset of Germany's challenge, that sense of confidence and security which has since characterized the nation's attitude through every hour of the conflict, even the darkest and most bitter; and it is this same personality, this same legend, which still inspired the optimism of a nation absolutely convinced of victory until he went to his soldier's death.

If we leave out of count this psychological value, it might almost be argued that scarcely any soldier of importance could have been less fitted in a moment of crisis for the post of War Secretary than the great Lord Kitchener. For Lord Kitchener was a man who did not easily get into a new saddle; he always took time to look about him before he was sure of his surroundings; and he moved slowly until he was perfectly acquainted with the road ahead of him. Moreover, he spent by far the greater part of his life in the East, and was not only ignorant of European conditions, but frankly out of sympathy with modern democracies. Few men living, I imagine, were more completely out of touch with the England of the present time than this heavy and ponderous man who at a single stroke became the national hero. Further, he was no longer Steeven's Sirdar, "slender but firmly knit * * * built for tireless, steel-wire endurance." He was 64 years of age, bulky and heavy-shouldered, with a fatherly and benignant aspect, wearing his spectacles, his hair turning gray, his large face expressing something more than a shield for his brain.

But if any man in England had suggested that Gen. Baden-Powell should go to the War Office he would very certainly have been laughed to scorn, and if any man had called for Lord Kitchener's resignation he would assuredly have been denounced as a German spy. And yet, if it had not been for Lord Haldane's work at the War Office, these very champions of Lord Kitchener who were most loud in his praise might have been choosing the lamp post on which to hang him. For Lord Kitchener, I think, could not possibly have reorganized the War Office and got the army safely over to France, in the time at his disposal, without chaos and disaster.

His Appointment a Victory.

Is it possible to exaggerate this psychological value? Those who remember the early days of the war will testify that the announcement of Kitchener's appointment to the War Office was like a victory after days of most dread and terrible anxiety.

So completely had the Kitchener legend taken possession of the national mind that it is perfectly safe to discuss the matter, even as I am discussing it now, with no fear in the world that England will waver in her confidence. The first critical months are over—the months when swiftness of decision and brilliance of initiative might have hastened the end—and we can look around us, talk with a degree of freedom impossible during those first months, and gossip more or less to our heart's content. Moreover, it should rather increase than lessen the confidence of Great Britain to learn that she owes her great achievement in Europe not to one elderly man, but to a body of young and brilliant staff officers, who, under Lord Haldane's wise and stimulating headship, set the British War Office in such amazing good order.

It must not be imagined, however, because one no longer believed in the Kitchener legend, that the real Lord Kitchener was only a figurehead to the ship of state in its hour of dirty weather. He was an entirely different person from the legendary Kitchener and he was no longer the real Kitchener who laid a railway across the desert and broke the savage power of the Dervishes. But he was still an obstinate, slow-thinking and tenacious organizer, still a man who knew the right person for a particular undertaking, still a man who yielded to no social pressure in the sphere of patronage, and still a man who was an absolute terror to the grafter and the fool.

He set himself to raise immense armies in England, and he was determined that nothing should make him dispatch these new troops to the front until they had acquired something of the discipline and smartness which are such distinguishing marks of the regular British army. A weaker man—or, let us say, a man less obstinate—might have been tempted to send those green armies to France and to Belgium in the first nerve-trying months of the war. Kitchener was like a rock in this matter. And he was like a rock and remained like a rock in another matter—the matter of war correspondents. The Cabinet at one time was very nearly of the same opinion as the newspapers, and in their discussions of this question attempted to bring Lord Kitchener to their way of thinking; but he stuck obstinately to his guns, refused to budge and brought the Cabinet to see the reasonableness of his judgment.

Cabinet Relations Cordial.

It may be said at this point that Lord Kitchener's relations with the Cabinet, which might have been somewhat difficult, were in truth of a quite cordial and cheerful character. One can imagine that in any animated discussions he would play a minor part to such quick and vigorous thinkers as Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Winston Churchill, and this, indeed, was true; but it seems that Lord Kitchener did not resent this intellectual superiority of his colleagues. On the contrary, he listened to many arguments which must have been entirely new to him, the early sullenness and rather grudging acquiescence, natural in the circumstances, giving gradual place to a half humorous and, as it were, tolerant acceptance of the position.

For Mr. Asquith he entertained a great and real respect, and it is pleasant to know that he introduced into the Cabinet a wise military habit, always addressing his chief as "sir." He was not an easy man to convince, and he occupied places of almost autocratic power too long to be comfortably at home in a council chamber. It says very much for his capacity, I think, that he was able to accommodate himself to this unfamiliar position, and in the company of men inspired by principles which must have been entirely foreign to his own notions, adapted himself without any blunder to the circumstances of the times.

Many stories are told of his cabinet experiences, but few are true. One story, which happens to be true, and which very well exemplifies both Lord Kitchener's acquiescence and his good humor, cannot, unfortunately, be publicly told. There is, however, a true story of his War Office experiences which may be related in print. Mr. Lloyd George called one day upon Lord Kitchener to explain to him that recruiting in Wales would be far quicker if the men were told they would form a Welsh army to serve under a Welsh General who understood their traditions and spoke their language.

"But where is your Welsh General?" demanded Kitchener, who did not greatly like to be bothered with details of nationalism.

"We had better discuss that with Col. Owen Thomas, who has come with me, and is now in your waiting room." Kitchener rang his bell and gave orders for the visitor to be admitted. As soon as he saw him he said, "You were in South Africa?" "Yes sir," replied the Colonel. "Well, you're now Brigadier-General Commanding the Welsh army; you'd better go and get to work at once."

Sensitive to Criticisms.

This swiftness of decision was not usual with Lord Kitchener of recent years, but on occasion, when his mind was settled about a thing, he made other men move more swiftly than was altogether comfortable. It was said that he had created dissatisfaction at the War Office by ruthlessly discharging men who had not immediately responded to commands something too peremptory for pleasant obedience. He was more sensitive to certain forms of criticism than the Kitchener legend would lead us to suppose, and woe betide the official through whose mistake or neglect the War Office came in for public attack.

Sensational stories were told of Lord Kitchener's visits to France after the outbreak of war. It was said—and for a long time I believed it—that, after Gen. Smith-Dorrien's brilliant rescue of the British army from almost certain annihilation, Kitchener went over to France and had one French General shot, and two French Generals thrown into prison.

There was some ground for this exciting story, but as it was told it was entirely untrue. What Kitchener did—and he deserves the highest praise for it—was to secure greater and more friendly co-operation between the chiefs of the two armies. At the beginning of such a war, friction between the heads of armies in alliance is almost certain to occur, even when the troops themselves are in the most hearty and affectional relation with each other. Some such friction arose in this instance, and, by a timely visit and very wise diplomacy, Lord Kitchener was able not only to remove the causes of friction, but to bring the Generals in question into quite cordial relationship. It is not true, however, if my information is correct, that Lord Kitchener went to the front. I understand that the French War Secretary, whom he met in Paris, convinced him that it could not be wise for him to pay that visit.

But Kitchener's fame remains in Egypt. He added to his reputation in South Africa and has left no such monuments in India as were left by Lord Roberts along the Himalayan frontier. And at the War Office, in this supreme crisis of our national life, he had really done nothing. He has really done nothing, attempted nothing, which by the wildest reach of imagination could be called a masterstroke of genius. He was nothing more at the War Office than a gruff and most dutiful official, sparing himself no pains, sacrificing his days and nights, struggling with all his powers and with all his strength to fulfill his trust, but without vision and without the 1917 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers with the 122-inch wheelbase, double cowl body and French pleated upholstery.

A good day's work was done when they made it. They took as a base the 1916 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers. A car that had 1,000,000 miles of record behind it. And a service mark of 99.21 percent perfect.

They didn't touch the 3400 r. p. m. power plant. They stood pat there.

And on this magnificent chassis they laid a body that surpasses the ordinary man's power of expression.

To describe this gorgeous body is like trying to describe a Rocky Mountain sunset. It's impossible.

You get an optic sensation that fills the mind with a picture you'll never forget.

Lines—ladies, they're so severely modern that at first the Chalmers people thought they'd have to change them—too far ahead of the procession.

But Mr. Chalmers finally said to go ahead. And he was right, because the first one that sailed up the avenue stopped traffic.

Men driving cars actually drove up ahead in front to see what car it was.

And performance—gentlemen! There's never been but one that could touch her—her 3400 r. p. m. sister.

She performs with a laugh. She has never refused me a hill. She has never failed to answer my every whim.

3400 r. p. m. is the reason.

But what I like most about her is the perfectly corking body.

I'm going to tell about one little feature of the body, and then you'll have to come and find the rest out for yourself.

It's about the upholstery. Now, there's been reams written and tons talked about upholstery. Some one once measured it in inches. Another described it in curlicue springs. Some one else reduced it to "real hair."

I don't know the thickness of it—and care less; but when I get in the tonneau and sit down I have a feeling that I never want to get out.

It fits the fat man as well as the thin man.

They're long pleats—French pleats—(which say good-by once and for all time to the "button and biscuit" kind).

She's a real car, gentlemen, and a wonderful value—$1280 Detroit. You put away in your wardrobe the equivalent of four good suits of clothes, a couple of pairs of ten-dollar shoes, and a Knox hat when you lay down the money for her. You save about $275.

Don't let me forget to call attention to her smaller sister—the 1917 3400 r.p.m. Chalmers with the 115-inch wheelbase.

Because she's a 3400 r. p. m.'r, great on the hill, smooth in traffic, full of spunk any time any day.

She's just like her 1916 predecessor. Neither you nor I could tell the difference. And you're dead sure when you buy her because her record is as clear-cut as a cameo—1,000,000 miles of use with a service record of 99.21 percent perfect.

Both cars are ready. If you haven't seen them you've missed a day's treat. Better than going to the art gallery.

CARDS LOSE SIXTH STRAIGHT GAME TO M'GRAW'S MEN, 5-0

Giants Pound Ames for Four Doubles, a Triple and Four Singles in Six Innings While Hug's Men Look On

PERRITT YIELDS ONLY FIVE HITS, SCATTERED

Two of Hug's Men Get Past Second and One of These Is Shooed Along by the Common Enemy.

By W. J. O'Connor.

All the Cardinals went to work yesterday afternoon precisely at 3 o'clock and they didn't knock off until 4:44. My, but it was hot! And how those poor players suffered! Some folks have it easy. Hod carriers, for instance.

Leon Kalamity Ames and Chief Owen Wilson suffered from the heat more than anybody else, except the fans. The thermometer registered 94; humidity, 79; enthusiasm, zero.

The score also was zero for the Cardinals and 5—count 'em—5 for the Giants. This was the sixth successive victory of the season for McGraw's men over the cardinal-hosed purveyors of the pop-eyed pastime. Indeed, Hug's men can't for their respective lives understand why the Giants are not leading the League.

Six Straight Over Cards.

The Cardinals have done all they can. In fact, some of the surest winners McGraw has are drawing their salary from Skip Britton. All except Harry Sallee! Skip punched Sal's meal ticket two weeks ago and is now thinking of selling him outright to McGraw, who is making a collection of baseball antiques. Mac already has some rare specimens, and if they just leave him alone he'll wrest from Joe Cantillon of Minneapolis an honor that has been Joe's since the pop-eyed pastime was a pup.

But you never can tell about these wheel-chair boys. Take Mike Doolan's case, for instance. Mike was playing ball before Rogers Hornsby had tasted anything but milk, but it was Mike, the beardless wonder, who knocked home the first run off Leon Ames yesterday with a double. This two-base slam followed another by Doyle, and subsequently two more doubles and a triple, not to mention four singles made at Ames' expense and the Cardinals were shoved again into the slough of despond.

W. Dayton Perritt, whose shoe is a size larger than his collar, pitched for the Giants, and he pitched more baseball than has been seen around these diggin's for some time. Only five hits were made off Pol and only one runner reached third, legitimately. In the ninth Jack Smith coaxed the only pass issued by Perritt and then joyously pilfered second and third without any effort being made to stop him. That didn't count.

In the seventh, wih two out, Hornsby got a solid single to right and Wilson followed with a pop fly that Doyle and Doolan said "howdy" to, permitting Hornsby to make third. Nobody else got as far as second.

Perritt had a nice fast ball that he mixed judiciously with a slow straight one and a curve and his change of pace had the Cardinals fairly daft. They laid for the fast one and got the slow one. They waited for the slow, and blooie! along came the fast one. Couldn't guess 'em at any time during the whole game, so help me Sealion Hall!

Pol Perritt Fools 'Em.

The Giants were most unkind to their ex-teammate, Ames. Doyle's double opened the second. Ames had two strikes on "Kid" Doolan when Mike pinched off a double to right. It was a single, but Wilson artfully converted it into a two-bagger, Doyle scoring. Merkle moved Doolan up and McKechnie's short fly to Smith scored him. Then Rariden doubled, aided and abetted by Wilson, but Perritt was in a hurry and rolled to Corhan.

Burns began the third with a single. Kauff forced him, but Benny swiped second. Robertson was effaced nicely, only to have Doyle single, scoring Benny. Doyle tried to make Wilson look bad but the Chief shot to Corhan, nailing Breeze's foremost citizen.

There was a lull then until the sixth, when Robertson singled and went to third because Wilson "walked the dog" around the drive. Doyle's third hit scored Robertson, while Doolan's sacrifice moved Doyle to second. Merkle failed, but McKechnie doubled and Capt. Larry came home on a heat wave.

Joe Lotz, fair, fat, but hardly 40, pitched the last three innings for the Cards, and the Giants didn't score, although two men walked and two men singled.

I. KUMAGAE LANDS NEW YORK HONORS, BEATING GRIFFIN

Jap Star Defeats American Racquet Wielder in Straight Sets at Utica.

UTICA, N. Y., July 15.—The singles tennis championship of New York State will go to Japan with the return of Ichiya Kumagae, but the doubles title will only travel as far as the Pacific Coast, escorted by Clarence Griffin and Roland S. Roberts.

Kumagae won the title in singles when he defeated Griffin in the finals on the courts of Yahnundasis Golf Club here this afternoon in straight sets, 6—2, 6—1, 8—6. The doubles crown went to Griffin and Roberts in straight sets also. They defeated William S. Milroy and Charles S. Garland, the two young Pittsburgers, 6—4, 6—1, 6—3.

The victory of Kumagae in the singles was the big feature of the tournament. It was a victory for tennis efficiency. The Jap wasted no shots, he took no more steps than were necessary and he made fewer errors. All of which was in striking contrast to the play of his opponent.

Jap Makes Few Errors.

Griffin, who with William Johnston holds the championship in doubles, and is ranked seventh in the national singles list, was completely outclassed at the base line game. Once in the third set he met success with a net attack, but it was only momentary and it failed to upset the little brown man in the slightest degree.

Kumagae's victory today is his third over Griffin. The Jap trounced the American at Tokio, a second time in the Philippines and now a third time in this country. Kumagae and his partner, Hachishiro Mikami, were eliminated in the doubles semi-finals due to the poor work of Mikami.

Dodge Is First In Revival of American Derby

Eight Are Arrested for Gambling at "Betless" Track in Chicago..

CHICAGO, July 15.—Dodge, owned by Weber & Ward, and ridden by F. Murphy, won the American derby, the $10,000 race with which thoroughbred horse racing was today reintroduced to Chicagoans. R. J. MacKenzie's Faux Col was second and Franklin, Dodge's stablemate, third. The time for the mile and a quarter was 2:04 3-5. Churchill of Foxhall P. Keene's stable was the only other starter.

A crowd that overflowed the grand stand at the Hawthorne track and filled the disused betting ring watched the horses. It was the first time since 1904 that local followers of the sport had had an opportunity to see a regulation card of six races and they cheered the initial bugle call, the winning jockeys and the course officials impartially.

Gambling was prohibited, but a big force of deputy sheriffs and private policemen on hand to enforce the order could not stop the "nod" system by which a number of bookmakers did a fairly thriving business in and about the stand.

Eight men were arrested at the track on charges of operating a handbook. They were loaded into automobiles and taken to Oak Park, where they were arraigned on charges of gambling. Three of them, R. J. Cunningham, Charles Willp and J. Miller, were released on $100 bonds. Their cases were set for Tuesday. The other five gave their names as George Smith, James Pierce, James Enright, Richard Couch and J. B. Burke. Their cases were continued until Wednesday. They were released on $500 bonds.

Burns, C. A. C. Runner, Lands Junior Marathon

17-Year-Old Youngster Covers 4.4 Miles in M. A. A.'s Race in 19:52—Norman Lemon Shows Way in Boys' Event in 13:28.

IN spite of a burning heat which sent the mercury well over the 90 mark on the thermometer and also tended to soften the asphalt paved running course, Christy Burns, the 17-year-old star of the Columbian Athletic Club, easily won the annual junior road race of the Missouri Athletic Association, yesterday afternoon, and in so doing covered the 4.4 miles in the splendid time of 19m. 52s.

In a race for boys between the ages of 12 and 14 years, held before the junior run, Norman Lemon, a 13-year-old youth, won out by making a timely spurt during the last 500 yards of the 2.2 mile course. His time was 13m. 28s. Both races finished with a lap of 250 yards around the diamond of the Federal League Park at Grand and Laclede. The first event started at Blair Monument, Forest Park, while the older athletes took their course at Jefferson Memorial in the northwestern part of the park.

Inasmuch as the course used in the junior run was tried for the first time, Burns' mark will stand as a record. The time easily betters anything ever made in a previous race, but the fact that the boys were not interfered with by the traffic may to some extent be attributed as the cause of this. Burns took the lead about 200 yards from the start of the race, held about a 50-yard advantage until a few blocks from the park and then let out, winning by about 220 yards over Harry Robertson, who breasted the tape, 28 seconds later. Theodore Mueller was third with the time of 20m. 39s.

Burns' Mark Is Record.

Burns recently ran in the annual 26-mile marathon run of the Missouri A. A. and although competing with some of the best long distance men in this section of the country managed to grab the sixth place trophy. His victory yesterday marked his first win, he having finished second or third in the recent junior marathons. He is well built, a youth of about 5 feet 6 inches and 135 pounds, and shows splendid form. He is under the tutelage of Coach Paddy Fitzgerald of the C. A. C. and looks like the most promising piece of distance material that has been developed here in many seasons.

Robertson and Mueller had a pretty scramble for second place throughout th race, but at Vandeventer avenue, Robertson pulled away and was at least 150 yards ahead of his rival at the finish.

All Finish in Good Shape.

Norman Lemon, the winner of the younger athletes' competition, did not look like a winner until within about 500 yards from the finish. Lemon had been running fourth from the start, with Fred Ernst, who ultimately finished eighth, pacing the field. Coming up Grand avenue hill on Lindell, however, Lemon put on his spurt and passed three men coming into the lead while crossing south on Grand avenue. He entered the baseball park about 15 yards in the lead of Joseph Doran and in the gallop around the diamond increased the advantage about five yards. Doran's time was 13m. 36s., eight seconds more than that of Lemon. Bigeley crossed the line third in 13m. 40s. The runners were all bunched and there was no great distance between any two. One minute and 19 seconds separated the first 10 to finish.

Thirty-eight runners took the report and not one of them failed to complete the course. Five who had entered failed to appear on time for the race. A large number of very small lads contested, there being younger entrants than had probably ever entered a local distance run. Both contests were well handled by the M. A. A. officials. Dr. C. W. Bassett, Track Coach Wilbur Hutsell and Joe Forshaw especially showing capability at handling such events. Cups were awarded to the first 10 to finish in each race, while every boy to finish received a bronze medal.

California Comet Decides to Make 1916 Campaign for Net Titles

Will Tune Up at Chicago and Southampton — Victory Will Give Him Permanent Possession of Championship Trophy.

MAURICE E. McLOUGHLIN, known to the tennis world as "The Comet" and former champion of the United States in singles and doubles, has decided to make the trip East this summer and endeavor to regain the title of national champion which he lost to R. Norris Williams in 1915, and win permanent possession of the championship emblem, which he has already won twice.

Last season McLoughlin's tennis was below his previous form, but he played well enough in the national championship to reach the final round in which he was defeated by a fellow Californian, William M. Johnston.

McLoughlin and his partner, Thomas C. Bundy, were defeated in the challenge round of the doubles championship by John[illegible] and Clarence J. Griffin, the [illegible] the elimination tour[illegible] the Pacific Coast [illegible]onship. [illegible] has been working [illegible] the courts to get his playing in the sectional tournament that decides the doubles championship of the coast this season showed that he has succeeded in getting himself into condition for the strenuous competition of the Eastern tournaments.

With Ward Dawson as a partner, McLoughlin annexed the title which carries with it the right to play in the elimination tournametn at Onwentsia and a chance to be the challengers for the national doubles title.

Although his plans are still subject to some slight changes, McLoughlin will probably confine his energies to three tournaments in the East. He and Dawson will play at Onwentsia. They will go direct to Chicago from Los Angeles, leaving their home town in the first week of August.

Will Sidestep Many Events.

McLoughlin will then take part in the tournament at Southhampton, which is to start on Aug. 21, following which he will go to the national championship at Forest Hills.

MATHEWSON TO BE REDS' NEW LEADER, SAYS G. HERRMANN

Cincinnati President in New York Announces Story is "Absolutely True."

HERZY STARTS PACKING

Present Manager of Club States He Has Put His O K on Giant Trade.

CINCINNATI, July 15.—With confirmation of the report that Christy Mathewson of the Giants will succeed Charles Herzog as manager of the Reds, who will go to New York to play short for the man who broke him into the big game stuff, little remains to be done except approval of the deal by the Cincinnati directorate and the actual transfer of the players.

Confirmation of the report that the deal had been consummated was received from President Herrmann today. The Red chief announced in New York that the stories printed in the newspapers of the country this morning was "absolutely true." Correspondents of various Cincinnati newspapers confirmed the story in New York today in an interview with Mr. Herrmann.

President Herrmann will be home tomorrow and it is expected he will formally place the matter of the Herzog-Mathewson deal before the local club directorate on Monday. While Herrmann is quoted in his statement in New York today as having said that the official announcement of the deal will be made in four or five days, it is believed here that the announcement will be made Monday and the actual transfer of players will take place on Tuesday.

Just Mere Formality.

The matter of placing the proceedings before the Cincinnati directors is taken here to be a mere formality. Persons in a position to know have advanced the statement that the deal will meet with the approval of the majority of the directors.

Herzog is not on the best of terms with several of the directors, ever since his run-in with Secretary Harry Stephens at the training camp in the spring of 1915, when he and Stephens differed on where the Reds should play their exhibition games. This incident, as well as several subsequent statements credited to Herzog, it is said, have placed him in a bad light with the directors and his transfer to the Giants will be approved and announcement to that effect will be forthcoming on Monday.

Just who will come to Cincinnati along with Mathewson is yet a matter of guesswork. Fletcher is prominently mentioned in all the reports and there is no one who doubts that he will not come here.

Herzog Starts Packing.

When Herzog was apprised of Herrmann's statement today he gave out a statement declaring that his transfer to the New York club has been all fixed up. He began to make preliminary preparations for his departure, indicating that his stay with the local club is a matter of only a few days.

"Looks as if it was all completed," said Herzog, just before the game was finished this afternoon. "Under my contract I must give my consent to any transfer where there are more than one club after my services. I have given my consent to the New York transfer, so it's all settled that I go there. I really believe that Mathewson will be the Reds' new manager, and I wish him the best of luck. I've tried all the time I was here—too bad I could not have been more fortunate. Matty is a grand fellow and if he comes here will be thoroughly appreciated."

Hempstead Going to Cincy.

NEW YORK, July 15.—President H. N. Hempstead of the New York Nationals will go to Cincinnati tomorrow, it was learned tonight to close the deal by which the Giants will obtain service of Charles Herzog, the Red's manager. Under the terms of the arrangement, it was said, Cincinnati will get the services of Christy Mathewson, who is expected to manage the team; McKechnie, third baseman, and Rousch, an outfielder.

The Giants also are trying to get from Cincinnati a left-handed pitcher in place of Kenneth Williams, upon whose services the Cincinnati club holds an option.

FANS MAY KEEP BALLS HIT INTO CUB STANDS

CHICAGO, July 15.—Baseballs knocked into the stands at the Cubs' park will become the property of fans catching them, President Weeghman has ruled.

Up to this time ushers have promptly followed balls knocked into the seats and have claimed them from the spectators who corralled them.

Fitzgibbon and Dr. Paine Win in Normandie Meet

Good Matches Result in Fourth Round of Annual Club Golf Tournament.

Play in the fourth round of the annual club championship tournament was held out at Normandie links and in each of the four matches played the favorites came through with victories.

Dr. G. S. Paine, who won a 23-hole match last Saturday, defeated R. M. Hale, 3 and 2, in a splendid match. After defeating Hale, Dr. Paine is now conceded a good chance of landing the title. John Morrison, the 1915 champion, survived his play with L. M. Preston, winning 4 up and 3 to play. Another 4 and 3 score resulted when Frank Fitzgibbon, who won in the springtime tournament only two months ago, met with George Sweitzer. Probably the closest contested play of the day was that between Dr. J. Austin and E. C. Melson, Dr. Austin scoring a one-up victory.

In the semi-final play, which will be held next Saturday, Morrison meets Dr. Austin and Dr. Paine plays with Fitzgibbon. The winner of the latter match is favored to ultimately win the championship.

Only two of the scheduled 16 matches in the championship class of the Algonquin club championship tournament were played yesterday afternoon, most of the players setting today for the competition. W. J. Lackey defeated E. H. Abady, 2 up and 1, and W. C. Wagner eliminated J. G. Robinson, 3 up and 2. Several contests were also played in the B and C classes. The present tourney has surpassed all former ones at Algonquin as to the number of entrants.

Although yesterday was set as one of the two days for the qualifying round of the Triple A tourney, very few made their medal score rounds. The players will probably turn in their scores today.

M'GRAW'S CASE WILL BE TRIED ON AUG. 27

CINCINNATI, July 15.—The case of John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Nationals, who was charged yesterday in a warrant sworn to by John T. Reed, a Cincinnati "fan," with disorderly conduct, was continued until Aug. 27 in the Municipal Court here today. The case of Shortstop Fletcher of the New Yorks against Reed on a like charge was continued to the same date.

The charges against the Giants' leader and Reed were the result of an altercation which occurred at the ball park after the game yesterday.

Miller Succeeds Vangent.

COLUMBIA, Mo., July 15.—J. F. Miller, former allround athlete at the Warrensburg State Normal has been appointed assistant athletic coach at the University of Missouri to succeed C. B. Vangent who resigned last spring to become head coach at the University of Texas. Miller formerly was a member of the St. Louis American League baseball team.

Colombo Dies of Injury Received In Omaha Event

Mechanician Is Fatally Hurt When Car Jumps 15 Feet Off Track.

OMAHA, Neb., July 15.—Dario Resta, driving at the rate of 98.25 miles an hour, today won the 150-mile automobile race on the local speedway. His time was 1 hour 31 minutes 27.31 seconds. Tom Milton was second and Ralph Mulford third.

In the 50-mile free-for-all race, Ralph de Palma won handily, leading the field from the start. His time was 30 minutes 31.31 seconds. Eddie Rickenbacher finished second, and Pete Henderson third. De Palma made the first 30 miles of this race in 17 minutes 32.9 seconds.

A fatal accident marred the event. In the sixth lap of the race Aldo Franchi's car jumped from the raised track at a dangerous curve, turned over in the air and struck the ground 15 feet below. Franchi was not hurt, but Dan Colombo, his mechanician, sustained a broken hip and other injuries from which he died a few hours later.

BROWNS WIN, 2-1, THEN LOSE, 17-4, IN ONE BIG DAY

After Hamilton's Almost Perfect Game, Davenport, Park and Others Make Pitiable Showing.

BOSTON, Mass., July 15.

MANAGER FIELDER JONES and his charges gave a double exhibition this afternoon in the double header with the Red Sox that would be hard to duplicate. They split even before a crowd of over 18,000.

Earl Hamilton kept the Champions down, allowing them but one run and the outcome of his, the curtain-raiser was, 2 to 1. But in the second conflict the right-hand pitchers who were asked to subdue Carrigan's clan, ran against a fusillade of shots that, with a miserable exhibition of fielding, enabled the Champions to win, 17—4. Jones sent all his right handers, with the exception of Bob Groom, into this fray.

The winning of Hamilton brings back to the memory of Boston fans the days when with Ham's slow ball he had the heavy swatters of the Red Sox standing on their heads. He was the same tough proposition today, and in only one of the nine chapters was he in danger. In that crisis he rallied, though, and came through victoriously.

Foster's One Bad Inning.

Carrigan sent "No-hit No-run" George Foster after the opening contest, but the Browns clinched the victory in the very first round, when Johnson busted a safety to right with one out. This was followed by a wide throw by Gardner on Miller's tap, an error which placed Johnson on third base. He scored on Sisler's sacrifice fly to Lewis. Miller, who had taken second on Lewis' throw to the plate, scored shortly afterwards on Pratt's single to left and Del, too, scampered to the middle station when Lewis' throw was again too late to the plate. Marsans was passed, but Hartley's best was a pop to Cady.

The Red Sox had men on every inning except the fourth. It was Walker who drove in the only one the Red Sox scored. This came in the eighth. Hooper began with a single, but was forced by Barry. Lewis singled to left and, after Gainer had flied to Shotton, Walker planked a double against the left field barrier, scoring Barry. Gardner was thrown out by Lavan and danger was averted.

In the ninth the Browns had to go some, as Hamilton faltered. With one out, Henriksen and McNally, acting as pinch-hitters for Cady and Foster, drew passes. Hooper then grounded to Sisler and Barry closed with a fly to Shotton. Both teams collected eight hits.

In the second battle it was the Red Sox who did the banging. They attacked Davenport and chased him to the showers in the third inning, his only misdemeanor up to that time being bumping Jack Barry with the ball. Thomas drew a walk. Hooper and Barry singled. Lewis doubled and Hoblitzell monosacked. These hits, clustered around a wild pitch and two errors, sent Davenport out. Park relieved and Walker doubled, enabling the Boston club to make five runs.

Baumie Didn't Stay Long.

Baumgardner went to the hill in the fourth, and he was given a rousing reception. Thomas walked, and after Ruth had sent Miller back to the center field bleachers for his drive Hooper smacked a hit. Barry flied to Marsans. Lewis singled. Hoblitzell tripled and Walker doubled, all of which, wrapped around some more poor fielding, drove Baumgardner to cover and allowed the champions another bunch of four runs before McCabe was called upon.

It was in the sixth that the champions made another group of four. Barry was passed. Lewis was hit by a pitched ball. Hobby beat out an infield hit and when Pratt dropped Johnson's throw the runs started going over. Errors came fast, the side finally being retired when Ruth chased Marsans back for his long clout.

In the eighth Ruth walked Shotton and Johnson and on Pratt's single Shotton counted. In the last portion of the eighth, Hooper was safe when Miller dropped his line drive, and after two were out a double by Hoblitzell, singles by Walker, Gardner and Janvrin, Miller booting the latter's single into a three-bagger, added the final block of four runs for the champions.

Bert Shotton walked in the eighth and after two were out Sisler made the longest hit of the afternoon when he slammed a three-bagger to deep right, scoring Shotton.

Giants' Owner Coming Here to Close Sal Deal

Britton Gives New York Club Until 10 O'Clock Monday Morning to Meet Terms.

The Sallee deal with New York has reached the well-known status quo stage. After a conference with Manager McGraw yesterday, President Britton opened the door to his private office and, with no show of enthusiasm, announced:

"The Sallee deal hasn't been closed. New York has until 10 o'clock Monday morning in which to accept our proposition or end negotiations."

President Harry Hempstead of the New York club is on his way to St. Louis and probably will reach these parts tomorrow. He has, it is understood agreed to the purchase of the Higginsport huckleberry, but McGraw is loath to pay Sallee the salary he wants for the time he was suspended. Britton says Sallee can push the plow around his 80-acre lot for the rest of his natural before he will pay this salary. There you are, Eddie!

The purchase price is said to be $10,000. Officials of the New York club think the deal positively will be consummated upon the arrival of Hempstead. The Giants need pitchers. They are only 6½ games out of first place.

Josties Defeats Taylor Ward in Straight Sets

O'Fallon Park Star Easily Wins Consolation Match, 6—4, 6—4, at Triple A.

Although the Central States tennis championships in both singles and doubles were decided a week ago, local players are still contesting in the consolation division for the few cups that were not carried away by visiting players.

Yesterday, two doubles and three singles matches were decided, with several of the matches resulting contrary to form. The big surprise came when Fred Josties, the champion of O'Fallon Park, defeated Taylor Ward in straight sets, 6—4, 6—4. This was a third round match. Ward and Josties are two young players and there has been quite a bit of rivalry between the two. They are probably St. Louis' most promising racquet experts. Josties was going well yesterday, but still had to work his hardest to eliminate the former Soldan High School youth.

Another setback came when Walter Haase, the 17-year-old youth, who has received favorable comment from many local stars, was defeated by Victor Battershy, in a semi-final round match, 6—4, 6—3, 6—3. Battershy is also a young player and surprised the whole Triple A gallery by his play yesterday.

In another third round match, [illegible] Thomas defeated Duncan McCallum, 6—4, 7—5. Thomas will now meet Josties for the right to meet [illegible] for the consolation trophy.

In the two third round doubles matches, Metcalfe and Harris defeated Thomas and Grinstead, 6—1, 3—6, 6—4, and Fischer and Hewitt won easily from [illegible] and [illegible], 6—2, 6—1, 6—1.

George Stallings Now Has His Machine Tuned Up for That Pennant Drive

RANDALL OPPOSES DANGEROUS RIVAL IN 'COMEBACK' GO

Leo Witt Is a Very Rugged and Fairly Clever Boxer, With a Good Punch.

LAYOFF WILL HURT BOTH

Former M. A. A. Instructor Has Fought but Twice in Several Years.

By Harry S. Sharpe.

Referee for the Future City A. C. and the Post-Dispatch's Boxing Authority.

It is probable a large crowd will be present at the Future City Athletic club next Tuesday night to witness the bout between Eddie Randall and Leo Witt. Both are popular welterweights, but greatest interest will center in Randall because of the unusual effort he is making to re-establish himself in the ring. He has not taken part in a contest since he boxed Harry Brewer at the Coliseum more than four years ago. It is a long time to remain out of the ring and then do a successful "comeback."

As a gymnasium boxer, Randall has always been very fast and clever, a splendid instructor and a very willing worker. When Freddy Welsh, Jimmy Duffy and other well-known boxers came to St. Louis in past years they were glad to have Randall box with them, and the St. Louis boy demonstrated his great ability by holding his own.

Randall Bested in "Comebacks"

However, as a ring fighter Randall has not been so fortunate—at least in recent years. His matches with Harry Brewer and Packey McFarland were huge mistakes. He was badly advised and suffered the consequence when he met these men after a long lay-off from the ring.

It is true, Randall won from Brewer, but it was only because of an accidental foul committed in the sixth round. Up to the time of this unfortunate ending of the bout Randall had been given a beating by Brewer, and in the fifth round it was apparent that the end was very near for Randall.

It was shortly after this that Randall went to Cincinnati to box Packey McFarland and was knocked out in the third round. This knockout was the price Randall paid for ill-advised assertions made by his manager, Mal Doyle. The latter's remarks angered McFarland and he disposed of Randall in quick order.

McFarland afterwards stated that had it not been for the taunting and uncalled-for remarks attributed to Doyle and Randall he would have permitted the latter to have remained in the ring the limited number of rounds for which the bout was scheduled. This was a habit of McFarland with opponents inferior to him in boxing ability, and Randall missed the chance of staying the limit by too much talking. When the facts became known no one blamed Randall for this, but he was the only one McFarland had a chance to punish, as it was Randall in the ring, and not his manager.

Randall Meets Clever Foe.

For the past 10 days Randall has been training hard to fit himself for Tuesday night's contest. At first it was announced that he was to box Leo Kelly, but this match was ridiculed to such an extent that Witt was substituted. The latter is clever, and has a good record. He has not been seen in the ring since last January, when he was unfortunate enough to break his hand in a bout with Charlie Metrie of Milwaukee.

Both men are bound to be affected by their long absence from the ring, and neither will be at his best Tuesday night. This is in the natural order of things, because no matter how well a man may be boxing in practice bouts, it is a well-known fact that he must engage in contests to acquire his best form. It is quite a different thing to box a man a friendly bout in the gymnasium or meet him in a ring contest.

Randall and Witt have agreed to weigh 138 pounds or under at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. This should be easy enough for either and enable them to be in good condition.

Kabakoff Shows His Speed.

Harry Kabakoff just can't help being fast. Last week he was driving a butcher wagon and was arrested for exceeding the speed limit. When Kabakoff reached Police Court No. 1, Judge Granville Hogan, who is a member of the Boxing Commission, looked him over and assessed a fine of $5. That night Kabakoff boxed Eddie Evers at the Motordrome and witnesses of both transactions say that the little Hebrew showed much more fear of the Judge than he did of Evers.

Introducing Mr. Trendall.

Harry Trendall was presented to a West End picture show audience recently in a manner that was more to the point than pleasing.

Moving pictures of Trendall's bout with Ted Lewis at the Coliseum last February were being shown, and the proprietor of the airdrome thought it a good idea to have Trendall there and introduce him.

At the proper time Trendall was trotted out and was introduced as follows: "Ladies and Gentlemen—This is Mr Trendall—the gent that gets knocked out in the seventh round!"

Harry is said to have beaten a hasty retreat.

Boxing Cards on Installment Plan.

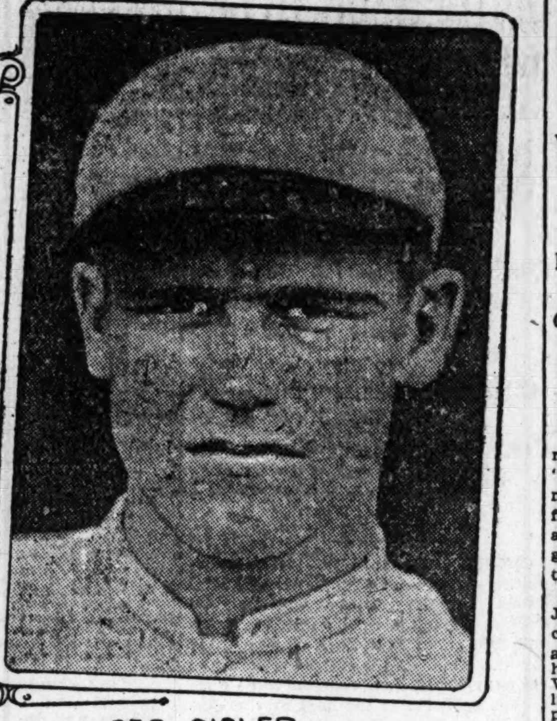
When Ed Smith, active secretary of the Boxing Commission, was asked recently how much money he had taken in as a result of boxers registering with the commission he named a sum that did not balance with the number of cards he had issued. Asked by Secretary Bob Hall how this happened to be so, Smith explained that he was registering Sam Dixon's negro fighters, battle royalers and all, and that they were paying for their cards on the installment plan—10 and 15 cents at a time—because some of them didn't get enough out of their fights to pay 50 cents all at once.

M. W. Savage Is Buried.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 15.—With the body of his famous pacer, Dan Patch, who preceded him only 32 hours in death, still held for disposition at Savage, Minn., M. W. Savage was buried here this afternoon. There was a wait of five minutes on every train of the Dan Patch line, which was built by Mr. Savage, at the hour of the funeral. Although the body of the horse had been prepared for mounting, in accordance with a wish of his owner, announcement was made today that it probably will be buried tomorrow.

Brilliant Young St. Louis Players Over Whose Relative Value St. Louis Fans Are Now Arguing

ROGERS HORNSBY



GEO. SISLER...

If You Must Declare Sisler Better Than Hornsby, Don't Do It at Robison Field

You'll Find an Astonishingly Large Number of Persons There Who May Disagree Violently and Physically With You.

Records of the Two Young "Wonders" Who Have Made Good Here Indicate There's Little Advantage in Favor of Either.

ACROSS the blurred pages of baseball history for the last decade, there are only a few red letter entries. Detroit wrote Cobb's name in crimson in 1905. Philadelphia gave Collins "first position" space in 1906 Boston honored Speaker in 1908. But never in the annals of the game has one city had the honor of idolizing in the same season two such stars as Rogers Hornsby and George Harold Sisler.

Coincidentally they're both playing first base. Hornsby is 19 years old—he'll be 20 on April 27 next year—weighs 175 pounds, and is a graduate of the sand lots of Fort Worth, Tex. Sisler is 22 years old, weighs 165 pounds, is a graduate of Michigan University and wears a Delta Tau Delta pin.

They have little in common except the inherent ability to play the pop-eyed pastime just as it was written. They have that rare "baseball instinct," that mythical "sand," which Scout Eddie Herr says you can find only with an X-ray focused on the abdominal region.

You can develop an argument any afternoon at Robison Field by comparing Sisler to Hornsby. You can invite an untimely end at Sportsman's Park by comparing Hornsby to Sisler. There are those who are slaves to Sisler's idolatrous spell and those who worship at Hornsby's feet. Both clans are sincere.

These Are No Grandstand Lads.

NO two youthful stars ever were more unassuming. Both are in the game for the love of it, and it takes many a salvo of applause to provoke a bow from either. Just watch the number of times that these kids turn a deaf ear to the plaudits of the mob! Hornsby will walk into the very teeth of a broadside of hand-claps with the nonchalance of Red McAuliffe "tapping a keg." Sisler fairly runs away from applause. He can streak his way home from second with a determining run and disappear in the dugout quicker than a prowling house cat pursued by an unneighborly airdale. And that adds immeasurably to their popularity.

Hornsby might still be considered compared to the well known "diamond in the rough." He's hardly the graceful, finished fielder that Sisler is; but for native straightaway hitting Hornsby has no equal in either league according to a judge so worthy as Wilbur Robinson of Brooklyn.

"That fellow hits the hardest ball I ever have seen," said Robinson the other day. "It must be his eye, although he gets distance because of a perfect stride. His whole body is behind each swing. If you watch him closely—as every pitcher in the league is doing—he doesn't seem to swing hard. He strides into the ball perfectly; he's never off balance. He just naturally puts everything he's got behind the swing, without visible effort."

Hornsby a "Made" Hitter.

HORNSBY came to the Cardinals a year ago with a reputation of being everything but a hitter. He "choked" his bat, and chopped at the ball, a la Tommy Long, although he couldn't put the force into his swing like Tommy. It was then that Huggins decided to experiment. He told Rogers to "get a toe hold," grip his bat at the end and swing free.

"He's now the greatest free-swinging hitter in baseball," said Huggins. "I've tried to compare him to some of the other great hitters, but his stance is totally different from those horsehide assassins who have made history, Lajoie, Delahanty, Crawford and others who could give the ball a ride, didn't affect the half crouch that Hornsby gets away with. But never in my life have I seen anybody who hits a harder ball than Hornsby."

Sisler, of course, has no equal in baseball, now or in days gone by, because of his versatility. There never was a first-year boy who could play first, pitching and the three fields like Sisler. There never was a first base man, not even Chase, who could manipulate the bag like Sisler, the first year out.

And he can hit! He can lay down a bunt and streak to first faster than Hornsby or anybody else in baseball, barring possibly Cobb. He can hit 'em straightaway, too, although his eye is not so keen and he doesn't inspire his followers while at bat, like the Milk-Fed Kiddo.

Watch Hornsby and you never feel that he is in danger of being badly fooled. One's attitude towards Sisler at bat is sometimes sympathetic. With Hornsby, you're always worried about the pitcher. Rogers may literally "knock the ball down his throat," as Ward Miller says.

But St. Louis can rightfully feel proud. They have two players whose aggregate age doesn't equal Hans Wagner's, yet who represent a small fortune to their respective owners, and a world of interest to fandom.

Hornsby Better Hitter, Sisler Scores Oftener

THE last batch of baseball averages—unofficial and including games up to last Thursday—show that Hornsby is leading Sisler this week in batting figures, with 310 to .293, the two having played in 74 and 76 games respectively.

Sisler has actually made more hits than his rival, but the latter has had fewer times at bat. He also has a larger total base record, 123 to 113, although the safeties are 83 to 81 in Sisler's favor.

Sisler has counted 43 runs to only 30 for Hornsby, while George has a big lead in the speed department with 17 steals to 11 for the "Milk-fed" Kiddo.

Which has driven home the greater number of runs is a record that is not yet available. Sisler has been occupying a cleanup position and the count is probably rather close between the young rivals.

Boxing Fan Is Tiring of Same Men in Preliminary Contests

By Harry S. Sharpe,

Referee for the Future City Athletic Club and the Post-Dispatch's Boxing Authority.

A LETTER addressed to the editor of this column by Mr. A. L. Casey, who says he is a regular attendant at boxing bouts in this city, suggests some pertinent facts that he believes should be considered by the promoters and the new Boxing Commission.

He says that the creation of a boxing commission is a step in the right direction, and expresses confidence that the men appointed on it will work hard to put the sport in St Louis on a first-class basis, "but the clubs will have to recognize the fact that to draw they will have to show new faces."

Mr. Casey opines that "there should always be a high-class main bout and semi-windup," and that "the card for the following week should be announced from the ring a week in advance."

It is suggested, too, that the Boxing Commission insist upon contestants using their proper names. "What right," asks Mr. Casey, "have Italians to be using the names of Murphy and Hanlon?" He adds that the Italians are not the only race to which this applies, as the Jews and other nationalities have the same failing.

Promoters Have Troubles.

In regard to the suggestion that the promoters "show new faces," it is probable that Mr. Casey little knows the troubles of the promoter in arranging a program, especially when, as at the Future City Athletic Club, boxing entertainment is given every week. St. Louis is woefully short of boxers who can be used in the preliminaries and be depended upon to give satisfactory exhibitions. Years ago, when amateur boxing was flourishing here, many boxers were developed, and some good ones. Of the latter, nearly all became professionals when the game opened up to them here. Some of these boys are now retired, others have gone away, and some are still here.

Of the latter, few of them are main-event attractions, or even available for semi-windups. Those who are still in the game are used so often as the promoters feel that they will be a help to the card, and sometimes they are called on in an emergency to fill in, and it may be that their appearance in the same ring time after time tries the patience of the patrons.

As for "high-class main bouts,' that is a matter more easily explained. Because the law of the State prohibits boxing exhibitions to be given in public, they must be given in private. In order to do this clubs are formed, and the attendance at the bouts is limited to the membership. If the entire membership of the Future City A. C. attended the bouts at that club, there would be present about 8000. But the average attendance is about one-tenth of that. The entire expenses of the club must be paid out of the assessments levied upon the members who attend the exhibitions, and experience has proved that if the price of admission to the members is placed at $1 and $2 the revenue derived is less than when it is made 50 cents and $1. If half of the average attendance pays $1 and the other half pays 50 cents the total receipts will amount to $600. The promoter has not yet been discovered who can provide "high-class main bouts," semi-wind-up, preliminaries, pay the referee, rental, light and other incidental expenses for that.

Open Gate Would Help.

An "open gate" in St. Louis would enable the promoters to depend upon a larger attendance and to furnish much better attractions, occasionally a champion. But, until boxing is legalized in the State of Missouri and the box office can be opened to all, the case of the promoter appears to be hopeless beyond giving the best entertainment he can for the money at hand. It must not be overlooked, too, that the promoter must derive enough to pay his personal expenses, and at the present writing there is not one of them in St. Louis known to own an automobile or to be spending enough money on himself to attract attention.

All the clubs in St. Louis promoting boxing are inviting membership and soliciting it with all the ardor of their business acumen, but though the membership fee is a mere matter of taking a sneeze, there has been, according to all reports, no extra page added to the rosters for several moons.

Mr. Casey's suggestions are very apropos, and we have tried to enlighten him in our feeble way. For further particulars and a more heartrending bill of woe, regrets and disappointments, we refer him to the promoters. As for Italians, Jews, Germans, Swedes and Chinese using Irish names, Mr. Casey might find relief by filing a petition with the Boxing Commission and asking for a restraining order. We will watch the result with a great deal of interest.

Hagen Wins in Play-Off for Metropolitan Open Title With Score of 74

GARDEN CITY, N. Y., July 15.—Walter Hagen of Rochester, the home-bred golf professional who held the national open title in 1914, won the three-cornered play-off for the Metropolitan open championship on the Garden City links this morning. His score for the 18 holes of medal play was 39-35—74.

James M. Barnes of Philadelphia made the round in 37-38—75, and Charles H. Hoffner, also of Philadelphia, was third with 39-38—77.

A penalty stroke at the tenth hole virtually cost Barnes the title. He drove into a pit and in playing out hit himself with his ball, incurring the penalty. The next shot got out of the trap, but the hole cost him seven. Early in the round Hoffner took the lead and held it until the fifth hole, where Barnes made a fine three and went ahead. At the turn Barnes led by two strokes, being out in 37 to 39 for each of the others.

BOY WONDERS NOT CERTAIN TO USURP 1916 NET LAURELS

Veterans Will Come Into Their Own, as They Have in the Past, Expert Says.

HISTORY PROVES POINT

Only Three Times in 14 Years Have Players Under 29 Years of Age Won U. S. Title.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Lawrence Perry, the lawn tennis expert, says: "Younger competitors are displaying a more comprehensive knowledge of the finer points of the game of the courts and nets than was possessed by the great players in the days when lawn tennis was young in these United States.

"The thrilling victory of William M. Johnston in winning the national championship honors last September, after the memorable battles in which he defeated Karl H. Pehr, R. Norris Williams II and Maurice E. McLoughlin, afforded food for the boy champion theory. Those who have recently studied the records closely find that the 'boy champion' idea may be moved back a good many years.

"Out of the 14 men who have won the American national singles championship title three scored before they were 20 years of age. The surprising thing about this trio is that not one of the men may be counted as of the present generation of players.

Johnston Fourth in Years.

"Johnston, the brilliant Californian and present holder of the championship, in point of years is fourth on the list. William A. Larned stands as of the most advanced age when he gained the title, and the fact must always be remembered that Larned never won the honors through a challenge match.

"Oliver S. Campbell, who first won the single titles in 1890 and who stands as the third individual holder of the American honors, was slightly more than 19 years of age at the time of his victory. He held the championship for three consecutive years, and was followed by Robert D. Wrenn, who has, perhaps, in his many years of activity for lawn tennis done and accomplished more than any other man in this country. Wrenn is one of the trio of boy heroes of the courts. Richard D. Sears, the first of the list of 14 American title holders, was several months older than Campbell when he first won the honors in 1881.

Sears Held Title Seven Years.

"Sears held the title for seven consecutive years, and part of that time the doubles championship with Dr. James Dwight, the former president of the National Association. Wrenn was just a month older than Sears had been at the time of his triumph when he fell heir to the crown of the courts in 1893. Altogether Wrenn was champion four times, although Fred H. Hovey broke in on his continuous line of victories in 1895. The record shows that Hovey was nearly 27 years of age when he placed his name, for the only time on record, among the immortals of the American courts. Larned is the only other holder of the championship whose record shows that he was older than Hovey when he first wore the laurels. Larned's first victory was in 1907, and at that time he had passed his twenty-eighth birthday by several months.

Youthful Prodigies Rare.

"The entire record of the 14 national title holders does not favor the theory that 'boy wonders' are to usurp the lawn tennis throne. A carefully compiled average of the 14 indicates that the age at which the players attain to that compelling power capable of withstanding the battles of a tournament is 23 years and 9 months. Very few of the men on the list have accomplished anything noteworthy before that age. Even such a whirlwind as Maurice E. McLoughlin, the player who was responsible for a revolution in the methods of American lawn tennis, did not win the title until he was 22 years and 7 months of age.

"R. Norris Williams II was a year older than that when he unexpectedly gained the honors in 1914 at Newport. Even the great Malcolm Douglas Whitman, the peer of all Americans, was 21 years and 5 months of age when he first won the championship in 1898.

"William J. Clothier, Beals G Wright and Holcombe Ward were about 25 years of age when they were crowned as champions. Hugh Lawrence Doherty, the only English player to win the title, Henry W. Slocum and Fred H. Hovey were in their twenty-seventh year when they took the championship. These latter figures stand as old for the American champions. This season the impression prevails that the brilliant youngsters will be potent factors in deciding the championship. One of the seasoned players of the average American age, however, may be counted upon to secure the crown at the end."

Didel Lands Title.

TOLEDO, O., July 15.—Will H. Didel of Crawfordsville, Ind., won the central golf championship for the second consecutive time, defeating today Holland Hubbard of Toledo, 1 up at the end of the first 18 holes. Hubbard then took two holes and the lead, which he maintained until the thirty-sixth hole, which the Indiana golfer won, evening the match. On the thirty-seventh hole Hubbard's drive and approaches were poor, Didel took the hole and the match.

WRAY'S COLUMN

How the Champion Has Shrunk!

IN days of old, when knights were bold, and when the wide-eyed small boy was wont to sink his nose into a book of battles at morning and emerge at night, still breathless, a CHAMPION was somebody.

He was, besides being about eight feet high, with harveyized trimmings, a guy who was ALWAYS right, who ALWAYS went to the rescue of the distressed and who was A-B-S-O-L-U-T-E-L-Y invincible. He would take on ALL comers with great gusto, regardless of the casus belli, if need be, just for the sheer sport of proving his right to be champion.

If you cocked your eye, you had a lance run into it for your pains, so jealous of their honors were those old boys we used to read about, while dropping lunch crumbs in between the pages, to the great annoyance of the librarian.

A champion meant something to you, in those days.

But Have a Look Today!

IT'S different when you read of champions today. Now they are insignificant little guys, with an abnormally developed fondness for mints—of the U. S. brand. When they fight they win by a "shade," or "five newspaper decisions to three."

You can't tell a champion by his record, always. You have to use calipers to measure his advantage.

Instead of meeting all comers, regardless of size or weight, the modern champion makes 'em weigh to a hair by the meat scales.

The best way to tell a champion is to read the articles of agreement. The fellow who gets the most money, is the one who has captured the most no-decision contests by a newspaper margin.

Jack Dillon Not Afraid.

ALL of which may be proven by the attitude of "champions" toward REAL FIGHTS which they ought to engage in to clear their respective escutcheons. As a matter of fact, nearly every champion today is side-stepping some one battle that fans are eager to witness. Here are some of the best matches possible which all the wiles of promoters can not arrange:

BANTAM—Johnny Ertle vs. Kid Williams.
FEATHER WEIGHT—Johnny Kilbane-George Chaney.
LIGHTWEIGHT—Freddie Welsh vs. Charley White (20 rounds.)
WELTER WEIGHT—Jack Britton vs. Packey McFarland.
MIDDLE WEIGHT—Mike Gibbons vs. Les Darcy.
LIGHT HEAVYWEIGHT—Jack Dillon ——————?
HEAVYWEIGHT—Jess Willard vs. Sam Langford (or two or three others).

Why Not Meet All Comers?

THE first three and the last one of this list are without excuse. The championship principals appear to be, frankly, afraid to risk their prestige.

There are excuses for not making two of the matches, while of all the champions Jack Dillon alone seems willing to face anybody, of any weight, any time.

More power to you, Mr. Ernest Cutler Price, alias Dillon! These hair-splitting champions are mere figureheads, not the real stuff. For us, give us the ancient lad, who barred the crossroads with his lance, and took 'em ALL on, just for sheer pride in his standing.

Gotch Makes a Fair Offer.

"SCISSORS" JOE STECHER may be able to cut quite a figure in the mat championship, but not with Frank Gotch, whose long lease on the title is threatened by the Nebraskan's claims. Following the five-hour side-stepping contest between Stecher and Lewis at Omaha recently, Gotch was asked for an opinion of the bout.

His reply was: "Not having been present at the bout, I must take hearsay to base my opinion. But I am ready to wager from $1000 to $5000 'Strangler' Lewis cannot remain five hours with me. I'll go further, and say I will throw him twice within an hour."

That ought to be plain enough. Gotch is willing to bet heavily that he throw TWICE, and in ONE-FIFTH the time, the same opponent Stecher COULD NOT THROW AT ALL in five hours.

In other words, Gotch's words mean that he believes he, himself, putclasses Stecher. A lot of others also believe it if they could only get a look at Gotch's physical condition.

Stecher's failure to get to Lewis has cost him a world of prestige. It is now on record that Joe has wrestled Lewis a total of SEVEN hours without gaining a fall—a remissness that does not smack much of title flavor.

AMERICANS HAVE WON OPEN TITLE LAST SIX YEARS

Foreign-Born Professionals Are Having a Tough Time of It at Present.

AMATEURS COMING FAST

Simon Pure Has Landed Highest Golf Honors Thrice in Last Four Years.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Six years have elapsed since a foreign-born professional has won the open golf championship of the United States.

Practically every important pro sensed that situation the minute he knew that "Chick" Evans had won the honor last week at Minneapolis. It is a staggering indictment of the brigade that up to 1908 stood as impregnable as Gibraltar, for even Walter J. Travis at the height of his international fame scarcely scratched the veneer of its supremacy.

The Old Guard began to stutter in 1909, when George Sargent, a stranger, won the biggest honor at Englewood, with the lowest total of strokes ever known. The next year at the Philadelphia Cricket Club there was a triple tie, which was lost on the play-off by John J. McDermott, home bred, who ended second. That was the last of the Alecks and Willies and Toms. The next year McDermott won, but not without another play-off and likewise in 1912, when the title came to him outright. In these three years McDermott, now universally recognized as the greatest home bred to date, rose steadily.

McDermott's Health Failed.

Unfortunately, Mack's health had begun to fail long before the national open of 1913, the spectacular character of which grows more apparent as it gains perspective in history. Yet with Jack at his best, it is very possible that Varden and Ray might never had the chance to play off at Brookline.

Following Francis Ouimet's unprecedented triumph, came the win of Walter Hagen, homebred, at Midlothian in 1914, when "Chick" Evans was only one stroke behind. In the last 12 years I have missed but two national opens and feel confident that never was there such a whirlwind finish as Evans' at Midlothian. The last two holes in the 1913 play-off at Brookline were relatively tame. Without depreciating Hagen's ability in the slightest, it can be said that Evans should have captured the title there, a year ahead of Jerome D. Travers. He was going exceptionally well at that time, the Midlothian course was not far from his home, proved to his liking and at that date at least, was not over difficult.

Twisted Tendons in Leg.

Evans practiced there frequently, far in advance and Chicagoans said: "This is Chick's year; if he don't carry off the open this time, he'll never turn the trick."

Only a day or two before the affair opened, "Chick," like a thoughtless youngster, engaged in a little skylarking and twisted the tendons of one leg, so he walked stiffly. He was furious with himself over the incident, for it seemed as if his chances had gone glimmering another year. It looked as if it would be impossible for him to start. Yet he did and easily qualified.

The first day of the competition proper he did not do himself full justice, but was going so much better than he expected that he resolved not to withdraw. The final day he was one of the last to start and so knew exactly what he must do to supplant Hagen and practically all the others, since word came to him by wireless. No brigade charge was ever more dramatic than the one he made, especially as the galleries of the early matches turned to watch his dash until couriers had to part the throng in order to provide for the flight of his ball, his friends were so eager to watch every little point.

Lost by One Stroke.

Despite all his handicaps of the week, Evans lost by only one stroke. He had paid the penalty for youthful imprudence. With the victory of Travers last year, and Evans' recently, amateurs have won thrice in four years. The foregoing recapitulation is given, just to show how strong the case is against the old guard of professionals.

It is, of course, possible that a star amateur, say Travers for instance, should catch the Scots and Britishers all dozing one season, but how is it that amateurs smear them three years out of four. What does it mean? That within a decade there will not be enough foreign pros remaining in this country to count on the fingers of both hands. McDermott was responsible for the handwriting on the wall years ago, but only a few people had visions keen enough to interpret the message.

Some of the old line pros may naturally retort that foreign amateurs, too, have won the British open. In 55 years, simon pures there have won but thrice. Why should the showing be so disproportionate in this country?

His Triple in Third Drives Over Three Runs for Robinson's Pacemakers.

CHICAGO, July 15.—Jimmy Archer's homer in the ninth scored the runs that won for Chicago over Brooklyn today, 5 to 4. Smith pitched good ball up to that time, except in the fourth, when the Cubs bunched long drives. Wheat's triple with the bases full, following two errors and a walk in the third, gave Brooklyn three runs. Clemons, coaching for Chicago, was ejected after a heated quarrel with Brooklyn players on the bench. Score:

ALEX GIVES PHILS AN EVEN BREAK

PITTSBURG, July 15.—Effective pitching of Alexander enabled Philadelphia to take the first game from Pittsburg here today, 4 to 0. Pittsburg won the second game, 7 to 5. In the last game Mamaux and Chalmers started and both were forced to give way to rescue pitchers. In the seventh inning, with the bases filled, Schultz batted for Mamaux and doubled over Whitted's head scoring three men and later scoring himself on the squeeze play when Carey bunted in front of the plate. American Distance Swimmers Heroes of Remarkable Feats

CHARLES TOTH.

CHARLES DURBOROW

Durborrow recently conquered the Chesapeake tide-water swim, between Cape May and Cape Henry.

He also swam over 34 miles, continuously in river current.

He was the sixth person to make the swim to Boston Light.

Tot holds the record for continuous swimming without pause. 15h. 47m.

English Channel Swim a Snap for U. S. Natators

Feats of Durborow, Toth, Dowling and Others Make Performance of Capt. Webb and Burgess Seem Commonplace by Comparison.

AMERICAN long-distance swimmers lead the world. In no branch of water sports have Americans shown more conclusive superiority, of recent years, than in long-distance swimming.

There has been developed in this country a type of merman totally unknown abroad, the exponent of aquatic endurance who uses modern strokes irrespective of the length of course to be covered and who has learned to hold them with machine-like regularity for hours upon hours.

Webb and Burgess, the only two swimmers to have so far succeeded in crossing the English Channel, are held up as the greatest distance paddlers of all time; yet there is convincing evidence at hand to prove that they would now be completely outclassed in actual tests with our champions.

Burgess, who made the trip from Dover to Cape Grinez in 22 hours 35 minutes, swam the breast stroke, had poor form, and stopped every half hour to rest, or to take solid nourishment and liquid refreshment. His average speed, including stops, was less than one mile an hour.

Durborow's Remarkable Feats.

Compare this trip with the 19¾ miles swim, across tide, made by Charles Durborow of Philadelphia, in Delaware Bay, a couple of seasons ago. He swam the trudgeon all the way, paused not a minute either to rest or take food—he never eats or drinks on test of endurance—and finished fresh and strong in 14 hours 15 minutes, having maintained an even pace of around 43 minutes to the mile.

Considering, then, that conditions are virtually the same over the two courses, both square across tide and subject to the influence of wind and weather, it is a safe estimate that Durborow could cut Burgess' Channel record by about six hours, if able to continue for a couple of hours at the same gait and thus last for 16 to 17 hours. None who has followed the work of the big Philadelphian will doubt that he would stay on even longer if required of him.

A Few of Durborow's Rivals.

But Durborow is only one of our leading distance swimmers. Robert Dowling of New York, who last summer covered the 34 miles (with tide) around Manhattan Island in 13 hours 45 minutes, and never turned a hair, is considerably faster than the Quaker City man, being able to sprint his 100 yards close to one minute.

Charles Toth of Boston, holder of the time record of 15 hours 47 minutes for continuous swimming, is also a devotee of modern methods and usually speedy.

Alfred Brown of New York, the professional champion, uses the trudgeon in excellent style and has held it without pause for about 15 hours. Henry Miron of Boston, Raymond Boyle of Pittsburg, and one or two others have done almost as well with up-to-date strokes.

One and all, these men could, beyond question, cross the Channel in 18 hours or under, provided they found conditions as favorable as did Webb and Burgess, who made the journey in a smooth sea, with the water at a temperature of about 60 degrees.

All told, the belief is fully warranted that American distance swimmers now lead the world.

Nation's Health Worries Kinsella — The Facts About Joe Kelly.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Io., July 15.—The "movies" are blamed by Dick Kinsella, now scout for the Yankees, for some of the alleged lack of interest in baseball on the part of youths. "Stand on the corner here and give a quarter to the first five you see," he suggested. "You will see that first they drop in at a soda fountain and then they'll be in a 'movie' theater for the rest of the afternoon. It's not only the baseball situation which worries me—it's the health of the youngsters as well. They will sit in a stuffy theater for hours when they ought to be out enjoying the fresh air they need."

CHICAGO, July 15.—Joe Kelly, whose purchase at a cost of more than $12,000 cash and a couple of Cub players to boot was the season's sensation in the trading line, has a batting average for the year so far of .298, which puts him practically in the .300 class. Latest available figures on the star whose work has been a factor in Indianapolis' showing are as follows:

CHICAGO, July 15.—Waivers have been asked by the Giants on Red Dooin, the famous catcher, once manager of the Phillies, according to reports reaching Chicago. It is said he is among the possible candidates for manager of the Cincinnati club should one of the bidders for Herzog prove successful.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 15.—Printers from all parts of the United States, who attend the ninth annual tournament week of the National Union Printers' Baseball League here in August, will have an opportunity to see John Aitken, Charley Merz, Gil Anderson and Howard Wilcox give a few thrillers in automobile racing cars. The four pilots have agreed to drive cars in a special 25-mile race at the speedway on Wednesday, Aug. 9, as one of the features of the meeting.

All entries of baseball teams have not been received, but it is believed the typographical locals of most of the larger cities will have teams entered. Two trophies are to be given to the winning nine, one the August Herrmann cup, which changes hands as often as the pennant, and the other a handsome silver trophy offered by a monotype company of Philadelphia, which becomes the permanent property of the team.

Famous Harness Horses at Cleveland Ready for Grand Circuit Meeting

CLEVELAND, O., July 15.—Two hundred and twenty-seven horses are nominated to start in the 19 events which are fixtures for the opening Grand Circuit meeting over the North Randall track here the week of July 17. The entries average 12 to each race. In addition to these entries here will be another event to take the place of the 2:21 trot, which failed to fill to the satisfaction of the local officials and has been declared off.

The big event of the week's program is the 2:08 trot, the Ohio State, with a $3000 purse attached. A close second is the free-for-all pace, with $1200 purse. In the Ohio State are entered a bunch of fast young horses who made names for themselves in colt races last year, but are appearing for the first time this season in the big stake events on the Grand Circuit. Perhaps the most prominent of them are Peter Mac, a Cleveland horse, who is touted to be a coming two-minute performer, and Springan, the San Francisco trotter, who won the $20,000 stake at the Panama-Pacific Exposition last year. Others of fame are Bacelli, a Cleveland entry, and Guy Nella of Memphis. This same field will go into the M. & M. stake at Detroit after the Cleveland meeting. In the free-for-all pace are included such renowned speed merchants at Directum I, 1:56¾, who, along with Russell Boy, 2:02¼, is entered by Thomas W. Murphy of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Napoleon Direct, with "Pop" E. F. Geers up, will also get into this event.

Other secondary feature races are the Edwards $3000 stake for 2:10 pacers, the Forest City Sweepstakes, with $500 added money, for 2-year-old trotters; the Randall Sweepstakes, with $500 added for 3-year-old trotters, and the Fasig Sweepstakes, with $500 added for 3-year-old trotters, and the Tavern "Steak," with $3000 up, for trotters who have never won more than $2000 nor have gone faster than 2:14¼.

RUBE OLDRING IN GAME

Former Athletic Gets Two Hits Out of Five Tries and Steals Base.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Detroit won a long-drawn-out, poorly pitched game from New York today, 9 to 7. The visitors landed on Mogridge for seven runs in the third inning, the last four coming when Burns made a home run with the bases full. After New York tied the score in the fourth innings, Burns drove in Detroit's eighth run with a single in the fifth, and another in the ninth with a sacrifice fly. Manager Donovan of New York and Second Baseman Young of Detroit were ordered off the field for protesting decisions. Score:

PHILADELPHIA, July 15.—Chicago won both games from Philadelphia, 4 to 1 and 1 to 0. Only one error was recorded in the two contests. The first game was marked by excellent twirling. Scott had the better of a battle with Sheehan, two of whose bases on balls resulted in runs while Scott's passes had no effect on the scoring. Benz had a duel with Bush in the second game, the lone tally being produced on a base on balls to McMullen, Benz's sacrifice and Weaver's triple. Score:

At Belleville tomorrow, the Ben Millers and Southerns fight it out in a double header. The Manewals and Brockmeyers battle at C. B. C., while the Wabadas go to Alton for a contest with the Blues.

M. A. A. SWIMMERS GIVEN NO FAVORS BY HANDICAP MAN

Four Entries in Five-Mile Swim Today Are All on Scratch, or Very Near It.

LAUBIS IS BY HIMSELF

River Champion Concedes Every Entry in Today's Race From 2 to 14 Minutes.

From the list of handicaps made up by Joe Forshaw and his assistants for the fifth annual five-mile handicap river swim of the Western Rowing Club today, it looks as if the quartet entered by Tom Whitaker of the M. A. A. is the class of the lot. For it will be found that the color bearers of the Cherry Diamond have been awarded the lowest handicaps.

As has been predicted, there is only one scratch man, Herman Laubis, present A. A. U. 10-mile champion and the real star of Whitaker's team. In the race this afternoon Laubis is favored to land the time prize, although there are several entrants who are expected to give him a hard race. His two teammates, Burke and Sparks, are picked to fight it out with Laubis for the time honors.

Although this will be Sparks' first race over the distance, he has been making such good time in practice that the A. A. U. handicappers shoved him off with only a three-minute allowance. Halpin Burke is given 2m. 30s., while Miles Ecker, the other member of the Cherry Diamond squad, also practically a newcomer, has a four-minute allowance. All the M. A. A. paddlers have been training at Laughlin's Lake and Whitaker pronounces them in first-class shape.

Four Men on Limit Mark.

Four swimmers, all of them unattached, are given the limit, 14 minutes. They are Herbert Cann, John Bock, William Haupt and Harold Emery, the latter from Belleville. While none of these is known, one may spring a surprise and land first place, although none is conceded a chance for the time honors.

Two former winners, "Bebs" Johnson of the C. A. C., who landed first place in 1914, and George Bekerede, the St. Charles youth, who finished ahead of all rivals last year, are allowed 7 minutes. Both these youths were placed at the limit in the races which they copped. Bekerede in 1915 also took third time prize, which proves that he is somewhat of a long-distance star. Corcoran, who was second last year, is given 8 minutes.

Over Two Dozen Starters.

In all, 26 paddlers will start in today's event. There are 16 prizes, which gives practically every paddler a chance to land a medal of some sort. The event will start promptly at 4 o'clock at Eads Bridge, with the finish coming at the W. R. C. clubhouse. All the paddlers and their attendants as well as officials are requested to be on hand at 2 o'clock.

Fountain Rothwell, Custom Collector, will patrol the course, and all those who trail the paddlers in launches are requested to stay on the east side of the course, so as not to interfere with the swimmers.

Officials for today's race are as follows: Dr. C. W. Bassett, starter; Marion F. Parker, referee; Dr. R. S. Vitt, honorary referee; William Westhus, clerk of course; Dr. P. E. Eckardt, assistant clerk of course; Joe Forshaw, Jake Karl, William Surbled, timers; George Schmitt, J. L. Loachim, Ed Koenig, F. Kirchner, G. Minges, Ed Colbrunn, August Lehmann and T. C. Eggers, judges of course; H. C. Menne, Frank Sebastian, Gus Edelman, William Williamson and Al Mandeville, judges of finish; John P. Newell, press.

The swimmers and their handicaps for today's race follow:

A. A. U. officials are beginning to recognize St. Louis as a swimming center. This is shown by the list of awards for the coming outdoor championships. This city has been given four—two for women and two for men. Against this, Chicago gets only one in each, while New York gets only the 440 for men and women's mile championship. The dates for the different title swims are as follows:

Men's championships—Aug. 5, 440 yards, New York Athletic Club, Travers Island, N. Y.; Aug. 12, 880 yards, Missouri A. A., St. Louis; Aug. 19, high dive, South Shore Country Club, Chicago; Aug. 19, one mile, Los Angeles A. C., Los Angeles; Sept. 4, long distance (10 miles), Missouri A. A., St. Louis; Sept. 4, 100-yard straightaway, Honolulu.

Women's championships—Aug. 12, 440 yards and high dive, South Shore Country Club, Chicago; Aug. 20, two-mile swim, Western Rowing Club, St. Louis. The 880-yard swim and the mile event will be held by the Columbian A. C. of St. Louis and the Women's National Life Saving League of New York respectively, during August, on dates yet to be fixed.

'Twas Ever Thus.

'TWAS in the prime
Of summer time,
That gladsome time of year,
When, as before,
In days of yore,
Our teams were in the rear.

Our boys survive
The pennant drive,
From April to July;
Then, like the rose,
Toward the close,
They fade away and die.

But in the spring,
Again we'll sing,
The same old pennant tune;
We'll scan the dope,
And live on hope,
Through April, May and June.

Then, in July,
The alibi
Will be in evidence;
And in the fall
Our heroes all
Will look like 30 cents.

'SAILOR' JERABEK MEETS SALVATORE HERE NEXT WEEK

Matchmaker Sofka of South Broadway Books Welterweights for Feature.

Johnny Salvatore of St. Paul and Charles "Sailor" Jerabek of St. Louis will meet in the main event of the South Broadway Athletic Club's boxing show at the Motordrome, Grand avenue and Meramec street, next Thursday night. Matchmaker Matt Sofka of the S. B. A. C., in making the announcement last night, said that Salvatore had agreed to make 147 pounds at 3 o'clock on the day of the bout for Jerabek. The bout is scheduled to go 12 rounds.

In signing Salvatore, Sofka has obtained one of the best welterweights in the Middle West. He is described as a slashing fighter, who isn't possessed of a great deal of cleverness, but a hard puncher with either hand and one who fills every minute of the bout with action.

Salvatore's reputation is probably wider than that of Jerabek, but the local boxer asked Sofka to bring on any man in the country who was willing to do 147 pounds for him. In Salvatore, Jerabek will likely have his hands full Thursday.

Before Sofka signed Salvatore, he insisted that the St. Paul athlete must come to St. Louis several days in advance of the bout so that an idea of his ability could be obtained during his workouts here. Sofka yesterday wired transportation to Salvatore and his manager and they will probably be here Monday.

Sofka will arrange the other two bouts for the program today or tomorrow.

Columbus Easy Winner.

COLUMBUS, O., July 15.—Columbus defeated Milwaukee, 11 to 5. Not until after the losers had all of their runs, largely on account of Steil's misplays, did the home team start scoring. Chappelle's inside the field homer with two on in the sixth, put Columbus ahead. Score:

LUBRICATION IS NECESSARY TO PREVENT WEAR

Mechanical Expert of the Post-Dispatch Points Out Reasons for Oilnig and Parts Needing Oil.

By WILLIAM H. STEWART JR.,
President Stewart Automobile School.

The object of lubrication is to prevent wear as much as possible. When properly oiled the metal surfaces do not touch each other, but are held apart by a film of oil or grease, thus reducing the wear to a minimum. Should the lubrication become inadequate the metal surfaces will come together and rapid wear result.

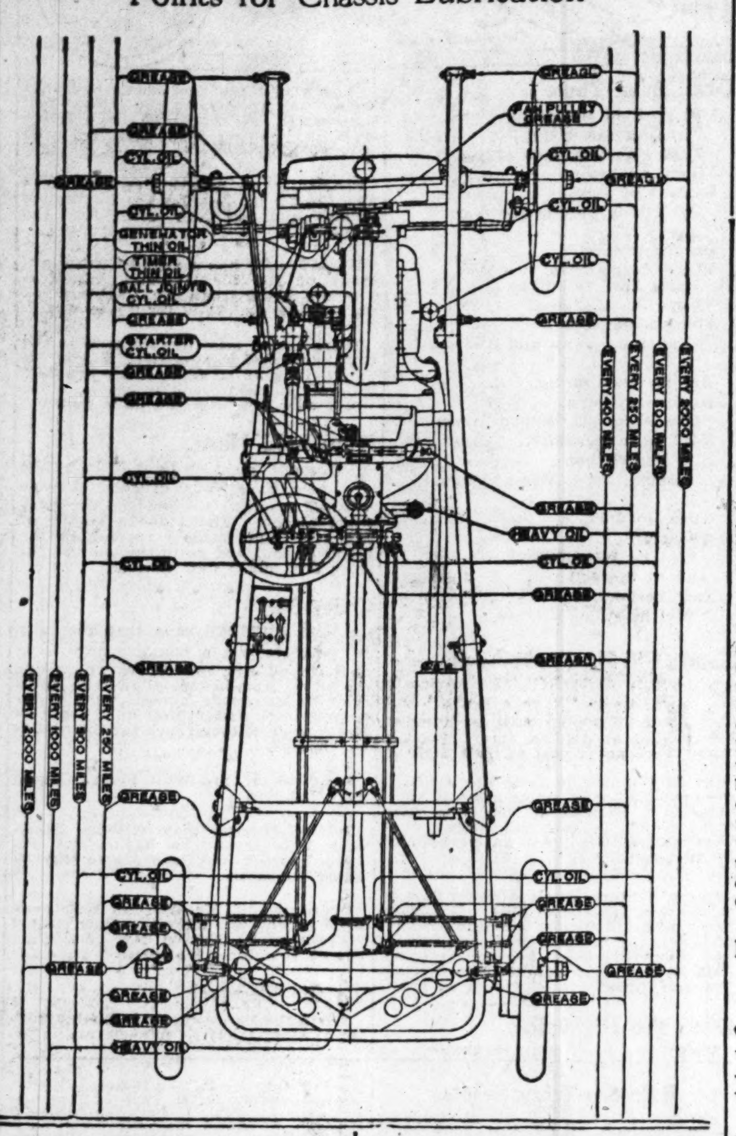
Positively the worst thing that can happen to a bearing is to have it run with insufficient lubrication. A few seconds of such abuse will cause more wear than is easily imagined.

Undoubtedly the most vital unit of the chassis is the motor. Special attention must be given the oiling system or serious damage will result. Once the cylinders or the bearings are scored, considerable expense is entailed for repairs. In warm weather a medium grade cylinder oil will be found most satisfactory, but in cold weather a lighter grade should be used. Certainly the most serious abuse is to allow the engine to run short of oil. At intervals of 2000 miles or less all oil should be drained out of the engine and the interior of the case washed with kerosene or gasoline. The old oil may be filtered through several layers of cloth until it becomes clear and then may be used again in the engine. The ideal way, however, is to replace the supply with fresh oil. This will be found economical, especially if the old oil can be used to advantage elsewhere.

The expense of replacing the oil will be amply repaid by increased life of the engine. In spite of all that can be done, considerable dust and grit will get into the engine, in the air through the carburetor and will work down into the oil, causing it to foul more rapidly than one might expect. In addition to this, carbon from the combustion chamber and worn metal from moving surfaces will collect in the oil.

It should be hardly necessary to say that it pays to use first-class, high-grade oil and to keep it clean. This is of most vital importance.

Points for Chassis Lubrication



One does not have to be a mechanic to appreciate the necessity for oiling every working part. It is much better to do it too often than not enough. A carful study of the chart should impress one with the importance of close inspection and attention to each part of the whole chassis.

The chart is valuable because it shows you at a glance how often various parts of the chassis should receive fresh oil or grease. One should not begrudge the time and attention necessary to attend to these matters because with automatic oiling systems the chassis certainly demands little attention.

THOSE ILLINOIS ROADS

C. P. Woodworth, Moon dealer at Macomb, Ill., wrote in to the Moon Motor Car Co. this week about a trip his wife and two sons made recently in a Moon car from St. Louis to Macomb.

They found the roads almost impassable in some places. Three times the car went through water up to the doors and in several places the mud was up to the hubs. But the car got through without assistance.

Woodworth writes that no trouble was experienced with the car in any way and expressed his satisfaction with the performance of the car.

FAST RACERS AT KANSAS CITY MEET

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 15.—Jean Domenjoz, the famous upside-down and loop-the-loop aviator from the European theater of war, will be engaged to perform his sensational and spectacular stunts as an added attraction at the opening of the new Kansas City speedway, Saturday, July 22.

Since they were able to secure Domenjoz, the speedway officials are now confident that they will experience less difficulty in getting his partner—Resta, the little British-Italian Peugot driver, known as "the idol of the speedways." They will tempt the latter with the largest sum of appearance money ever offered a speed king when they meet in conference with him at Omaha the last of the week.

The fast and formidable field of starters that has been already secured for the dedicatory speed events has caused the officers of the local racing course to predict that the spacious grandstand will be practically sold out before the day of the contests.

Eddie Rickenbacher, speedway champion of the world, and Earl Cooper, road racing champion of the world, both have strong followings here. Others to start are: Dave Lewis, the former teammate of Earl Cooper; Pete Henderson, Rickenbacher's running mate; Billy Chandler, the "Charley Chaplin of race kings" and captain of the Crawford team; Art Johnson, teammate of Chandler; Otto Henning, pilot of the famous old Ogren, holder of the world's 100-mile record on an earth speedway; "Millionaire Charley" Devlin and his teammate, "Lord Hughie" Hughes, the distinguished driver and aviator; Jess Callahan and W. W. Brown.

DEALERS CONTRACT FOR $100,000,000 IN CARS

Recently there gathered at the Willys-Overland factory 250 distributors from various sections of the country. All were clamoring for more Overlands and Willys-Knights.

Now it happens that the Overland company is about to introduce certain new types of cars, but, in view of uncertain market conditions and limited material sources, the price of the cars for the fall season had not yet been established. The distributors were informed to this effect, but, one and all, they wanted a guarantee that they would be apportioned a definite number of cars for the fall business, irrespective of price and other details. The result was that when they left the plant those alert distributors had left contracts with the company calling for between $75,000,000 and $100,000,000 worth of cars to be delivered between now and Jan. 1, 1917.

NO AMATEURS IN LONG HILL CLIMB

Following a conference at New York a few days ago between the American Automobile Association contest board officials and M. W. Colwell, who is managing the Pike's Peak hill climbing contests for the fastest racing cars and motorcycles, Aug. 10, 11 and 12, it was decided to eliminate the originally proposed amateur automobile even. All the pilots of racing cars will be professionals. This step was taken at the request of the management, who decided that "safety-first" should apply to the contests. While there is little danger of experienced professional drivers meeting with mishaps on the steep incline from Colorado Springs to the summit of Pike's Peak, the matter of passing upon the ability of amateurs would be a difficult matter.

The professional pilot who drives for his living considers racing all in his day's work and really takes fewer chances than the average amateur. The "pro" seldom becomes excited, whereas the amateur often "loses his head," hence it has been decided to abandon event No. 8.

In the competition, however, are a number of drivers who are really amateurs in that they race for sport, and yet are classed as professionals because they have driven against "pros" in order to meet the foremost drivers. However, they are really experienced pilots, and know how to handle fast cars. Caleb Bragg, for example, also has driven for fun, although classed as a "pro;" Harry S. Harkness, Ira Vail, Charles Devlin, George Theobald, and others who have piloted machines in big events, are in the same class.

The entry of a Pathfinder Special this week is further evidence of the interest the great hill-climbing event is inspiring among manufacturers who ordinarily do not race. They realize that the 12½-mile ascent up the highest road in the world on Pike's Peak offers the most strenuous test for speed and motor stamina to be found anywhere in the country, and this revival of hill-climbing contests—only more so than others in the past—will probably see a large field added to the present list before the closing date. The present entries include Cadillacs, Studebaker, Hudsons, Peugeot, two mysterious cars from a large factory (the name being kept secret at present), the probable entries of Chalmers, Scripps-Booth, Stutz, and others.

The Vehicle Top and Supply Co. is showing the new Stromberg carburetor for Ford cars which operates a great saving in gasoline. Tests made by Allan H. Clark on his own car gave 30 miles to the gallon of gasoline.

DODGE BROTHERS' CAR AS WARSHIP EQUIPMENT

The Navy Department intends to experiment with motor cars as an adjunct to the marine service. It is the belief that where marines are landed for any purpose, the movement of officers can be greatly facilitated by the use of an automobile. In a picture sent to the Tate-Gillham Co. of St. Louis, a Dodge Brothers' car is shown being swung aboard the battleship New Jersey at the Charlestown Navy Yard. It is the "preparedness car" which made extensive military observations throughout New England.

COLE ANNOUNCES THREE NEW MODELS

With no previous hint as to its plans, the Cole Motor Car Co. of Indianapolis again has startled manufacturers, dealers and owners throughout the country with the announcement of an all-year-round type of eight-cylinder car. The Cole-Springfield body, as it is known, is designed to give the owner all the advantages of both a luxurious touring car and a costly limousine in one car, which sells for $2195. This car, which is a seven-passenger automobile, is called the Cole-Springfield Toursedan.

There are two other Cole models equipped with the new Cole-Springfield body. One is known as the Tourcoupe, selling for $2195, and the other is the Cole Towncar, listed at [illegible].

"The Cole-Springfield 'Eight' is merely another step in the manufacture of automobiles to satisfy the buying public and give motor car purchasers the greatest possible value for their money," said A. F. Knobloch, general manager of the Cole Motor Car Co., when the announcement was made concerning the new body. "We have added it to the Cole line because it completely fills a want long felt by the motoring public for a really practical and sensible, all-weather, all-purpose car."

MITCHELL BUSINESS IS REORGANIZED

Formation of the Mitchell Motors Co. to acquire the business and assets of the Mitchell-Lewis Motor Co., makers of the Mitchell automobile, is announced by A. G. Becker & Co. of Chicago, and Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. of New York.

The capitalization of the new company will consist of 125,000 shares of no par value. It is announced that a large part of the stock has been sold and the balance is offered at $67. At this price the total capitalization of the new company will be $8,125,000, as against net earning of $815,756.37 during the 10 months, ending Oct. 31, 1915, and net earnings of $1,400,000 for the current fiscal year.

The present capacity of the Mitchell plant, which has been built by John W. Bate, the well-known efficiency engineer, is 15,000 cars per annum, which is said to be capable of extension to 30,000 by the addition of machinery costing $100,000. The Mitchell-Lewis statement of assets shows strong financial condition with net current assets of $2,000,000, nearly half of which is cash on hand.

A. L. Dyke of St. Louis, publisher of Dyke's Automobile and Gasoline Engine Encyclopedia, is now revising his book, which is done each year to keep in touch with the changes in motor car construction. At the present time three carloads of paper have been used in the production of the book, which will have 816 pages and 2360 illustrations.

ST. LOUISAN WINS NONSTOP CONTEST

In 206 cities of the United States a Saxon Six touring car last Saturday began a nonstop run of 300 miles.

The results of the contest brought out some new support of the economy of operation of Saxon cars. As fast as the 300 miles were completed, the dealers telegraphed to the factory the results of the run, paying particular attention to the gasoline consumption.

Tabulation of these results brought out the fact that the average mileage of the 206 cars was 23.5 miles to the gallon of gasoline—a record for fuel economy in a six-cylinder automobile.

This nonstop run was not one limited to the smooth streets and boulevards. It embraced all kinds of country roads. Each dealer selected his own route, and while an effort was made to eliminate well-nigh impassable roads, many of the highways were not in the finest condition for motor travel.

All in all, 61,800 miles were run Saturday by Saxon Sixes and this is a distance equal to nearly 20 times that between New York and San Francisco. In every case a stock touring car was used for the test and special fuel-saving appliances of any kind were barred from the contest.

While designed to determine finally the average gasoline consumption of the Saxon Six, the nonstop run also was a good-natured race between dealers for a record in gasoline mileage for individual cars. The Saxon Motor Car Corporation offered a silver loving cup for the dealer making the highest mileage on a gallon of gasoline. This was won by the Frye Motor Co. of St. Louis, Mo., J. C. Martin Ghio driving. The average mileage for 300 miles made by this company's stock car was 34.66 miles to the gallon.

GIRLS MOTOR CYCLING TO PACIFIC COAST

To cross the continent alone via motor cycle is the adventuresome idea of two New York girls, the Misses Adeline and Augusta Van Buren, who left their city July 4 bound for San Francisco. They have made careful preparation for their hazardous journey, their motor cycles being specially-designed solo machines, equipped with Firestone non-skid tires.

This trip is not due to a fad of any kind. Practical common sense is back of it. Both of these daring girls are firm believers in National Preparedness and they hope to advertise the cause by this ocean-to-ocean motor cycle trip. Further, they believe a successful journey will prove that in time of stress women can render real practical help as dispatch riders.

This feat of motorcycling across the continent has never before been accomplished by a woman. Upon their return they will offer to organize and train for the Special Aid Society of New York City a group of girls who will rival men as efficient motor cycle dispatch riders.

TRUCK PLANTS COMBINE

The Commerce Motor Car Co. of Detroit and the Signal Motor Truck Co. of Detroit, manufacturers of commercial vehicles and trucks, have been merged into the Signal-Commerce Motor Truck Co., under a holding company of $6,000,000 capitalization and backed by Detroit capital.

This announcement, the first of its kind in the motor truck field and in view of the character of the two companies and the men back of them, of the greatest significance, was made by Thomas Neal, who will head the new combination in association with present executives of the two companies and other men of wide experience in the commercial vehicle field. Mr. Neal was formerly president of the General Motors, later chairman of the board of directors, and is now vice president of that company.

While the merger will be operated under a holding company until present contracts are filled, it is the intention ultimately to combine them in one complete plant. There is ground for belief that eventually the merger will include certain motor truck accessory firms.

Prof. R. L. Barton of Washington University is touring to Port Huron, Mich., in his Viele car.

Walter Baldenecker is touring through New York in his Velie car.

St. Louis Sectional Garage Co. and Manchester Manufacturing Co. Have Amalgamated.

Announcement was made yesterday of the amalgamation of the St. Louis Sectional Garage Co. with the Manchester Manufacturing Co.

The trade response to the sectional garage was so immediate, according to Paul Peltier, manager of the company, that it was apparent that a steady demand existed for other sectional buildings. Consequently it was decided to amalgamate with the Manchester Manufacturing Co. and to place on the market sectional houses of every character, such as hunting and fishing clubs, boathouses, playhouses, cottages and real estate offices.

NEW TRUCK PLANT.

The St. Louis Motor Truck Co. has been reorganized and the business taken over by a new company to be known as the Anchor Auto Co. The company will continue to manufacture the Paulding truck at the former plant at 4274 Easton avenue. J. B. Felkel is manager of the new company, and Herman Boedeker, who was with the original company, is retained as superintendent of the new company.

BIG FIRESTONE FIGURES

Since 1910-11, when the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. moved into the new enormous factory, the sales have grown from $7,462,581.17 to $25,187,884.33, making a total increase of 257 per cent for the past five years. This past year, 1915-16, the increase to June was 38 per cent over the remarkable showing of last year.

When the new factory was erected five years ago it was called the largest exclusive tire plant in America. Yet, to take care of the Firestone business since then it has had to be tripled in size.

This has been done, wing by wing, and because of the foresight of the builders these additions have been made without loss in production efficiency.

CROSS - CONTINENT TOUR

Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Hall of Los Angeles reached St. Louis Thursday night, coming in over the Santa Fe trail. Mrs. Hall drove the car the entire distance and received a medal from one of the motor magazines. The car is a 1917 Peerless roadster and has gone 3500 miles without a puncture. Mr. and Mrs. Hall are on an automobile trip which is to last a year and cover the entire United States.

NOVEL REFERENCE BOOK

A departure from the usual style of catalogue is the new reference book of the Phoenix Auto Supply Co. of St. Louis, just issued. This book contains about 75 pages devoted to the Bosch magneto and equipment with a listing of every part and description of its application, and it also covers a number of other specialties which are handled by this company in a very thorough manner. So complete is it that the Bosch company has asked that copies of it be sent to every agent of that company, which has been done. The book also contains a large number of pages devoted to Ford specialties and is a very unusual publication.

RENEWED CAR SHOW

The Cadillac Automobile Co. of St. Louis has announced an exhibition of renewed Cadillac cars. This is the first time in St. Louis an exhibition of renewed or used cars has ever been made. The display is a surprise in that instead of there being shown a number of ugly, disreputable junk piles, there are a number of various models of Cadillac cars, all looking as though they had just rolled out of the factory. All of the cars shown have been rebuilt and repainted.

CULTIVATING RUBBER.

AKRON, O., July 15.—So many industries are face to face with constantly decreasing supplies of raw materials and ever-increasing demands due to population growth, that the contrast afforded by the rubber busines looms up vividly.

In 1905, according to figures given out for publication by the B. F. Goodrich Co., uncultivated or "native" rubber comprised 60,800 tons, while in 1914 the production had dropped back to 60,000 tons. But cultivated or plantation rubber in the same space of time had risen from 145 tons to 64,000 tons.

FORECASTS GREAT SUPPLIES.

In 1917, the Goodrich company estimates that while native rubber production will have fallen to [illegible] tons, plantation rubber will amount to 147,000 tons. By 1921, it is predicted that [illegible] tons of cultivated rubber will be available, while but 30,000 tons of native rubber will be produced.

93% Jeffery Built The Roll-Edge Jeffery Four

YOU can tell a good deal about the "stand up" quality of a car by looking at it. You can tell even more by knowing how it is built—and by whom. When you look at the 93% Jeffery-Built Roll-Edge Jeffery Four you will see extra value in every line and detail.

You will see extra value in the smooth, deep Brewster-green finish, extra value in the wonderful roll-edge body—extra value in the extra-length, easy-riding springs—in the deep, body-fitting, divan-type upholstery—in the generous tonneau.

But you cannot see—no matter how experienced you are—the quality of the materials of this 93% Jeffery-built car. You cannot see the careful processes—the infinite labor and foresight denoted by the brief phrase "Jeffery-built."

All the steels used are the finest alloys—heat-processed by Jeffery engineers in the Jeffery factory.

There is no dependence on parts-makers. The Thomas B. Jeffery Company stands squarely behind every essential part of the car and behind every process used in making it.

Extra Jeffery-built quality is in every part of the Jeffery Four. To you that means extra value, extra reliability, extra "stand up" quality.

Come in and see the car—NOW. Our allotment is limited and the cars are going fast. The factory cannot increase its output because it cannot buy material now at the price they paid last year—the price on which the unusually low cost is figured.

50 8/10 Per Cent Will Have No Other Car

Hupmobile Owners who have discarded higher priced cars 24 2/10%
11,000 Owners vote Hupmobile efficiency 99%

THE BUSINESS that endures is the sound, strong business, whose customers keep on coming back. Judged by that high standard, the Hupmobile shows a record that few, if any, can rival.

Figures just compiled from our service station statistics prove that it is unique in the number of those who repeat their orders from year to year.

No Other Car At Any Price

It is part of Hupmobile policy to keep in close contact with owners by our intensive system of service. This gives us invaluable information from a dozen different angles. Our fingers are on the pulse of public opinion. We know what people want, and how they are pleased.

If we have erred even a trifle, a danger signal is flashed to us from all parts of the country.

Incidentally, repeat sales tell us how many of our owners cannot be won away by any other car at any other price.

And the latest, freshest figures prove that high-price and low-price—four cylinders and multi-cylinders—are equally powerless to influence 50 8/10 per cent of our sales.

In other words more than half of all Hupmobile owners keep on buying, year after year.

Stop and think of the powers of resistance—the superiorities—the Hupmobile must possess to hold these owners to their allegiance.

Millions of dollars are expended to tempt them away. The lure of a lower price on the one hand; confusing claims of multi-cylinder performance on the other.

Neither Price Nor, Type Tempts Them

But the 50 per cent phalanx stands fast year after year. Convinced, in the one case, that a lower price cannot compensate for the loss of Hupmobile goodness.

Convinced, in the other case, that more cylinders can add nothing to that Hupmobile efficiency which eleven thousand owners have rated at 99 per cent. And convinced, in the last instance, that no other car can yield better performance.

What They Get In Performance

In high gear work, they see their Hupmobiles outdoing cars that have more cylinders, or cost more money.

In pulling power and quick getaway, they see nothing under another name that they do not have.

In flexibility, they find themselves relieved of gear-shifting to an amazing extent.

In smooth, steady motor action—in the effortless development of power, the swift response to the throttle—they believe they have the motor car maximum.

In the Hupmobile service system, they know they are getting more than any other car offers: expert inspection, adjustment and care each month for eight months by trained Hupmobile experts at Hupmobile service stations. A service they pay for with coupons which we supply free of cost.

So they are content, this 50 per cent, to stake their preference on the Hupmobile.

The Mark of Superior Motor Car Service

Standard Hupmobile Performance

GOES to a speed of 25 miles an hour, from a stand, in 10 seconds.

Throttles to a man's walking pace, on high gear, without bucking or jerking.

Picks up, without gear change, instantly and smoothly.

Climbs the average low-gear hill, on high gear.

Pulls through sand and mud, on high gear.

Develops great pulling power on high gear.

Registers a minimum of vibration, at any speed, on any gear.

AUTO NEWS and GOSSIP

The Jeffery Distributing Co. reports the following sales of Jeffery cars last week. John C. Reid, 6327 Berlin; Nat Kahn, Union Market; John Beiser, 3150 Arsenal street, and Harry F. Isler, Hamilton, Ill.

George Weber of the Weber Implement and Auto Co. has for his own use a special Mitchell seven-passenger car which is painted cream white with gold line striping.

The American Brazing and Welding Co., at Twenty-third and Olive streets, has added a building, 70x100, to its plant which will be used for truck and other garaging.

It is announced that the transfer of the stock of the Thomas B. Jeffery Co. to Charles W. Nash and others of Flint, Mich., will not make any change in the local representation of the car.

J. D. Cathey, late of the Regal Buggy Co., has been made manager of the uptown branch of the Chevrolet Motor Co. of St. Louis on the Locust-Lindell cutoff.

Theodore A. Barthel, vice president and general maanger of the King Motor Car Co. of Detroit, was in St. Louis last week visiting the local distributor, the Johnson Automobile Co.

L. J. Wilson has joined the office force of the Mississippi Valley Motor Co., Oakland, wholesale distributors in the St. Louis district. He was formerly with the Buick company.

Harry V. White has been promoted to assistant branch manager of the St. Louis Ford branch, vice T. L. Huber, who has gone to New Orleans. H. L. Bagley will take charge of the Ford sub-branch in East St. Louis.

James E. Newell, president of the Newell Motor Car Co., Haynes distributors, is at the factory of the Haynes Automobile Co., Kokomo, Ind., to arrange for a larger allotment of Haynes cars. The Newell Motor Car Co. and its agents have been making excellent deliveries on Haynes cars and they are opening up new territory and increasing their sales force.

When the President's order for mobilization of the national guard came, 210 men in the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co.'s organization were affected and rallied to the colors. Many executive and engineering experts whose services to the company are invaluable, are now in camp, among whom are L. L. King, advertising manager; E. J. Welsh, assistant advertising manager, and Ralph H. Upson, Goodyear's arenautical expert and world's champion balloonist.

TEST WAS CONCLUSIVE

As a result of the car owners' service test held by a register stock eight-cylinder King automobile on the Sheepshead Bay Motor Speedway and Long Island highways under the sanction and supervision of the American Automobile Association, will the trend of education for the motoring public be changed? This is a question being discussed as results of the new kind of test become known. Manufacturers are given the question consideration; automobile dealers are deeply interested in it. This is all brought about, officials of the King Motor Car. Co. explains, because of the interest the public has taken in the test.

Speed tests, special race cars, and records between cities are features which it is said the average motorists are only interested in because of their sensation or because of pride of ownership. The eight-cylinder King car owners' service test, held under conditions approximating what the average automobile owner has to contend with comes nearer, it is said, to compelling genuine interest.

The object of the King test was to demonstrate the endurance of a stock eight-cylinder King when operated under conditions similar to those under which an owner may operate his car, and to properly demonstrate the ability of a stock King model to withsand continued service without more than the attention necessary to keep the tanks filled and the friction surfaces lubricated.

It was demonstrated by this test of 10,850 miles, taking that as a basis of two years' mileage for the average driver, the labor expense should be less than $10, and the time consumed for attention to necessary lubrication should be about nine minutes a week.

A RECLAMATION TRUCK

The United States Government has just purchased a chain-drive Little Giant motor truck for the Department of Reclamation for service over the rough, rugged, mountainous district of North Yakima, Wash.

This Little Giant truck will be called upon to perform feats in the transportation of building material, supplies and commissary articles in a country where the topography is such as to demand the utmost in power and integral strength.

TOURING TO NEW YORK

Louis T. Bang is touring from Emporia, Kan., to New York City in his Haynes "Light Six."

He told James E. Newell, president of the Newell Motor Car Co., local distributors for the Haynes car, that he made 457 miles in two days without trouble or inconvenience. "It travels liks a bird," says Mr. Bang who is a brother of George A. Bang of the Banner Creamery Co. of this city, "and she comes through every test with flying colors."

TWO MORE ROAD RECORDS CAPTURED BY CHALMERS

Clipping over three hours from the best previous time between Dallas and San Antonio, a Chalmers Six-30 driven by W. W. Moriss, Jr. of Dallas, Texas, has just hung up the fifth fast national road record to be captured by a 3400 R. P. M. Chalmers in the past month.

According to a wire received by Paul Smith, vice-president of the Chalmers selling division, Moriss' record was made under conditions so discouraging as to make fast traveling extremely dangerous.

"Checked out of Dallas by Clerk Fred Meyers of the Adolphus Hotel, we made three hundred and two miles to San Antonio in nine hours and twenty-two minutes," read Moriss' wire. "Arriving at San Antonio we were checked in by R. S. Israel, auto editor of the San Antonio Express, and found we had cut down the best previous road record by over three hours. In making this record, we beat the famous Katy Limited on the Missouri, Kansas & Texas line by one hour and thirty-three minutes. This is the fastest train running between the two points. Half of the distance was over black, muddy roads so rough that we thought the car would not stand up under the strain. Despite the terrific test, car and motor are in excellent shape and we can repeat the trip tomorrow. Trip has caused big sensation as our time was considered impossible over the country roads."

Just previous to the wire from Mr. Moriss a dispatch was received from Jacksonville newspapers, carrying news of a new record from Atlanta, Ga., to Jacksonville, Fla., made by a Chalmers Six-30. The car was driven by Leman Phelan and Homer George and was the same machine which lowered the Atlanta-Chattanooga road record two weeks ago. Phelan and George drove the 3400 R. P. M. Chalmers over the 355 miles in 11 hours and 59 minutes elapsed time. Four passengers were carried on the trip. heavy rain turned the roads into miniature lakes along the route and slowed up the car's time, as did several stops for tire repairs. The last fifty miles were made in a continous downpour, through mud and slush, while eighty miles of deep sand interfered.

ACCESSORY MEN MEET NEXT TUESDAY

The regular monthly meeting and dinner of the Motor Accessory Trade Association next Tuesday night is to be an al fresco affair out in the country, away from the heat and turmoil of the city. It will be held at Kammerer's Grove, on the Gravois road, about three miles west of the city limits. There an elegant supper is to be served and after the business, the Entertainment Committee, of which R. C. Buckley is chairman, has arranged a unique program, the details of which are as yet carefully guarded. Kammererer's is best reached by automobile. Members who do not have cars will be taken out to the dinner by those who are more fortunate.

PAIGE IS MOUNTAIN GOAT

Visitors at the Government Camp Hotel, situated part way up the side of Mount Hood, Ore., are enjoying, with the aid of glasses or a telescope, an unusual bit of Rocky Mountain scenery.

A Paige-Detroit touring car of the standard Fairfield model is slowly working its way to the top of Crater Rock, which is more than three-fourths of the way to the peak of Mount Hood, and the Paige being now well above the timber line is clearly visible against the snow.

This Paige won the silver cup offered by the proprietors of the Government Camp Hotel for the first automobile to reach that point during 1916. Not content with having won the price, for which nearly every dealer in Portland was trying, Mr. Doan determined to climb on up to Crater Rock.

The hotel was, when the Paige arrived, two miles by road above the snow line, and the extinct crater, now the goal, is at an elevation of 9400 feet.

The last vestige of a road ends four miles below Crater Rock, and from that point the way had to be made through heavy timber and over improvised bridges. Cleat tracks are being used to assist the car in its climb.

The ascent is very steep—in some places more than 85 per cent, and the snow on which the car rests is from 25 to 50 feet deep. Anyone acquainted with the Rockies will realise that the figures given are not exaggerated.

So far no mechanical changes have been made in the car except slight carburetor adjustments required by the rapidly increasing altitude.

HEADS BASEBALL LEAGUE

The baseball team of the Moon Motor Car Co. is taking on championship form in the Automobile League. After getting off to a bad start and losing three games straight, the team has won nine games straight and heads the league. The team is two games ahead of the Fred Campbell team. George Heising, chief engineer of the company, is manager of the team.

ENCOURAGES ENLISTMENT

At a mass meeting and farewell to Co. D, 6th O. N. G., Fostoria, Ohio, several days ago, W. O. Allen, general manager of the Allen Motor Co., voiced admirably the farewell sentiments of the people of that city and in addition encouraged further enlistment in a practical and appreciable manner.

Mr. Allen announced for his company, builders of Allen motor cars, that not only would they assure every employe enlisting, his present position, but that they would care for any families who might become destitute through the service of one on whom they are dependent.

When questioned regarding their attitude now that the crisis is apparently past, Mr. Allen stated that they believed thoroughly in the proper protection of the border with present conditions in Mexico, and that the company's promise would hold good as long as Washington saw fit to keep the militia on the border.

WRECKING TRUCK FOR WAR

A power winch, with 300 feet of steel wire cable and two capstan heads, is the feature of a new type of wrecking truck that will aid the motor truck trains in Mexico when they get into difficulties. Several of these cars are now on their way south, and others are being turned out by the Thomas B. Jeffery Co.

PAIGE
The Standard of Value and Quality

Introducing the New Series Paige Fairfield "Six-46"

In the New Series Paige Fairfield "Six-46," we introduce the most completely equipped motor car that can be purchased on the American market—absolutely irrespective of price.

This is a broad claim—a sweeping claim. But like every other statement made in the announcements of this company, it is the actual, literal Truth. Any comparative investigation will establish the fact convincingly.

And, when we speak of "complete equipment," please understand that we refer to every luxury and convenience that can contribute to the comfort of motoring.

The New Series Fairfield is a complete car—a finished car. From every standpoint it represents the last word in elegance and luxury.

Right now we might attempt to describe for you the many features that have been added to this greatest of all light Sixes. Even a partial list of accessories would startle the man who believes that extreme motoring comfort is necessarily a matter of prohibitive cost.

But we do not purpose to confine ourselves to descriptions, for this is one instance where mere words fail completely.

To appreciate this car you must see it, ride in it, drive it. Then, and then only, can you understand what a thoroughly great achievement it represents. Then, and then only, will you realize that $1375 marks the utmost investment that any one need make for the utmost in automobiling.

And please don't accept this statement lightly or too skeptically. At least do yourself justice by checking up the facts.

So let us make you a definite proposition. Go to the show room of the Paige dealer where this new car is on exhibition. Ask him to give you a thorough demonstration over any road conditions that you may select.

Then, when you return to automobile row, drive the Paige right up along side any motor car that is now offered on the American market—and compare the two feature for feature.

See for yourself whether the Fairfield is lacking in any one detail that argues for greater efficiency, comfort or luxury. See if any car—at any price—can offer more intrinsic value than the Fairfield at $1375.

If we have overstated our case, you will know it just the minute that you have completed such a comparison. If, on the other hand, we are right—and we sincerely believe that we are—then you will have done yourself a real service and we shall both be the gainers.

Surely no proposition could be fairer than this. Surely no intelligent man can afford to purchase any car until he has made an impartial investigation of this kind.

Will you see the new Paige Fairfield today?

102 ARE RESCUED FROM U. S. COLLIER WRECKED IN GALE

Four of the Hector Crew Injured When Vessel Was Battered by High Waves.

CHARLESTON, S. C., July 15.—After having lost two barges she had in tow in a hurricane that blew along the coast at the rate of 100 miles an hour, the tugboat Wellington landed here today with 102 men from the United States collier Hector that lies a wreck, broken in two by the gale.

The Wellington, storm-battered and having lost her two barges, worked for six hours taking off the crew and 60 marines which the Hector was taking from Port Royal to Guantanamo.

Capt. Joseph Newell of the Hector and about 20 men were taken off later by the steamer Cypress and the broken Hector was left to her fate seven miles northeast of Cape Romaine gas buoy. No member of the ship's company was lost, but four were hurt.

The Hector left Charleston lightship Wednesday and Thursday ran into the hurricane sweeping up the coast. When she was unable to make way, wireless calls for help were sent out. As the big collier rolled at the mercy of the wind which was driving her toward Cape Romaine, fires broke out in the hold. They did not gain headway but added to the terror of those aboard.

The Wellington reached the collier at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon about one hour after the Hector had grounded, 14 miles north-northeast of Cape Romaine. The Hector's launch had been disabled by the storm, but a small boat with a line put out and succeeded in reaching the Wellington. The dangerous work of transferring the men was immediately started and continued for about six hours. Capt. Newell with about a score of men elected to remain on the forward part of the Hector which then had almost parted at about midships.

Four men injured among the 102 brought here are Engineer F. A. Mercer, skull fractured; T. Christ, carpenter, broken leg and knee cap; Fireman McDermid, skull fractured and body burned; Oiler Singleton, leg broken.

Bill for Free Postage for Guards.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—A bill to provide free postage for guardsmen in Mexico and on border duty was instroduced today by Representative Capstick of New Jersey.

GREATEST SEASON IN THE SYMPHONY'S HISTORY INDICATED

Advance of 25 Per Cent in Season Subscriptions Expected—Artists Obtained.

An increase of 25 per cent in season subscriptions is expected by the management of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra for the coming season. Arthur J. Gaines, manager, said yesterday that this expectation was based upon the unusually large number of advance orders received to date.

"The Symphony has practically the entire field to itself for the coming season," Gaines said. "No other big course of concerts and recitals will be presented in St. Louis next winter. We have doubled our appropriation for artists and have obtained the greatest artists available. This feature alone will do much to increase our attendance, to say nothing of the big improvement to be made in the orchestra by the addition of 10 musicians to the string section."

Following the usual custom, seats will be allotted to all subscribers of record on Sept. 1. Old subscribers have an option on their seats until that date, but if their reservations have not been received by that time, the seats are given ao new subscribers.

BROWNS AND NATIONALS TO PLAY IN CHARITY SUMMER FETE

Poodle Dog Will be Prize Given Away at Tuberculosis Benefit Aug. 9.

A professional ball game will be the principal event of the Charity Summer Fete to be given Aug. 9 for the benefit of tuberculosis work in this city. Many other athletic events have been scheduled for the same day. The Browns and Washington will play the game. Johnson will pitch for the visitors.

J. Ferd Oberwinder, vice president of the Advertising Club of St. Louis, is chairman of a general committee having the details of the fete in charge. A large number of matrons and young women will assist.

The giving away of more than 4000 presents will be one of the unique features of the day. Everyone purchasing a bag of peanuts or pop corn will receive a present. All of these have been donated to his society by advertising men, and will be placed on display in a downtown store next week. Everyone who purchases a score card also will receive a present. Mrs. Nat Brown is chairman of a committee having the score cards in charge, while Mrs. Henry W. Kiel has collected most all of the presents. The presents include several round trip tickets to various places, merchandise and even a poodle dog and a pound of limburger cheese.

Famous & Barr Display Advertising Club Trophy.

The $1000 gold Los Angeles Ad Club convention trophy, presented to the Advertising Club of St. Louis for winning the 1917 convention of the Advertising Clubs of the World, is on display in the Sixth and Olive streets show window of the Famous & Barr Co. It is awarded each year to the club which wins the convention. It is 22 inches high and 10 inches wide at the largest part of the bowl. It has a background of purple velvet.

Max Koenigsberg, advertising manager of the Famous & Barr Co., was so sure of St. Louis winning the convention that he made arrangements for the exhibition of the cup two days before the convention formally decided on St. Louis. It will be on exhibition all this week.

POSTAL TUBE CONTRACTS TO BE EXTENDED TO NEXT MARCH 4

Agreement Made on Disputed Points Between House and Senate Pending Negotations.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Details of the agreement on disputed points between House and Senate in the postal bill, which became available today, show that the pneumatic tube contracts in large cities which the Postoffice Department wished to discontinue, are to be extended to March 4, 1917, pending negotiations.

The long-standing row over payments to railroads for carrying mails and the manner of payment will be referred to the Interstate Commerce Commission to determine whether the roads shall be paid on a space or weight basis and at what rate. Existing methods remain in effect meanwhile, except on certain selected routes, where the space system, contended for by the railroads, will be tested. Publishers will have the right of appeal to Federal Courts from orders sending packages by freight, but the orders will remain in effect in the meantime. More than a million dollars disputed back pay will go to rural carriers.

How Asquith Used "Kitchener Myth" to Rally England

Kitchener as a dry and tedious official who did nothing for the nation in its hour of trial. Lord Kitchener contributed his personality, his reputation and his name at the very moment when the whole empire was hungering and thirsting for a man. This psychological service, as we must again insist, was and in a lesser degree continues to be of value to the state. Kitchener was, indeed, and beyond all question, the right man who came at the right hour, and, although it is good for the nation to learn that it does not depend upon any one man for its safety, good for it properly to appreciate the principles which make the system of its government independent of the individual, still, for the masses, a hero is always a necessity and for the state is sometimes an advantage.

Moreover, as, I hope, has been made quite clear, while Lord Kitchener was neither demigod nor heaven-sent genius, he was by no manner of means a bad Secretary of State for War. He might have been quicker, he might have called to his side the great organizers of commercial life, he might in 20 different ways have delegated his authority; but when everything was urged against him he still remained at this post as the quiet, unruffled, pertinacious and plodding administrator, who, refusing to be hurried and refusing to be turned from his path, kept his eyes steadily fixed upon one goal, and that goal the honor and the safety of his country.

The soldier believed in him, the public believed in him and his immediate staff had been ready to make any sacrifice he demanded of them. Such a man may not have dazzled the world, but if he had been given time, and with such troops as the Empire placed at his disposal, he would assuredly have worn down the enemy.

Firestone

TUBES!

Here is a unique combination: Highest quality at lowest price. Only Firestone can do it. We will tell you why. Briefly, it is because tube values are a more or less known quantity. A tube is the heart of a tire—the foundation of riding service. It shows its worth or lack of worth promptly. That means that all recognized makers must maintain a fairly good standard at least. Therefore, while no one else delivers as much as Firestone, those who come anywhere near in quality must go above in price.

The prices speak for themselves and so does the quality. Firestones look the extra quality, you can feel the extra quality, you can weigh it.

The bulk of pure rubber is there, in addition to the Firestone "Know How" of chemistry and workmanship. Then why is Firestone lower in price?

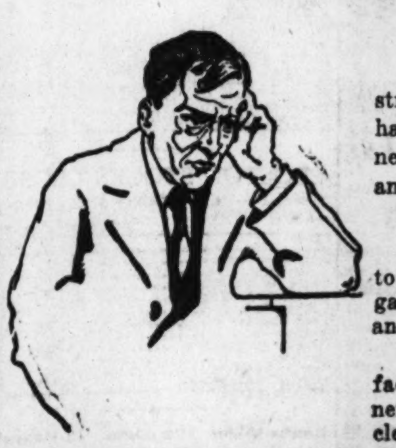
CADOMENE FOR PREMATURELY OLD MEN AND WOMEN

"I'M GETTING OLD"



How many there are who make this remark!

And The Reason—A run down nervous system, failing strength and energy. These men and women, too, many who have not yet reached the two score years are the victims of nervousness, "Shot to Pieces" the result of overwork, worry and exhaustion.

CADOMENE TABLETS (3 grain) RESTORE ENERGY.

Cadomene Tablets are a True Tonic intended to arouse to renewed activity the exhausted forces of the human organism, to give fresh vigor to the brain and nervous system and cells of every structure.

With the loss of normal vitality and strength the mental faculties also become less active, on account of the direct nerve connection between the brain and the structures, muscles become flabby, tissue degenerates, the entire body becomes weakened and devitalized. Life becomes more and more burdensome. Whether the condition is due to incorrect living or any other cause, the only treatment that can possibly be of help in such cases is one that tends to bring about natural conditions—which will awaken activity in the nerve cells, generating new vitality and life, increasing muscular strength and replacing worn out wasting tissue with new.

If your energy and power to accomplish are lessening there's nothing on earth that will do as much good as Cadomene Tablets (3 grain) in restoring proper vim, vitality and life to every bodily structure.

Cadomene Tablets are guaranteed to satisfy and if they do not, every cent of your money will be refunded— it belongs to you and we want you to have it.

Every one should enjoy good health, mentally and physically, thus insuring happiness. Cadomene Tablets (3 grain) offer amazing promptness of action in recent cases and gradual and pleasing improvement in the severe cases.

All druggists supply Cadomene Tablets (3 grain) in sealed tubes. Take no substitute. For sale by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., and all live druggists. —ADVERTISEMENT.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

U. S. INDEPENDENT ALCOHOL FEATURES STOCK MARKET WITH DROP OF 24 POINTS

Other War Shares Also Score Wide Losses on Week's Trading.

MONEY IS IN DEMAND

Banks Expect Firm Interest Rates to Rule Throughout the Year.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 15.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial weekly review, says:

"The decline which occurred this week in the stock market—severe in many of the automobile and munitions stocks, less marked in the railway issues and often entirely absent where it would be expected—brought forth little that was new or plausible by way of explanation.

"The most commonly accepted theory was, perhaps, the best; namely, that the professional speculators, arguing that the market's inability to advance indicated an insecure and overbought condition, deliberately set about to discover the places where declines could be brought about. The severity of the losses showed how sound this reasoning was; while the irregularity of the decline apparently indicated the extent to which certain stocks had previously been advanced by the efforts of pools and cliques.

Margins Are Called.

"As almost invariably happens after a period when values, to a great extent, have been artificially raised, the decline was hastened by the action of the banks that had become dissatisfied with the character of the loan collateral they were carrying.

"The weakness of stocks led to calls for additional margin by brokers and for other security by the banks. These demands brought about enforced liquidation, which the market was ill able to absorb. The sort of 'vicious circle' thus established—enforced sales causing weakness, weakness bringing about further sales—was probably responsible in large degree for the extensive losses which some stocks suffered.

"A few figures will show how irregular that decline was. Up to last night, compared with last Saturday's closing, American Locomotive had lost 4½ points; Baldwin, 1 point; Crucible Steel, 8½ points; Maxwell Motors, 4½; Studebaker, 9¾; United States Industrial Alcohol, 23½; Westinghouse Electric, 1½; Willys-Overland, 10½; Tennessee Copper, 9.

"There was no lack of financial and industrial news, which, however, seemed to have but the slightest effect on the market.

"On Thursday, the Bank of England increased its minimum discount rate from 5 per cent to 6 per cent, after it had remained unchanged since August, 1914.

"Yesterday the interest on British Treasury bills, hitherto relied upon to control the London money market, was advanced from ½ to 1 per cent for various maturities, the new rates ranging from 5½ to 6 per cent. Since these increases were admittedly made to meet conditions in New York, the failure of our own market to take alarm was perhaps natural. Nor was there any greater response to the announcement yesterday, that arrangements had been completed to lend some $95,000,000 to the French Republic.

The Steel Statement.

"The decrease in June of 400,000 tons in unfilled business on the books of the Steel Corporation passed without the comment it would have excited had total orders on hand not been sufficient to keep the mills busy for months to come, without considering fresh incoming business, which the chairman of the corporation recently stated was being received at about 80 per cent of plant capacity.

Anxiety over the money outlook was frequently given as a cause for the weakness of stocks; yet it may be questioned if many shares were sold purely on this account.

"Following the loss of $35,700,000 in surplus reserve by the New York banks last week, call money on the Stock Exchange on Monday went to 6 per cent. That rate was not maintained, and almost every succeeding day saw loans made at a somewhat lower rate, until yesterday the bulk of the business was done at 3½ per cent, and some loans at 2½ per cent were reported.

"The week saw the resumption of gold imports from Canada, the total this week amounting to $12,000,000. Moreover, with the passing of the half yearly financial demands, Government and private, the financial community looked to see one source of strain on the New York banks removed, whatever requirements have yet to be met."

LONDON REVIEW.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the New York Evening Post.

LONDON, July 15.—The explanation for the rise in the Bank of England's rate last Thursday, from 5 to 6 per cent, lies not in any sudden developments here, but in the changes in fundamental conditions, whereby the United States is temporarily the only great lending center in the world. Consequently, we are obliged to follow your lead throughout the war.

The financing of our imports from America has been assisted by her extreme ease of money; but it is believed here that while New York's recent 6 per cent rate was only temporary, your market may settle down at about 4 per cent, which necessitates our being from 1 to 1½ per cent over you. Consequently the rise in the Bank's rate reflects the belief of a change in your situation, not in ours.

Gold in the Bank of England, including the amount earmarked on account of the currency notes, is £48,000,000 higher than two years ago. This is quite apart from our hidden or undisclosed reserves. Nevertheless, it is realized that demands this autumn will be great. While Germany holds fast to her gold, the flow from our own stocks will continue.

Dear Money Looked For.

Our policy now, therefore, is to more than provide rather than under-provide, for all possible requirements. While believing that the next six months will see vital developments in the war, we are preparing for an indefinitely prolonged campaign. The principles at stake are too important to make a compromise possible. In view of these facts, the outlook favors moderately dear money, but no acute stringency is probable, unless it originates with you.

The "thrift campaign" is gathering momentum. It is important because it reflects changed habits and purposeful determination in regard to the war.

The economic strain on Germany is great, and another year would see a total collapse there; but steady military pressure by the allies is essential to an early and satisfactory termination of the war.

Stocks on our exchange were momentarily depressed by the rise in the Bank rate, but a strong buying movement is underneath the surface, and the undertone is good. The new rate, like all prompt measures that have been taken, commanded immediate confidence.

200 TRACTORS IN ST. LOUIS COUNTY SHOW TO OPEN JULY 31

President of Association Predicts Greatest Success of All This Year's Demonstrations.

Fifty-seven manufacturers of tractors and plows will demonstrate them at the National Tractor Farming Show, in St. Louis County, July 31 to Aug. 4, according to a list of entries given out yesterday by Frank E. Goodwin, president of the St. Louis Tractor Farming Association.

Approximately 200 tractors will take part in the big show, some of the exhibitors having undertaken to send half a dozen or more, of as many different types, Goodwin said, and there will be a large number of power lift plows.

The many entries are believed to assure a large attendance for the five days. Goodwin predicted that the St. Louis show will attract a greater number of farmers and merchants from a distance than any of the seven other shows on this year's program. The eight shows, of which the one in St. Louis County is to be the third, are know as the National Tractor Farming Demonstrations. The first, at Dallas, Tex., opens tomorrow and closes Friday.

All of the shows are to be free to the public. The expenses are being met by the manufacturers and by business interests of the eight cities. The Business Men's League is helping to raise a fund to advertise the St. Louis show in the trade territory by means of posters, mail enclosures, etc.

COTTON MARKET 14 POINTS OFF DESPITE STORM

Week's Range of Values Is Lower After Early Buying; Spots Are Steady.

Weather continues to be the feature of the cotton market, but there is no activity, at least in future trading, and the market remains quiet in the face of crop reports that are none too good, lowering ocean freights and a comparatively large export movement.

During the week the nearby positions suffered most in the trading; in New York the net change for the week was a loss of 13 points for July, 14 for August, 8 for October, 9 for December, 9 for January, 8 for March, and 9 for May. Fluctuations were narrow.

The floods in Alabama and part of Georgia did not impress traders with their seriousness sufficiently to create any buying power, although the damage must be great.

The National Weather and Crop Bulletin for the week ending July 11 says: "In portions of the central and east Gulf states serious damage to cotton was sustained by the high winds and heavy rains attending the tropical storm of the early part of the week. Much of the crop in the lowlands was flooded and uplands were badly washed and the crop otherwise injured. The continued rains favored boll weevil increase and prevented much needed cultivation, and fields are becoming grassy.

"In Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas the weather was more favorable and the crop made satisfactory progress, although boll weevil are increasing in Texas and reported from Southeast Arkansas.

"Over the northern portion of the cotton belt, to eastward of the Mississippi, the weather was likewise generally favorable and the crop made good progress, although it is somewhat backward on account of cold weather in the northeastern portion."

The Cotton Consumed.

The report of cotton consumed in the United States during June and the 11 months ending June 30 was issued on Friday. It showed that 570,466 bales had been consumed during June, as compared with 514,800 June, 1915, and 446,145 in June, 1914. It showed that there had been consumed in the 11 months 5,906,038 bales, compared with 5,100,322 in 1915, and 5,177,745 in 1914 (all exclusive of linters). Taking linters into consideration, and adding for July, the consumption by United States mills for the whole season should reach 7,350,000 bales of linters and cotton. Exports will easily reach 6,000,000 bales, and the supply of cotton in the United States will be reduced by 1,500,000 bales.

The action of the future market in the face of the bullish weather reports would indicate that the trade was of the opinion that present prices discounted these bad reports, when taken into consideration with the increased acreage, and expected that increase to make up the decreased surplus and the further inroads of a steadily increasing consumption, which shows no sign of diminishing.

Ocean freight rates have declined and room could be bought as low as $1 per 100 to Liverpool; this encourages the movement of cotton. Last week's exports were 101,178 bales, compared with 39,188 the same week last year. The total for the season was 5,732,499 bales. As was the case last week, and for several weeks previous, this movement out of sight has been at the expense of stocks in the counted towns and the ports. The into-sight movement was less than the export movement alone, in spite of the large surplus held from last year. Into sight for the week was 88,921 bales; into sight for the season 12,287,740 bales, against 15,300,000 bales last year. Spinners' takings for the week were 203,635 bales, compared with 207,018 last year; spinners' takings for the season 13,070,528, against 13,589,645 same time last season; the visible supply of American cotton at the close of the week was 2,389,623 bales, compared with 3,369,706 last year.

Liverpool Statement.

The Liverpool weekly report shows that there were imported 94,000 bales, of which 89,000 were American; stocks were 665,000 bales, of which 552,000 were American; there were forwarded to spinners 65,000 bales, of which 55,000 were American.

Manchester reports a fair demand for cloth, with yarns slow. The Manchester report is never a cheerful document. However, it is refreshing to read the reports of trade conditions as sent out by American mills; they are sold up for six months ahead, and this business runs best on heavy cloth that fairly eats up cotton.

The fact that the Census Report showed that there were 1,824,620 bales held in manufacturing establishments, compared with 1,622,499 last year, is somewhat tempered by the fact that there were 32,259,396 spindles active in June of this year, compared with 31,220,592 the previous year, and 30,948,048 in 1914, and these active spindles running on coarse counts.

The spot markets are not very active, but are steady, and cotton that is sold brings fair prices that are satisfactory to the owners. Prices in most of the markets seem to be fairly uniform, but both Galveston and Houston maintain quotations that are far above the other markets. This is not a new condition, however, but one that has existed all season.

Middling cotton in Galveston is now quoted at 13.75c, while New Orleans quotes middling at 13c. Apparently there is nothing in the cotton or in freight rates to justify such a difference in quotations. Other markets are quoted as follows: Savannah quiet, $13c; Charleston quiet, 12¾c; Norfolk steady, 13c; Wilmington steady, 12½c; Houston steady, 13.60c; Augusta steady, 12.75c; Memphis quiet, 13.12c; Little Rock quiet, 13c; St. Louis steady, 13¼c.

Showers and Warm Weather Predicted for Next Week.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Weather conditions for the week beginning Sunday, announced by the Weather Bureau today, follows:

East Gulf states: Unsettled, with frequent showers. Temperatures near normal. West Gulf states: Generally fair and moderately warm. Ohio Valley, Tennessee and Great Lakes region: Partly overcast and occasional thundershowers; temperatures near or above normal. Upper Mississippi Valley and plain states: Moderately warm, with local thundershowers first half of week; fair, with somewhat lower temperatures latter half. Rocky Mountain and plateau regions: Local thundershowers first half and probably fair latter half; temperatures near or below normal.

Likelihood of extensive damage from black rust led to aggressive buying today in the local wheat market. As a result, sharp advances were scored, and the finish was strong at gains of 2⅝c to 3⅛c, with Sept. at $1.12 and Dec. at $1.14½. Corn closed 1⅛ to 3c up and oats up 1c.

Wheat advanced to the highest quotations of the week and held nearly all of the gain. Jumps in price began within a few minutes after the market opened. Sultry, moist weather in the northwest furnished the motive power. Cool winds, which had been relied on to lessen the black rust danger, seemed to have disappeared and reports were at hand that in some sections of North Dakota the pest was visible on the stalks in every field. The assertion was added that the rust was not confined to an occasional stalk but was general.

A further incentive to the bulls, lay in the fact that pit offerings were unusually small until the market had shown a decided advance, and that when profit-taking did ensue, the effect was noticeably of a slight and temporary sort. Enlarged export demand accompanied the rise in the value of wheat. It was estimated that as much as 1,000,000 bushels at the seaboard was disposed for shipment to Europe. Part of the total was definitely said to be domestic grown, the rest Canadian. Liverpool dispatches indicated some renewal of anxiety in regard to the adequacy of supplies.

Corn prices were lifted by word that the crop was firing in Illinois, Missouri and Kansas. Temperatures above 100 were reported in the southwest, and there was serious complaint of the absence of rain.

In oats, as in other cereals, crop damage reports acted as a handicap on the bears.

Moreover, the call from the seaboard was good and stocks were expected to show a big decrease for the week.

Market Is Strong.

The week's trading in the wheat market resembled very much that of the same period a year ago, when July wheat, after selling in Chicago at $1 on June 22, mounted in leaps and bounds in the first two weeks of July to a high point of $1.18 on July 15. In the last two weeks of July the price dropped over 11 cents, and the final quotation on the option was around that level. In August, the December option continued the decline started in July, and in the first week of September, in Chicago, it sold at 89½c. From then on an advance started that carried the price above $1.28. The option expired at $1.20.

In the market a year ago stocks were the lowest on hand in years, with the visible supply in this country below 5,000,000 bushels, compared with over 40,000,000 bushels as at present. Canada now has a stock three times as large as a year ago, and in the Argentine and Australia the visible is the most cumbersome seen in years. In addition, the European visible is some 100,000,000 bushels over last year, supplies in Russia are excessive, and dispatches claim that the grain crop in Germany will be an abundant one this year, compared to a much below normal crop a year ago.

Furthermore, the domestic winter wheat crop, while much below that of last year, in this country, has been gathered under ideal harvest conditions, and the yield is not only running ahead of expectations, but the quality of the grain is so high that less wheat will be needed to make a barrel of flour than was the case with the low-grade wheat of a year ago.

Crop Large One.

The July Government report indicated that the winter and spring wheat crop would total 759,000,000 bushels, compared with the June estimate of 715,000,000 bushels, and placed the stocks of wheat in farmers' hands at 73,000,000 bushels, compared with only 28,000,000 bushels a year ago. These stocks, with the invisible supplies, figure a domestic crop of about 833,000,000 bushels, compared with the record yield last year of 1,000,000,000 bushels.

This year the movement of new wheat should be large in the early season, owing to the excellent conditions under which the crop was gathered, whereas last year continued rains in the harvest season not only lowered the quality of the grain, but delayed the threshing to such an extent that it was not until October and November that the receipts became large, and the movement was so late that many traders thought the Government had largely overestimated the harvest.

That black rust is prevalent in the spring wheat belt is no doubt correct, as rains and high temperatures have been good weather for its development; but black rust is prevalent in spring wheat every year, and only in the year 1904 did it do much damage to the crop, and then, after the market advanced 30 cents a bushel between July 22 and Sept. 1, the entire advance and more too, was lost later when it was found that the rust damage reports had been grossly exaggerated.

The temperatures in the Northwest have been high for the past few days, but moisture has not been falling in abundance, and even should the crop be considerably damaged there is an abundance of winter wheat and old wheat to ward against any famine prices for American wheat, when the entire crop yet is to be moved to market and disposed of.

It will probably be found in the next two weeks that the black rust scare was largely overdone; and if so, it will be interesting to observe whether the "calendar" in the last two weeks of July will repeat as a year ago. It has repeated pretty closely all year, and many traders think the top of the market has been reached on that account.

RUST DAMAGE ADVANCES CHICAGO WHEAT MARKET

CHICAGO, July 15.—Sultry, moist weather in the Northwest likely to increase damage from black rust tended to cause an advance today in the wheat market here. Every field in some sections of North Dakota was said to show blackrust on the stalks. The reports added that the rust was not confined to an occasional stalk, but was general.

Opening prices, which ranged from ⅛c off to a like advance, with July at $1.08⅝ and Sept. at $1.09⅝ to $1.09¾, were followed by a material upturn all around.

Temperatures above 100 in Missouri and Kansas lifted the price of corn. St. Louis reported that the intense heat with lack of rain was causing the corn near there to fire. After opening ¼c off to ¼c up, the market took a decided upward swing.

Oats rose with other grain. The bulls were also favored by an active export demand.

Lower quotations on hogs weakened provisions. Absence of support continued.

On all little set-backs, buying was active and upward jumps in price became more and more rapid. The close was strong [illegible] to 3¼c net higher with July $1.11⅝ and Sept. $1.13¼.

Predictions that hot weather would continue acted as a stimulus to buyers. The close was strong at 1⅛c to 2⅛@2⅜c net advance.

Princess Motor Car Co.

EARNING 40 PER CENT

After Carefully Investigating We Find That

The Princess Motor Company has demonstrated its ability to be successful, proven by the fact that the company has been in business for the past three years.

That during the past three years the company has steadily increased and are now receiving orders for many cars in excess of their capacity. Because the company has steadily developed from a small manufacturer of automobiles into one of the leading manufacturers of a popular price car for $695.

Because the company has built up their business to its present stage by being conservative, having capable men as its officers who have made strides ahead and have not gone in debt in so doing.

Because the company has no bonded indebtedness, no mortgages, nor liabilities, and are able to pay cash for all supplies purchased for the manufacture of the popular "Princess 30," at the same time continue expanding at such rapid pace that the supply is not equal to the demand.

Stock Now One Dallar Per Share

We recommend the Princess Motor Stock unhesitatingly. We believe Princess stock will be the next sensation. The limited amount offered may be withdrawn or advanced in price without notice. SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

HEAVY RECEIPTS FORCE A LOWER CATTLE MARKET

Week's Prices Are Down 25c to 35c; Hogs and Lambs Also Down.

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS TABLE.

	Last Week.	Previous Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle	26,569	22,063	25,259
Hogs	52,235	37,245	30,202
Sheep	21,072	19,009	12,792
Horses-Mules	6,718	5,671	5,304

Southern States last week failed to ship cattle as liberally as they did the previous week, but the total supply was heavy, due to excessive offering of natives, going largely to grassy kinds and half-fat grades, marketed by countrymen, on account of the recent dry weather.

Fat steers with quality were scarce, the top for the week was $10.75, with the bulk of the steers selling from $8 to $9. The market was 25c to 35c lower. At times it was slow and draggy, and offerings were hard to move, but near the close the market firmed and closed with a good clearance on steer cattle.

Butcher cattle supply was liberal also. Buyers did not have room in the coolers for medium and common grades of cattle at present high prices when thin range stuff from Texas and native states looked lower in the beef. Yearlings were 25c to 50c lower. There was an excessive supply and at times the trade was slow and in a semi-demoralized condition.

The best yearlings sold up to $10, with the bulk from $8 to $9.25. Cows were around 10c to 15c lower when they were good enough to sell over $6, but the medium kinds were 25c off and canners and cutters sold from $4.25 to $4.85. Top on cows was $8, with the bulk from $5.25 to $6.50. Canners went from $4.25 to $4.50 with cutters from $4.75 to $5. There was good action late and no cattle were carried over.

Trade in bulls was unevenly lower, and showed a decline of 25c to 50c for the week, with best heavies showing greatest loss. Bulls sold in a range of $5.25 to $6.75, with a top to $7.50. Vealers sold steady, with a top of $11.75.

Stockers and feeders were in heavy supply and broke 25c to 50c, with extremes more. Stocker she-stuff sold around 25c off for the week. The movement was poor at times.

Texas Offers Fall Off.

Texas offerings fell off for the week, while receipts from the Southeastern States showed some improvement. The market on the steers was nearly steady until late when buyers took advantage of the late week heavy runs and took off 10c to 15c. It was on this basis that the market closed. Best Texans sold up to $8.45, with bulk from $7.85 to $8.25 and grassers from $6.25 to $7.75 largely.

Mixed Southeastern cattle broke sharply on Monday and failed to regain much of the decline. The market for the week was a big 25c under the extreme close of the previous week, or 35c to 50c lower than the close Thursday of the previous week. Bulk of canners sold from $4.15 to $4.50, with cutters from $4.50 to $4.75, and good cows from $5.25 to $6.25. Yearlings were 25c lower for the week. The decline did not occur until late in the week. Buyers were filled up and insisted that they get concessions. The bulk of the yearlings late sold from $4.65 to $4.85, against $5 to $5.10 early. There was a thorough clearance.

At the opening of the week the hog market was on the highest basis of the year, but around 25c lower at the close of the week. The supply for sale was rather small. A good many hogs were brought in by the local killers from other markets, as they were able to get them in this way cheaper than they could purchase them here, and then the local supply was insufficient to meet the demand.

At the outset of the week the top of the market was $10.25, while the bulk of the hogs went at $9.90@10.15, but later the top was down to $10.05, and the bulk sold at $9.65@9.90, which shows a loss of pretty close to 25c all along the line. Grassy offerings were extremely poor sellers at all times. Good hogs carrying a little weight were most sought after.

The best hogs brought $9.90 and better; all week medium grades sold at $9.50@10, rough packers $9.35@9.65, best grade of light weights under 165 lbs. sold at $9.40@9.85, fair grades $9@9.30, best quality pigs weighing less than 125 lbs. $9.25@9.65, fair grades $8.50@9.15, and the common kinds for less than $8.50.

Lambs Are Lower.

Although there was but a moderate supply of sheep and lambs on the market last week, the trade was on the decline on lambs. Sheep of all kinds hold a steady basis, but the lambs suffered a loss of 35c to 50c from the close of the previous week, and then the buyers were sorting the lambs closer than usual. The trade at the close of the week was on the lowest basis of the season on lambs.

At the beginning of the week the best grade of spring lambs were selling at $10.50@10.75, but later the very same grades were selling at $10@10.35, and with a heavier sort. Towards the close of the week medium grade lambs were going at $9.25@9.85 and the culls and poor offerings at $6.50@8.50. Most of the culls sold at $7@7.50. Half fat lambs were very poor sellers.

No change was noted on sheep, and the good handyweight mutton sold at $7.35, heavy kinds and plain grades $7, good to choice breeding ewes $8.35@8.75, fair to medium $7.50@8.25, good stockers $6@7, fair $5@6, choppers around $5.50, canners $2@3.50, and bucks $5.50.

Auction trade in horses the past week showed improvement. There were buyers in from the East, and stuff generally moved with better action. The week's run was the heaviest July one in the history of the market, approximately 6500 head of horses and mules arriving. Choice big horses were active, but scarce, receipts running to cheap grades for which the market was about steady with the previous week. Army sorts were the most active they have been this year, there being a very strong call for British, French, Belgian and United States types. A good clearance in all lines was reported.

A good supply of mules was available, and good stock for war jobs, both French and United States, was steady. Native trade was quiet and practically nil. A light supply of mules was left unsold at the close.

Automobile Stocks

are making more money for the investor than any other stocks on the market. Had you invested a few hundred dollars at the beginning with Ford, Hupp, the Reo, Saxon, Chalmers, Paige-Detroit, Chandler, White or any of several others, you would have a tidy fortune today.

Today the automobile industry is established along permanent lines and today it is paying bigger profits than ever before in the history of the business. It is a solid fact, however, that the big money has been made by those who had the foresight to get in on the ground floor with a newly established company. It is very true that some large profits have been made on the Stock Exchange during the past few months, but it is equally true that much larger profits have been made by those who bought these stocks when they were first put out and the companies were being organized.

We are the largest exclusive dealers in automobile securities in the country. We do not handle any other stocks or bonds. We devote our entire time and attention to the automobile security market. For that reason we believe that we are in a better position to furnish facts and information and advice regarding automobile securities than any other brokerage or banking house in the United States.

Within the last few months Willys-Overland has advanced $130 per share.

Reo has advanced over $30 per share.

Chevrolet was selling for less than $100 a few months ago, and is now over $200 per share, and if you had bought Paige-Detroit you would have more than doubled your money.

The above advice is worth while and can be verified through any broker.

Regardless of the merit of other automobile securities, we today advise the purchase of Emerson.

We urge all our clients and readers to act promptly, for the price is on the eve of a big advance.

This new five-passenger touring car to sell at the low price for $395 is the result of Mr. R. C. Hupp's many years' experience.

During Mr. Hupp's long experience in the automobile world and in the course of the evolution of the automobile industry for the past fifteen years, during which period his fame has become international, he says after carefully checking everything over, that this new creation is without question the most perfect in design, durability and line of any low-priced automobile ever made.

It is well known that Mr. R. C. Hupp's approval and opinion of this new car is eminently worth while. He started with the Oldsmobile in 1902. At that time the car was sold at $650 when other automobiles were selling from $2000 up. Mr. Hupp was graduated from the Olds Motor Works to the Ford Company in 1905. Through Mr. Hupp's knowledge and experience while making the lowest-priced automobile in the world, with the Olds Motor Works, he became one of the factors with Henry Ford in the production of the first $500 Ford runabouts. In 1908 Mr. Hupp and associates organized the Hupp Motor Car Company, producing a car at $750 which at that time was lower in price than the car which the Ford Company was turning out, as the Ford Company had advanced the price of their cars to $975. Under Mr. Hupp's management the Hupp Company sales jumped from 500 cars the first year to 5000 cars the second year, and an original investment of less than $10,300 grew to a cool million dollars by 1912, when Mr. Hupp disposed of his interest and retired from the company, owing to the fact that he did not agree with the policy of his associate in bringing out a higher priced car.

This same year Mr. Hupp organized the R. C. H. Corporation, manufacturing and selling a touring car that was lower in price than any other car made except the Ford, and the very first year produced 8000 cars, and had contracts with dealers for 19,000 additional cars, making a total sale of 27,000 for the first year.

Mr. Hupp has also had some experience in manufacturing higher priced cars, but his hobby has always been, and it has been his aim and ambition, to make and sell the lowest priced car in the world. For fifteen years he has concentrated upon this one dominant idea, and at last has perfected a car so cheap to buy and so economical to operate that it can be owned and used by practically every family head in this country.

This new design, approved by Mr. Hupp, is the result of fifteen years' effort to make a low priced car and a car that can be operated at a low cost and that will stand up and give a greater service for the money than any other automobile made. The car itself will be as well built, good to look at and easy to ride in as its higher priced competitors. It is a pure stream line body, with all late improvements, and will not only appeal to the public at large, but will prove a consistent, satisfactory method of transportation, suitable for the man or woman in any walk of life. While the car will particularly appeal to those of limited means because of its low price, yet its graceful lines, ample power and economical expense of operation will create for the car a demand among every class.

An itemized estimate of the cost of manufacturing and marketing these cars, based upon a production of 20,000 cars per annum, beginning in 1917, indicate a net profit of $69 per car, after making a liberal allowance for the cost of manufacturing, advertising, selling overhead expense, etc. After allowing the 7 per cent dividend on the entire issue of Preferred Stock, it indicates a net profit of $1,380,000, or sufficient to pay dividends of 20 per cent per annum on the Common Stock, besides setting aside $460,000 to surplus. These figures are based on an estimate carefully compiled by men who know the automobile business and successful pioneers in the industry.

This new car should average 20 to 27 miles or more to a gallon of gasoline, and at the present high price of gasoline this in itself is a decided argument in favor of the use of this car.

The profits in the automobile industry are too well known to require comment. The day of experiment has passed. Today the industry, the third largest in the United States, is on a substantial and highly profitable basis. The greatest profit is being made in the manufacture of low-priced cars. The demand for the car that we propose to build is apparent to every one. The cost of manufacture has been carefully worked out, and after proper allowance has been made for the increased price of raw material and for any exigencies that may arise there should remain a net profit of $69 per car, based upon an annual production of only 20,000 cars. That this profit can be and should be increased by the increased production is self-evident. That the sale of the Preferred Stock at par will insure a sufficient capital to enable this company to go on a profit-earning basis seems an assured fact. That the Common Stock will soon become more valuable than the Preferred seems inevitable.

The Company proposes to adopt the most modern business methods, paying cash as it goes, and pursuing a conservative, business-like administration. The most progressive methods of manufacturing and selling will be adopted.

We own and offer for sale a very limited block of the Common Pre-Organization Promotion Stock at $6.00 per share. The par value is $10, and the stock is fully paid and non-assessable. OIL PRODUCTION IN SIX MONTHS FALLS OFF 2,500,000 BARRELS

First Sharp Decline in a Year Comes When Texas Company Cuts Price Ten Cents.

LIMA, O., July 15.—Crude oil production for the first six months of 1916 in the United States reached a total of 138,000,000 barrels with Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana contributing a total of 12,000,000 barrels of that amount, according to satistics compiled here. As compared with 1915 this is a loss of 2,500,000 barrels, with Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana dropping 250,000 barrels of this total.

During the first half of the year the stocks in the Central States were reduced 675,000 barrels and those of Illinois 1,100,000 barrels. At the same time the stocks in Omaha and the midwest field increased 3,500,000 barrels. Statistics show that the production of the first half year have gone almost directly into consumption.

The first sharp decline in crude oil prices in a year came today when the Texas Co. announced a general reduction of 10 cents a barrel on all light grades.

Illinois Bank Resources Increase.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 15.—The total resources of the 789 State banks of Illinois on July 1, amounted to $1,094,681,250, an increase of $34,483,087, over the resources of 777 State banks in the State on April 1 last, according to a statement issued today by J. J. Brady, auditor of public accounts. Total deposits including due to bank were $920,699,389, an increase of $34,762,504.

GERMAN PEACE ADVOCATES TO SPEAK IN VARIOUS TOWNS

National Committee Organized by Prince Von Wedel Held in Distrust by Pan Germans.

LONDON, July 15.—The German National Committee which recently was organized under the presidency of Prince von Wedel for the purpose of preparing the minds of the German people for "an honorable peace," will soon begin its labors with a series of meetings in various towns in Germany. According to Reuter's correspondent at Amsterdam, the committee is regarded with profound distrust by the Pan-Germans.

The Berliner Tageblatt says 50 speakers, including politicians and professors of the most varied views will deliver addresses. Prof. Aodlph Harnack will speak in Berlin.

Plague Sweeping Jerusalem.

MAYOR KIEL TO BE A MINSTREL IN CITY 'PLAY DAY' SHOW

With Aid of "Feeder," He Will Crack Jokes About Chickens and Watermelons.

Mayor Kiel will be interlocutor and probably a black-face comedian at the municipal minstrel show that Park Commissioner Cunliff is planning as a feature of "Play Day," Aug. 5. The show will be given on the stage built for the presentation of "As You Like It." north and east of the Art Museum in Forest Park. There will be "positively only one appearance" of the Mayor in this burnt-cork production; namely the evening of Aug. 5.

Besides Mayor Kiel, Director Cunliff has engaged Billy Kent and Roger Gray of the Park Theater. Arthur J. Fitzsimmons and William F. Flynn, managers of the theater, have "lent" Gent and Gray for the occasion. They will leave the stage at the Park Theater to go and answer funny questions put to them by Mayor Kiel.

Seventy-five persons—count 'em—will appear in the show. Fifty of these will be in the black-face and other make-up. Following the minstrel show there will be an olio in which Mayor Kiel has promised to take part. In this afterpiece he has consented to don burnt cork, rouge his lips and adopt a negro dialect. After Poepping's orchestra has played enough "to bring him on," Mayor Kiel will step forth, and with the assistance of an accomplice, or "feeder," will cracks jokes about chickens, watermelons and other themes appropriate to minstrelsy.

"Hot Time Minstrels" to Aid.

Members of the "Hot Time Mintrels," who once furnished amateur competition with Williams and Walker, Lew Dockstader and the rest, will be requested to join the fun. Joseph B. Thomas, Commissioner of Supplies, who is a veteran of the "Hot Time" organization, has volunteered. He will contribute a musical act, accompany himself on a guitar while he sings about hambones, 'possum and chicken, with gravy 'round.

Real color will be lent to the occasion by little negroes from the Kennery Playgrounds. Park Commissioner Cunliff has discovered many daring "buck-and-wing" dancers in their number and intends to have them take part in the entertainment. To get their best steps out of these black youngsters he will offer prizes and supply them with plenty of refreshments.

Park Commissioner Cunliff, like a true impresario, is mysteriously predicting a sensation in the way of spectacular lighting at the show. He says he has negotiated for some startling effects with which to enhance Mayor Kiel's jokes.

A big parade through the downtown and as far west as Grand avenue will be the first of the festivities by which "Play day" is to be marked. Floats and marching officials and employes of the city will form a procession 18 blocks long, Cunliff announces.

Mayor Kiel, preceded by a band, will lead the paraders, including members of his "Cabinet." The Board of Public Service will be represented by floats showing the engineering work that is under way in the city. The free bridge, a section of the Mill Creek Sewer, the pumping of water from the river and the process of clarifying and purifying it, and the method of burying wires are some municipal activities that will be illustrated.

Showing How They Cheated Us.

Just to demonstrate at once how many persons would like to cheat us and how vigilant are our municipal protectors, the Department of Weights and Measures will contribute to the parade a couple of wagon loads of spurious scales and false measures that have been taken from dealers whose enterprise was not for a time deterred by ordinances.

Of course, the firemen will be there—100 of them, the Chief in front. With the firemen will appear apparatus used by the volunteers of 1849, when water was pumped on the fire (between fights) with a hand-power machine. In juxtaposition to this old engine (as a fireman would say), will move proudly a motor engine, capable of throwing 10 times the volume of water the hand-machine could deliver in the same period. There will be an old horse-drawn hose cart and a modern automobile truck.

The division of smoke abatement is to be vindicated by a lot of charts proving in the most eloquent figures that St. Louis has very little smoke that isn't thoroughly inspected. The Street Department will illustrate the method of cleaning streets with its various devices. The big squegee will be in the parade, but it won't hurt you. It's harmless except that it gets a "souse" on the streets frequently. But that's its own affair.

Easy lessons in killing flies and mosquitoes may be taken by spectators as the Welfare Department's section of the parade moves past. "The mosquito fleet" is the name of a band of brave men who go forth at the risk of their lives and spray oil on the lair of the deadly anopheles and slaughter the fierce musca domestica even in the egg.

Fourteen reasons for remaining out of the workhouse can readily be obtained from the division representing that institution. They are not prisoners, of course. This "Pay Day" isn't for prisoners. It's for the guards and attendants. These functionaries will be on hand as so many deterrents to youth who otherwise might want to take a chance on "a stretch at the works." Guards and others from the jail will be in line for the same wholesome purpose.

Being modest, Park Commissioner Cunliff will place his exhibit in the rear of the procession. There will be in it some cute little wagons, models of public baths, pretty flowers and some other fauna and flora of the parks, including various employes.

OUTLYING BANKS OF ST. LOUIS APPROVE BANKING BILL CHANGE

Would Prevent Opening of Branch Institutions in City by National Banks.

The outlying banks of St. Louis which have just organized an associa-with Charles W. Owen of the North St. Louis Savings Trust Co., as President, sent the following telegram to Representative William L. Igoe yesterday.

"The amendment which Senator Owen proposes to offer to H. R. 13,384 is acceptable to us and will eliminate the objectional features of the bill as far as we are concerned."

The telegram sent after Congressman Igoe had advised the banker that the amendment providing that national banks could open branch banks within the limits of the city or county in which they were situated would be changed by Senator Owen in the form of an amendment Monday, which would state that the national banks could only open these branches in States where the State banking laws gave that oportunity to State banks. The Missouri banking laws do not permit State banks to have branches and therefore the amendment would not apply to Missouri

The outlying banks formed an organization to be known as the Associated Banks of St. Louis at a meeting of 24 outlying banks Friday evening. A meeting of the officers of the new Association considered the amendment as advised by Igoe at a meeting late yesterday. The officers, besides Owen, are Louis E. Dehlendorf, secretary; Earl Meeks, assistant secretary; August Heller, first vice-president, and George W. Clarkson second vice-president.

WED JUNE 27, WANTS DIVORCE

Mrs. Mary Grieb was married to Albert A. Kline, 712 Franklin avenue, June 27. Yesterday she filed a divorce suit alleging they separated June 28, after she awakened in the night and found him trying to remove her diamond earrings from her ears. She also says that immediately after the ceremony Kline asked her for $20 and was angry when she would not let him have it. Another charge is that he deceived her about his employment.

Mrs. Kline has been married three times, according to her attorney, H. W. Femmer. She asks for the restoration of the name of Grieb, which was that of her second husband. She has five children by her first marriage. She keeps a boarding house.

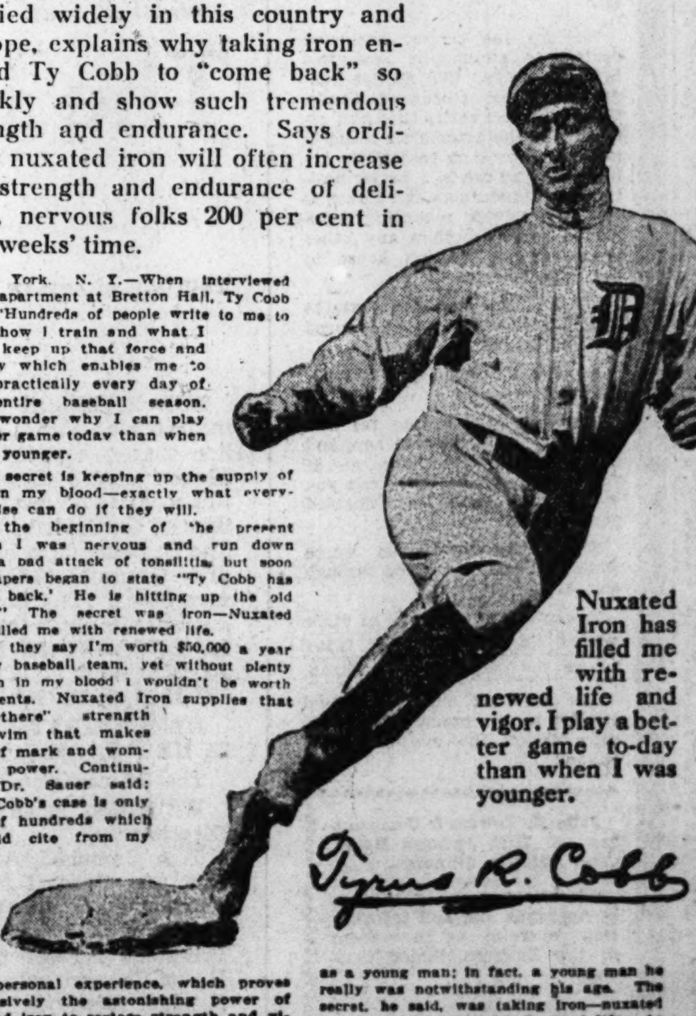
$50,000 Ty Cobb "Comes Back" Nuxated Iron Makes Him Winner—Greatest Baseball

Batter of all time says Nuxated Iron filled him with renewed life after he was weakened and all run down. Supplies that "stay-there" strength and vim that makes men of mark and women of power.

Well known physician who has studied widely in this country and Europe, explains why taking iron enabled Ty Cobb to "come back" so quickly and show such tremendous strength and endurance. Says ordinary nuxated iron will often increase the strength and endurance of delicate, nervous folks 200 per cent in two weeks' time.



Nuxated Iron has filled me with renewed life and vigor. I play a better game to-day than when I was younger.

Tyrus R. Cobb

New York, N. Y.—When interviewed in his apartment at Bretton Hall, Ty Cobb said: "Hundreds of people write to me to know how I train and what I do to keep up that force and vitality which enables me to play practically every day of the entire baseball season. They wonder why I can play a better game today than when I was younger.

The secret is keeping up the supply of iron in my blood—exactly what everyone else can do if they will.

At the beginning of the present season I was nervous and run down from a bad attack of tonsilitis but soon the papers began to state "Ty Cobb has 'come back.' He is hitting up the old stride." The secret was iron—Nuxated Iron filled me with renewed life.

Now they say I'm worth $50,000 a year to any baseball team, yet without plenty of iron in my blood I wouldn't be worth five cents. Nuxated Iron supplies that "stay-there" strength and vim that makes men of mark and women of power. Continuing, Dr. Sauer said: "Mr. Cobb's case is only one of hundreds which I could cite from my own personal experience, which proves conclusively the astonishing power of nuxated iron to restore strength and vitality even in most complicated chronic conditions."

Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact, a young man he really was notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 he was careworn and nearly all in. Now at 50 a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth. As I have said a hundred times over, iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away patent medicines and nauseous concoctions and take simple nuxated iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver and heart trouble, etc. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous run-down people who were ailing all the while, double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from 10 to 14 days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless.

Many an athlete or prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.—E. Sauer, M. D.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, recommended above by Dr. Sauer, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 100 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time.

It is dispensed in this city by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Johnson-Enderle, Pauley Drug Co. and all good druggists.—ADVERTISEMENT.

We always pray and think of you.
You're not forgotten in our minds,
To us you were so good and kind;
How our hearts are filled with pain,
We hope some day to meet again.
Peaceful be in thy grave so low,
How we miss you no one knows;
Rest on, dear one, thy labor is o'er,
Thy willing hands will toil no more.
We'll meekly kneel beside her,
And plant a chosen flower there,
In whose love we have been blessed
Sweetly, calmly, may she rest.

HEIGHO! Vacation Time Is HERE!!

Behold the beaming sun doth smile
Upon the granitoid, and while
I long to sit beneath the fan
And make the boss more coin, I can Look far away to places gay
Where I would rather spend the day
(And night, as well); but—kick the pup!
The cost of living scampers up,
Till wage runs second in the race,
With chances slim to take first place.

YET—

While the Poet Wails
Hundreds of Vacationists
Are selecting their Outing Places through the
Sunday Post-Dispatch
Resort and Country Board Column
The new and popular feature on the First Page of the Big Sunday Real Estate & Want Directory!

IT IS FORESIGHT

Not hindsight, that lays the foundation of a fortune. The undevloped lands in the Little River Drainage District, Southeast Missouri, present a rare opportunity for investment at present prices, which are ridiculously low. I can sell you as good unimproved land as can be found in the district at $40 to $65; the drainage tax will overage $15; it can be cleared for $25, and much of it is $500 land. I have inspected every tract listed with me, and none of the soil looks under the $200 class. I have 19 tracts, aggregating nearly 8000 acres, to offer, and am satisfied I will sell them all before snow flies. Are you to be one of the lucky purchasers? Address Box Y-113, Post-Dispatch.

We will sell you a lot any size, $5 down, balance to suit. One mile from railroad. This tract joins the Missouri Baptist Assembly grounds. We also have some 5-acre tracts adjoining. An excellent place for fruit, chicken and squab raising. Write for illustrated booklet.

MISSOURI NAVAL MILITIA ARRIVES AT PHILADELPHIA

Men Are Complimented Upon Their Excellent Appearance After Long Journey.

SOON WILL BE AT SEA

Assigned to Rhode Island, Which Is in Second Line of Defense in Maneuvers.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 15.—The Missouri naval militia arrived at League Island Navy Yard today from St. Louis in the special train of Pullmans supplied by the Federal Government. One hundred and fifteen men, completely equipped, under command of Commander Schwartz and five officers, are in the party.

Inspectors and instructors of the naval militia organization are assisting in the mobilization of some 5000 men and their officers from the Southern, Eastern and Central states and in putting them aboard the North Atlantic reserve fleet of battleships of what are now known as the second line. These are ships only about eight or 10 years old, but due to rapid naval developments now relegated from the first line of offense to the second, or defense line. There are eight battleships in this fleet, there being in the roadstead at Philadelphia and the others in North River at New York and at Hampton Roads, Va.

Missourians on Flagship.

The Rhode Island, to which the Missouri reserve has been assigned, is flagship of the fleet, carrying the flag of Rear Admiral Helm with his full staff.

The Missouri organization drew favorable comment from Capt. Lattimer of the Rhode Island because of its excellent appearance after so long a trip.

The other militia organizations on the Rhode Island are from Minnesota, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

The mobilization this year is in the nature of a general drill, on the theory that the grand fleet has proceeded to sea to hold a prospective enemy as many leagues to the eastward as possible until proper shore defenses can be made. The naval militia has been mobilized to man the reserve fleet to form the second line of water defense for the Eastern Coasts.

Missouri Officers on Board.

The officers of the Missouri organization on board are: Commander Schwartz, who will be aid to the executive officer and acting First Lieutenant, Lieutenant Commander H. J. Elson, assistant to chief engineer; Lieuts. Walter Veatch, and Roland Turner, watch officers; and Lieut. Gephart and Ensign Yost, assistant division officers. Drills and regular ship routine have commenced. The fleet will sail tomorrow morning, rendezvous at Block Island, Monday, then proceed to sea for fleet maneuvers until the 23d when it will go into Newport, R. I., to give the men shore liberty, then return to Philadelphia, where the men will disembark on the 25th.

SENATE DEMOCRATS PLAN TO ADJOURN CONGRESS BY AUG. 20

They Meet in Caucus to Revise Program With View of Bringing Early Close.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Adjournment of Congress not later than Aug. 20 was tentatively agreed upon by the Senate Democrats, in caucus tonight, to revise their legislative program with a view to bringing the session to an early close.

A resolution unanimously adopted directed the Democratic steering committee to prepare a program and to include in it as most urgent and demanding first consideration the following measures:

Appropriation bills, Government shipping, revenue, Workmen's Compensation, corrupt practices, Philippines' self-government, Civil War and Spanish War pension bills, and a bill to enlarge the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The conference directed that in the event that the pending child labor and immigration bills in the judgment of the steering committee could not be disposed of in time for adjournment by Aug. 20, an agreement should be entered into, if possible, whereby consideration and vote on these measures would be assured next December.

PRESIDENT NAMES HAY FOR THE U. S. COURT OF CLAIMS

Congressman Has Been Opponent of Greater National Defense Program.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—President Wilson today nominated Congressman Hay of Virginia, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, to be an Associate Justice of the United States Court of Claims. Confirmation is expected at the Senate's first executive session, and Hay will accept.

The retirement of Hay will take from Congress the ablest opponent of what is generally considered adequate national defense in either the House or the Senate. He will be succeeded as chairman of the Military Committee by Representative Dent of Alabama. Dent was Hays' first lieutenant in the army bill fight in the House. Dent aided Hay in conference in his effort to beat the Senate's provision for an army of 250,000 men. They were successful, compelling the Senate conferees to consent to a reduction to 170,000.

Hay has been chairman of the Military Affairs Committee since the Democrats gained control of the House in the 1910 elections.

LEASE MEANS NEW $75,000 BUILDING FOR PINE STREET

Vacant Site at Corner of 20th Street to Be Improved for Occupancy by St. Louis Dairy Co. to Enlarge Its Quarters — Other New Structures for Pine.

CHESTNUT STREET SITES IN FAVOR

Closing of Pending Big Deals, Including Terminal Railway's Purchases, Sustain Spring and Early Summer Realty Records.

Activity in realty along Pine and Chestnut streets, embracing the sections between Twelfth and Eighteenth streets, was heightened during the week by the conclusion of leases providing for the erection on these thoroughfares of two more imposing structures.

Arrangements were perfected yesterday whereby the Eclipse Realty Co., of which J. V. S. Barret is president, will erect a building at the southwest corner of Twentieth and Pine streets for the St. Louis Dairy Co. at a cost of $75,000. The site is vacant and has a frontage on Pine street of 50 feet by a depth along Twentieth of 109 feet, and adjoins a building of the Drummond estate, of which the St. Louis Dairy Co. has a [illegible]-year lease, which is concurrent with its lease of the building to be erected by the Eclipse Realty Co. This contract provides for an annual net rental of 5 per cent of the cost of the site and 7 per cent net of the cost of the building.

The Eclipse Realty Co. acquired the corner about three months ago from Frank A. Ruf, vice president of the Mercantile Trust Co., in part payment for the southeast corner of Fifteenth street and Washington avenue.

This is but one of several leases concluded this month under which handsome structures will be erected on Pine street. One of these was that by which the Burdeau Realty Co. will erect a building at 1410 Pine, for the Wholesale Cut Flower Co., a client of the Mercantile Trust Co., which will occupy it under a five-year lease.

Another was that under which clients of the John S. Blake & Bro. Realty Co., who are erecting at 1415 Pine street a building for the Doxsee Electric Co.

Structure for Chestnut Street.

The Johnson Realty Co., a client of the Rutledge & Kilpatrick Real Estate Co., has let contracts to the Chapline Construction Co. for the erection on the north side of Chestnut street, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, of an ornate concrete building. Three ancient brick residences, occupying a lot 46x109 feet, are being razed to make room for the new structure.

The Laclede Iron Works, of which Andrew J. Franz is manager, is closing a lease with the Rutledge & Kilpatrick Real Estate Co. for the east half of the building, the site of which is just west of the iron company's building at 1315 Chestnut street. Several automobile accessory concerns are dickering with the Rutledge & Kilpatrick Co. for the west half of the building, which will be well adapted to businesses of this character.

Robert Rutledge, president of the Rutledge & Kilpatrick Co., declares that the situation as to both Chestnut and Pine streets is noteworthy.

"Several times during the last six months," said Rutledge yesterday, "we could have landed large concerns on Chestnut and Pine streets, if modern buildings could have been found there in which to properly house them. This is especially true of the sections between Twelfth and Eighteenth streets. The fact that in each instance the buildings to be erected have been leased from the plans shows that these sections can be easily reclaimed and put on an investment basis, the erection of modern structures being all that is necessary."

Chestnut Street Outlook Bright.

The outlook for Chestnut street is most attractive, according to Rutledge, by virtue of the fact that this thoroughfare is rapidly becoming a trading center for automobile traffic. The Republic Truck Co. of Michigan, one of the largest builders of trucks in the United States, has given its approval to this thoroughfare by taking a five-year lease of a building at the southwest corner of Sixteenth street. It has a frontage on Chestnut of 127 feet, and was recently erected by the Fredonia Realty Co., of which George T. Burdeau is president, and which has erected many buildings on Locust street, practically all of them from designs drawn by Preston J. Bradshaw.

The conclusion of deals pending for the erection of large structures on vacant lots on Chestnut and Pine streets, including the Lionberger block between Seventeenth, Eighteenth, Pine and Chestnut streets, the northeast corner of Seventeenth and Pine, owned by John I. Beggs, and the entire half block at the southwest corner of Twelfth and Chestnut streets, recently purchased by August A. Busch as a site for a memorial hotel to his father, to cost [illegible], will be the beginning of the upbuilding of these thoroughfares on a scale rivaling that of Locust street and of Washington avenue.

The closing up of big trades which have long been hanging fire, together with purchases by the Terminal Railway Association, sustained during the week the records of the spring and summer in the St. Louis realty market.

These were supplemented by many other sales, which gave rotund proportions to the volume of transactions.

Notable contributors to the week's aggregate were the John S. Blake & Brother Real Estate Co., the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., the Mercantile Trust Co., Frank L. Dittmeier Real Estate Co., B. A. Thompson, Eugene Altheimer, Anderson-Stocke-Buerman Real Estate Co., Williams & Bland, Franciscus & Kunz, Bush-Burns Real Estate Co., John C. Gruelich, Kolas Real Estate Co., Henry Hiemenz Real Estate Co., Joseph F. Dickman Real Estate Co., Daly & McCabe, Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co., Hasse Real Estate Co., and Cornet & Zeibig.

The Terminal's purchases embraces six city blocks, aggregating 850,000 square feet, numbered 3482, 3494, 3508, 3511 and part of block 3481. These include all the land between the intersection of the outer and inner belt lines of the Terminal Railroad Association at [illegible]rie and Bulwer avenues, the northern end of the property being at Pitzman and Bulwer avenues.

The purchases, which were conducted by George Kingsland, real estate officer of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., and which were forecast in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch, aggregated $400,000.

It is understood that the Terminal has plans for shipping yards and warehouses, together with loading platforms, for which the land forms a most eligible site.

The Frank L. Dittmeier Real Estate Co., filed for record a deal including holdings the aggregate value of which was placed at $100,000. The largest of these was the Hart Apartments at 1316 Union boulevard, comprising six suites of six and seven rooms each, and occupying a lot 60x135 feet.

The St. Louis City Lot Co. conveyed conveyed the title to this property to the De Tonty Real Estate Co., and took in part payment a number of holdings in various parts of the city.

Charles T. Mason, secretary and treasurer of the Board of Education, is perfecting plans for the sale by auction early in September, of 35 pieces of the city's property not available for school purposes.

The value of the holdings, which include many attractive corners in both the business and residence sections, is estimated by real estate experts at approximately $500,000. These also include 20 pieces in what are known as the Ghetto or Kerry Patch districts. The list is as follows:

Schollmeyer Auctioneer.

A. R. Schollmeyer & Co., which makes a specialty of subdividing and selling property at auction, has been engaged in this connection, and A. R. Schollmeyer will cry for the bids of the forthcoming sale.

More than half of the property to be sold is held by the Permanent Trust Fund of the Board of Education, for which the proceeds of the sale of its holdings must be reinvested.

The Mason's report on this fund for 1913-14 says:

By an act of Congress in 1812 the public schools of St. Louis were given all unclaimed and unowned land within the corporate limits, same not to exceed one-twentieth of all the land within the corporate limits, which limits were supposed to be Jefferson avenue on the west and the river on the east.

The Constitution of the State of Missouri confines the board to its investment of money belonging to this trust fund, in city, State or Government bonds or income property. Being thus confined, it endeavors to make its investment receive the greatest rate of interest and during the past year it has been successful in purchasing City of St. Louis bonds below par, as well as State of Missouri bonds.

The valuation of the land belonging to this fund was not made until 1854, when it was placed at $400,000.00. This fund also includes receipts from bond forfeitures, court fines and excess Probate Court fees.

At the close of the fiscal year June 30, 1914, this fund had increased to have a land value of $1,183,649.60, including the Board of Education Building, with a book value of $540,090.08; bills receivable under deeds of trust on land sold on 10 annual payments, amounting to $19,872.44 and 695 City of St. Louis and State of Missouri bonds of $1000 each, costing the board $675,969.18 (all of said bonds were purchased below par and at maturity will benefit the board $19,030.82 over the purchase price), and cash on hand June 30, 1914, $963.79, making a total value of $1,880,500.01.

The general fund received the benefit of an income from this fund of $108,102.80 from rent of real estate, $26,396.50 from interest on bonds and $191.26 from interest on current deposits, making a total income of $134,690.56.

According to Mason's 1914-15 report to the board, the total assets of the Permanent Trust Fund are valued at $2,504,517.12. These include bonds which at maturity will be worth $743,000, an increase of $19,477.42 on the price at which Mason bought them in the open market.

Paying Deals Made.

Less than half of the property to be offered is owned by the public school fund, the proceeds of the sale of any of which must be reinvested in public school buildings or improvements.

Since the management of the real estate of the Board of Education having devolved on him, Mason has been instrumental in effecting many advantageous sales and leases of sites abandoned for school purposes. These include the site of the Banner Buggy Co., bounded by Convent, Rutger and Main and Front streets, of which Mason negotiated a lease to Russell E. Gardner for a term of 47 years. This provides for an annual net rental which places the block on a most remunerative plane. Another was that by which he disposed of an abandoned block fronting 418 feet on Kosciusko street, to the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Co. at a magnificent price.

The site of the Banner Buggy Co., as well as many other buildings which have been developed for income purposes by the Board of Education, will not be included in this sale.

MANY NEW HOMES IN SOUTHAMPTON TO BE OCCUPIED SOON

District Marked by Individual Taste in Residences, and Civic Bodies Are Effective.

There is much activity reported in Southampton, where a large number of persons who bought lots three years ago have completed their payments and obtained building loans. The district is building up rapidly with homes, into which there probably will be 30 to 35 families move within the next two weeks.

A feature of Southampton homes is that every owner has expressed an individuality in them which goes a long way towards making the district more attractive than if the houses were built so much alike in rows.

The people are pleased with the result of work by civic organizations in improvements relating to streets and schools. A movement is now on foot to promote a building combining a moving picture show, an assembly hall, stores and offices.

There is now a population of more than 3000 in the Southampton district.

The Lutherans have purchased a large lot on the corner of Itaska and Macklind streets and soon will have a church there. The Presbyterians have purchased at the northeast corner of Nottingham and Macklind, and plans have been made for a church edifice. Catholics have a handsome building and school on King's highway a few blocks south, the church being known as the Lady of Our Sorrows.

Southampton now presents a rather ideal communal activity. Liberal opportunity is afforded by the Southampton Realty Co. for the purchase of ground and ease in securing money from the loan companies for construction of homes.

This home site district has the advantage of the fresh air of a suburban district, and also of the city police, water and other municipal conveniences.

Building Company Sells Bungalow.

John B. Wise, president of the Seal Realty and Building Co., reports the sale of a new four-room bungalow at 4844 Allemania street to Bernard Rotty and wife for $2100. This is the third cottage completed and sold within three weeks. Wise is improving this entire block with up-to-date cottages.

U. S. GOVERNMENT LEASES TWO MORE BUILDINGS HERE

South Seventh Street Structures to Be Used by Army Medical Department.

MORE SPACE NECESSARY

Border Situation Creates Demand for Supplies Which Makes More Room Imperative.

The United States Government has leased of the Peck estate, represented by John A. Peck, two five-story brick buildings at 121-123-125-127 South Seventh street. According to the announcement made by Peck, the buildings will be used by the Medical Department of the United States Army. This department, which is in charge of Col. Thomas W. Raymond of the United States Army, prepares hospital supplies and medical instruments for the soldiers at the front. The department for several years has maintained a building at 204-08 South Eighth street, but the demands upon it incident to the Mexican situation have made necessary larger quarters.

The buildings, which will give the department twice its present floor space, are separated by an alley, but will be connected by a viaduct, for which a permit has already been granted. The buildings are being put in complete repair preparatory to the Government's taking them over Monday.

GROCER'S LEASE OF STORE ON DELMAR EXTENDED 10 YEARS

Safeguards Against Advance of Rental Through Growth as Amusement Center.

The A. Moll Grocery Co. closed negotiations yesterday whereby it will retain the building it now occupies on the north side of Delmar boulevard at its intersection with De Baliviere avenue, for 16 years. The company acquired a 10-year lease of the structure, effective from the expiration of its present lease, six years hence. The lease secures the grocery company against an advance in rentals, the probability of which on this section of Delmar is regarded as likely because of its growth as a business and amusement center. The Park Theater and other popular resorts are located a short distance to the west.

The Moll company, which was established 58 years ago, is perfecting plans which contemplate vast elaboration of its business.

Moll was represented in the lease negotiations by the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co. and Henry G. Berning, owner of the building, by Edward L. Bakewell. Berning recently purchased the building through Bakewell, from R. A. and G. B. Bullock, for $55,000.

MASCHMEYER-RICHARDS CO. LEASES ADDITIONAL FLOOR

Silver Firm Compelled to Expand Quarters at 312-14 North Sixth Street.

A long term lease has been closed for the fourth floor of the building at 312-14 North Sixth street, by the Maschmeyer-Richards Silver Co., which is now occupying the second and third floors of the building. Owing to increases in business in the last year the company was compelled to get additional space and the extra floor will give them about 50 per cent more floor space than they have at present. The property is owned by the Regal Shoe Co. The Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co. made the lease and represented both parties.

A long-term lease has been closed for a portion of the first floor and basement of the building at 619 North Broadway to Herman Lentzner for a high-class department for the sale of ladies' cloaks and suits. The store is occupied by the Broadway Millinery Shop, which decided to obtain a tenant for the additional space.

HUDSON-PHILLIPS AUTO CO. PERFECTS REPAIR YARD PLANS

Building on Newly-Leased Site Will be Converted Into Living Quarters for Employes.

The Hudson-Phillips Automobile Co. has completed plans for repair yards at 3308-10-12 Washington avenue to be operated in conjunction with its present building, adjoining on the south on Locust street. The company has acquired a five-year lease of the Washington avenue property, through the Kaim Real Estate Co., as agent for Fred Bechtame, the owner.

The premises embrace 100x150 feet, 25 feet of which is occupied by a three-story building. The remaining 75 feet, which are vacant, will be occupied as the repair yards.

The three-story building will be converted into living quarters for employes of the Hudson-Phillips Co.

Walters Goes North for Vacation.

NEWS AND FEATURES OF THE POULTRY WORLD

CLEAN AND SPRAY TO RID BIRDS OF DEADLY PARASITES

No Single Pest or Condition Causes Greater Loss in Summer Than Lice and Mites.

No external parasite on fowls causes such heavy losses to the poultryman as the common red chicken mite. Through the summer season it is doubtful whether any single factor or condition causes greater loss.

While frequently classed together, and the same treatment recommended for both, there is a great difference between lice and mites. Mites are blood-sucking insects, while lice feed on skin, feathers, etc. The term "red mite" originated in the fact that the blood drawn from fowls gives them a reddish appearance. Mites will attack birds ordinarily only at night or while on the roosts. The lice live on the birds' bodies continuously. But while the mites work on the birds only a part of the time, they still are a far more dangerous pest than the lice, which never leave the fowls of their own accord.

A dumpish appearance of the hens is the first sign that mites are present in considerable numbers. Pale head and comb, listless action, and a general sickly appearance are further symptoms. Laying stops, of course, when the pests become numerous. The sitting hen is the most dangerously exposed to the attacks of mites. Here these parasites not only have an excellent harbor in the nest box, but their host is present almost continuously. Hens will sometimes desert their nests to get away from the torture of the bloodthirsty pests. Cases have been reported where hens were killed by them right on their nests. The worst danger of all, in the nest that is not kept free from them, lies in the fact that the chicks are attacked as soon as they come from the shell.

The most common hiding place of mites is in the cracks and crevices of nest boxes, roosts and other fixtures and equipment inside the poultry house. Filth and manure also furnish a good harbor for them, and for this reason the house should be kept clean through the summer, at least. Sometimes, in looking for the pests, they will escape notice unless one is careful. When they have no blood in them they have a greyish appearance and it is difficult to distinguish them on a gray or white surface. If present in large numbers they will appear as gray patches.

A thorough cleaning, followed by spraying every nook and cranny in which a mite can hide, is the only effective way to get rid of these pests. This work should be done at intervals, so that the survivors, of which there always seem to be an abundance, will not have a chance to multiply and repopulate the quarters, which they will do in an incredibly short time.

Kerosene alone, or in combination with other materials, probably makes the most effective spray. Kerosene emulsion, made by mixing kerosene with shaved soap dissolved in boiling water, is a very commonly used spray. A mixture of kerosene and crude carbolic acid also is very effective. It should be mixed in the proportion of one part carbolic acid to three parts kerosene. This is not diluted, but should be kept well stirred while applying it. A force spray pump is the best means of applying these sprays, as it not only covers the surface well, but forces the sprays into every nook and cranny that can be reached. Next best is a brush, but in applying the mixture in this way the work must be very carefully done, so as to get it into all cracks and crevices.

Indian Runner Duck a Profitable Fowl

"It is ever a wonder to me that more farmers' wives do not keep Indian runner ducks," writes a Kansas woman to the poultry editor of the Post-Dispatch, after a number of years' experience with these fowls. "As egg producers they beat any breed of chickens and can be handled with less care. With chickens there is the continual struggle with lice, mites, roup, cholera, bowel trouble, gapes, etc. With Indian runner ducks there is none of this, as they seem immune to the many disease chickens are heir to. Neither are they in the 'holdover' a considerable part of the time to break up broodiness, as are the hens.

"Indian runner ducks do not require the careful housing nor the high fencing that chickens require. If fed a mash composed of two parts bran, one each of corn chop and shorts, and a half part of commercial beef scrap, they will shell out eggs every month in the year in a way that will delight any poultry woman's heart and replenish her purse. We have tried out the runner ducks for six years and we do not hesitate to say that for sure and certain profits there is no fowl to equal them.

"The ducklings are very hardy and thrive and grow like mushrooms. At 10 weeks old the drakes may be turned in as 'green roasters' at a good price. The ducks usually begin laying at 5 months old, and with proper feed will produce their big white eggs, with almost clock-like regularity.

"There are three distinct varieties of Indian runner ducks, yet differing only in color. The English penciled are brown and white, the American Standard, fawn and white, and the third is the pure white. If purely market eggs are wanted one kind is as good as another. If bred for the fancy trade then the fawn and white or the pure white are most desirable."

Green feed daily, in some form, is of great importance. Usually it can be supplied at little or no expense. It saves on the grain bill. Some town poultry raisers can cut a little of their lawn daily and throw to the chicks. Other forms of green stuff are excellent.

Prof. Quisenberry's Answers to Poultry Problems

Feather Eating.

I would like some advice about my chickens. They pick each other's feathers and eat them. Will you please advise me what to do?—H. S., St. Louis, Mo.

Lack of exercise, idleness, close confinement, insufficient succulent green food or lack of meat food may cause this habit to be developed in a flock. We trim the beaks of all birds, both upper and lower bills until they bleed. This prevents the birds getting a firm hold on the feathers. Put a deep litter in your house and keep the birds busy working in that. Allow them to have free range, if possible, and all the out door exercise they will take. Give plenty of succulent green food. Then see that they are supplied with meat food. It is a good idea to tie a piece of lean meat on a string and let it hang just high enough so the birds are compelled to jump to reach it. They keep busy at this and don't develop bad habits. If you can't stop it in any other manner, you had better market or eat the offenders.

Eggs Hatching at Different Intervals.

Please inform me about the shortest time for hatching chicken eggs. I bought sufficient eggs for an incubator from two different poultry raisers and they were supposed to be absolutely fresh. I filled the incubator the same day, and after 15 days and 12 hours I hatched three lively little chicks. Besides that, I have a hen hatched in September, 1915. She was hatching a setting of 12 eggs and on the eighteenth day she had three fine little chicks.—H. P. C. G., Winchester, Ill.

Chicken eggs are supposed to hatch in 21 days. The best hatches usually come off on the twentieth day. If the temperature has been run rather high, there might be a possibility of a few chickens hatching on the latter part of the eighteenth and nineteenth days, but if chickens were hatched from eggs that were incubated only 15 days, either by hen or in an incubator, you can depend upon it that some of these eggs had been set on by broody hens for several days while the eggs were in the nest or else had been incubated for several days in some other way. The natural period of incubation is 20 or 21 days.

Builders' Lime an Egg Preservative

Eggs may be preserved at home without the use of expensive preparations or chemicals, contrary to the belief of some poultry raisers. The preparation known as "water-glass" is inexpensive enough, but comparatively few poultrymen are familiar with its use and hesitate to try it. Approximately the same results may be obtained from the use of common builders' lime. The poultry department of the Nebraska College of Agriculture recommends its use at the rate of one pound of air-slaked lime to five gallons of water that has been boiled, then cooled. This should be stirred well before eggs are put into it.

Only clean, fresh eggs with sound shells should be used. Those laid in the spring and early summer will keep better, and grade higher in quality when taken out than those put down during the hot season.

The best container is an earthen jar. Eggs may be put into it as gathered, which should be every day in order to have them as fresh as possible. The jars should be kept in as cool a place as possible. The floor of the cellar is a good place for them. There should be enough of the solution in the jars to cover the eggs well and to allow for evaporation.

Good water and plenty of it is just as important for the chicks as for the owner of the chicks. Renew it three or four times during the day. Wash out the drinking vessel carefully. It will pay two or three times a week to cleanse with boiling water or with a germicide or disinfectant. A few crystals of permanganate of potash in the water are a good cleanser and germicide.

Money to Be Made in Squab Raising

Squab raising offers exceptional opportunities as a profitable side line for the city resident or suburbanite who has a little time and space to devote to it. This is the opinion of P. J. Newman of Manhattan, Kan., a college professor, who has been growing Carneau squabs for some time. For home meat production nothing surpasses squabs, he declares.

The two breeds most generally raised by Newman are the homer and the Carneau. The consensus of opinion is that the former breed is more vigorous than the latter and will multiply more rapidly. The Carneau, however, are larger birds, have whiter meat, and are more quiet in disposition. These breeds are quite different from the ordinary barn pigeons. The domesticated birds are more prolific. The squabs, when killed and dresssed at 24 to 28 days old, weigh from 10 to 14 pounds a dozen, while those of the wild breed weigh only from six to eight pounds a dozen. Also, the meat of the wild birds is inferior to that of the tame breeds in flavor and color.

If an adequate place is provided for a flock of domesticated birds they will not leave it. It is estimated that it costs $1 a pair per year to feed birds not allowed free range. A good pair should raise from seven to 10 pairs of squabs each year. Squabs sell for from $4.50 to $6 per dozen dressed, according to the time of year. On the farm the cost of feed is reduced because there the birds gather almost all their food themselves. It is necessary to feed them some peas in addition, however.

A good ration is: Twenty-five per cent corn, 25 per cent kafir, 25 per cent wheat, 20 per cent peas and 5 per cent millet and hemp. The peas are essential for rapidity of production.

"Young stock will mate when about 4 to 6 months old," Newman says. "They mate for life. Usually two eggs are laid. The incubation period is from 17 to 18 days. The old birds feed the young from a secretion from the crop called pigeon milk. After 10 days grain is added. The young bird reaches down the beak of the old one for its food. Gradually the proportion of grain is increased until the food is all grain.

"In the breeding season, when the young are 10 to 14 days old, the parent birds build a new nest and incubate eggs there while feeding young birds in the old nest. When from 24 to 28 days old, or as soon as the pin feathers are long enough to pluck easily, the squabs are ready for market."

Keep Rats From Poultry Quarters

Taking risks with rats about the poultry quarters is dangerous, and many a poutry raiser has paid quite dearly for doing so.

The first precaution to take is to make sure there are no piles of lumber, brush, posts, etc., within reach of the poultry house, that may furnish harbors to the rodents. Building the quarters ratproof, of course, is a safeguard well worth the expense. Many a poultry house is in itself one of the best harbors the rats would want. Buildings with a wooden floor set on or close to the ground should be strictly avoided. If the house has a board floor it should be raised high enough to permit dogs and cats to get under and to prevent the rats from burrowing along directly under the floor. Concrete floors are naturally to be preferred, not only because they are ratproof but also more sanitary. The objection that they are cold in winter is easily overcome by covering them with dry scratching litter.

There is no more exasperating experience to the poultry man than to have rats get into the poultry house overnight, leaving a score or more of mutilated bodies of fries and broilers as a reminder of their visit. A single rat has been known to kill as many as 20 young birds in one night.

On many farms other buildings, near enough to the poultry house, furnish a harbor from which the rats operate so that floors of all buildings should be off the ground.

Poisoning and trapping rats is an art that requires some care and study to master. Rats are naturally suspicious and cautious, and both poisons and traps must be very carefully disguised. The trap should be turned out or well scalded every time one of the rodents has been caught in it. This removes a scent which would otherwise keep away his fellows. Care must also be exercised in placing traps and poisons to prevent fowls or other domestic animals from having access to them.

Bringing War Home to Americans

WHEN the call came, a few weeks ago, for militiamen to do duty on the Mexican border, thousands of troops from all parts of the country responded. When these young soldiers departed, nobody could foretell what the outcome would be or when they would come back, but they went cheerfully and patriotically. Thousands of them were married, but, at the call of duty, they did not hesitate to leave their loved ones behind. In the picture the camera has caught one touching incident which was paralleled in every part of the Union. This is a phase of war which is not pictured on the enlistment posters.

Count Okuma, Premier of Japan, Says He Is Going to Live 125 Years

Men who own stocks and bonds experience severe excitement.

Every able-bodied person, says this Oriental statesman, ought to measure with his life a span of a century and a quarter—The essential thing is to persuade yourself all the time that you are young and you will remain young—Doubts the Biblical stories of great longevity, saying similar accounts are found in the religious narratives of the East

DO we live as long as we ought to?

Many are the philosophers and scientists who have discussed this question. Ancient books, both East and West, record the names of wise men who searched for the secret of long life. The topic of longevity has always attracted thinkers, but very few of them have ventured to talk in definite figures.

Count Shigenobu Okuma, the Premier of Japan, is one of the few. He believes that men and women ought to live to be at least 125 years old. More than that, he says he is going to live to be 125 himself! In the following interview he gives his reasons.

Another thing which greatly shortens our lives is pleasure.

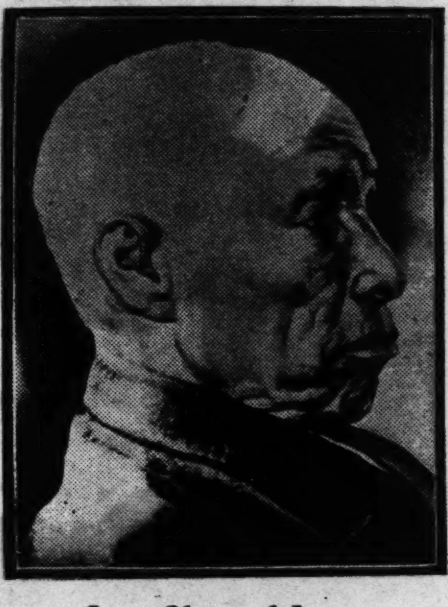
"SINCE the most ancient times," said the Count to his interviewer, "many people have tried to find a way not to die. They have dreaded death, and have sought to find some method or some medicine by which they could escape it. Even great philosophers, who had taught the beauty and happiness of death, have wanted to live longer, when they found their own end approaching.

"Of course they have all failed. They have all been on the wrong track. Not to get old, that is the thing they should have tried to do. Dread of death, or the desire to live, will not prolong our lives. But the desire and endeavor not to get old, will tend to prolong the period of living.

"This world has little use for the aged. Cannibals eat their old men and women. In primitive times, it was a custom to kill the superannuated. In Japan, according to tradition, we used to drive old people out into the mountains to shift for themselves. However all that may have been, it must be granted that aged people are of no practical use in this world. They cannot do anything, and often they hinder progress. Now that the world is civilized, we refrain from killing the aged, and we show them high respect. Nevertheless, we find them in our way. They have no bad intentions towards us, but their ideas and outlook are so different that we cannot agree with each other, and for our benefit they often do what proves to be harmful.

"That is the real reason why old people have no chance in the world—because they failed to stay young and be with younger men, because they fail to understand the younger men and the present situation. They theorize over memories.

"As they become old in spirit and idea, they feel that they are driven away from the society of younger and livelier people. If they realize that fact, it makes them still older. If they do not realize it, they will be still more in the way, and will get disliked by the active men of the world."



Count Okuma of Japan.

Notice, please, that Count Okuma had been calling young people "we," and telling how "old men" are in the way of "our" progress. Count Okuma has seen 79 years come and go. But in spirit and activity he is still a young man.

"People call me 'old Okuma,'" he went on. "But I am not old Okuma yet. The Ministers of my Cabinet are all about 20 years younger than I. They should be my children. But they are all old men. I am the youngest member of my Cabinet."

That is seemingly true. From the Cabinet meetings, hours long, Count Okuma is the only member to emerge showing no signs of fatigue. And he is the most active and productive of them all. Not only is he the Premier; he writes a tremendous amount of material for newspapers, magazines and books; he delivers lectures, presides at various meetings, and from dawn till dusk is besieged by callers at his house.

"For myself," he said, "I am confident that I shall live at least 125 years. And I may live much longer. I believe that 125 years should be the average human life. Those who die before that age die young. And only men who live to be one hundred and sixty or seventy should rightfully be counted as having lived remarkably long.

"Wealth is the greatest enemy of long life. It brings several kinds of worries, and at the same time it brings other evils. Men of wealth have always to be thinking how to use their wealth, and how to protect it. Men who have large collections of art objects are always worrying about their safety. Men who own stocks and bonds experience severe excitement at every rise or fall of the market. Ordinarily, men of wealth cannot expect to live long. And in that regard I have no worry, since I have no wealth and no treasures.

"Another thing which greatly shortens our lives is pleasure. Happiness is an essential thing; we cannot live without it. But we are apt to carry that a little too far, and wish for pleasure. Pleasure in itself is not an evil thing. But constant indulgence in it quickly shortens our lives.

"Our dying so soon is wholly our own fault. Heaven ordained our life to last at least 125 years. Those who die before reaching that age do so of their own choice. For myself, I am confident that I shall live that long."

Count Okuma was asked how he regarded the Biblical stories of men who lived for several hundred years.

"They are all exaggeration," he said. "There might be some who lived to be 200 years old or so. But never longer than that. Stories of men who lived even a thousand years are told in both Orient and Occident. But they are just stories. There never were such persons."

"But if you live 125 years," the question was put to him, "will not people in future refuse to believe it, and regard the so-called story as an exaggeration?"

"There is no need to worry about that," he said. "When I live to be that old, I will leave such a record that no man can question the truth of it. I will prove in a way that scientists cannot deny that human beings can live 125 years or more. I will leave my personal record as the fundamental argument for this theory. You see, I am in the ideal condition to have a long life. I have no wealth and treasure to bother me, and I have no worries. I am always happy. I am not old yet, and I shall not get old for a good many years to come. Live while you are young, is my counsel. The moment you feel yourself getting old, prepare for your funeral. Once men are old, they cannot live long. This world is not made for them. Old men ought to die.

"So if you want to live long, do not get old. Keep young, keep in touch with present conditions and progress. Always feel that you are up to the minute. The moment you feel yourself left behind, know that you have become old. And once you are old, there is nothing left for you to do but to die. Old men are always in the way. I think the ancient habit of killing them was not such a bad idea. It might help the progress of the world and give us more happiness and comfort.

"So I say again to the people of the world that they should keep themselves from becoming old. When they begin to get old, as a matter of fact, they are already dead. And dead people are not nice companions."

Count Okuma has won fame as one of the most versatile and capable of Japanese statesmen. He was one of the founders of the modern government of his country and has been honored with many places of distinction. From 1869 to 1881 he was Minister of Finance. In 1888-89 he was Minister of Foreign Affairs, an office corresponding to that of our Secretary of State. After a brief retirement, he was once more a member of the Imperial Cabinet with the portfolios of Agriculture and Commerce. He became Foreign Minister and Premier in 1898.

The Truth About Katherine Tingley

A statement of facts published in justice to the Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society and to its leader and official head

IN the Sunday Magazine section of the Post-Dispatch for March 19, 1916, there appeared a full page illustrated article under the heading: "Who Will Get Al Spalding's $2,000,000?"

The article purported to deal with the life of Katherine Tingley, leader and official head of the Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society, which has its International Headquarters at Point Loma, Cal. It also commented on Mme. Tingley's connection with the contest of the will of the late A. G. Spalding.

The article was widely circulated and was reproduced in whole or in part by other newspapers in North and South America. It has given serious offense to Mme. Tingley, her friends and the members of the Theosophical Society. They have complained and asked for a correction. After an inquiry the Post-Dispatch has found that the article was defamatory, inaccurate and misleading in many of its statements and that it did Mme. Tingley and her associates at Point Loma an injustice. It is with a view of correcting the injustice that this publication is made.

Mme. Katherine Tingley, leader of the Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society.

THE immediate cause of the publication complained of was the filing by the son and adopted son of the late Albert G. Spalding, the "Father of American Baseball," of a suit to contest Mr. Spalding's will, which left $100,000 to each of the contestants, a similar amount to Mr. Spalding's stepson, and the remainder of the estate to his widow, Mrs. A. G. Spalding, who resides at Point Loma, Cal., and is a member of the Theosophical Society. Several contests and amended contests were filed, the legal verbiage and character of which apparently misled the writer in his phrasing of certain portions of the Post-Dispatch publication. The statements of contestants were objected to by the attorneys for Mrs. A. G. Spalding and amended statements of contest were substituted, charging in a less offensive form that Mr. Spalding was of unsound mind when he made his will, and that the will was the result of a conspiracy between Mme. Tingley, Mrs. A. G. Spalding and the stepson. These charges have been denied, and the case is awaiting trial.

Meantime, Mme. Tingley has filed suit in the courts of San Diego, Cal., for $250,000 damages against Keith Spalding, one of the contestants, against his wife, and J. W. Spalding, and H. B. Spalding, respectively brother and nephew of the late A. G. Spalding. Mme. Tingley alleges in the complaint that a conspiracy exists to defame her and to injure the educational and humanitarian work which she is directing.

Several of the statements made in the magazine article were the subject of inquiry in a libel suit brought in 1901 by Mme. Tingley against a prominent Los Angeles newspaper. In this suit a verdict for a substantial amount in favor of Mme. Tingley was awarded by the jury, and the Supreme Court of California sustained the award after overruling several hundred objections.

Other incorrect statements in the article concerned the Patterson will case, filed in 1910 to contest a will in which Mme. Tingley was one of the beneficiaries. It was alleged that Mrs. Patterson-Thurston was of unsound mind, and that Mme. Tingley had unduly influenced the making of the will. The Court on motion for a new trial held that Mrs. Patterson-Thurston had not the necessary mental capacity to make a will, but that there was no evidence to sustain the charges against Mme. Tingley. The Court therefore set aside the verdict of the jury on the latter point, and pending an appeal a compromise resulted between the contesting relatives and Mme. Tingley.

The inquiry shows that certain of the statements in the magazine article were taken from previous newspaper publications regarding Mme. Tingley and the Theosophical Society which have been repeated at intervals for several years past. These statements were circulated by Alexander Fullerton, who was once the secretary of the American section of a Theosophical Society not connected with or endorsed by Katherine Tingley or the Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society. Fullerton was arrested Feb. 18, 1910, by Anthony Comstock on a Federal warrant charging him with sending obscene matter through the mails. On Feb. 24, 1910, he was committed as insane upon the order of Justice Platzek of the New York Supreme Court and the Federal prosecution was dropped.

In 1902, when certain charges and objections were made to Mme. Tingley receiving a number of Cuban children in the Point Loma school, the Federal Bureau of Immigration at Washington sent the Commissioner General of Immigration to undertake a personal investigation and he filed a report highly commendatory of the school.

The International Headquarters of the Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society, including the Raja Yoga college and school, are visited year in and year out by numbers of prominent American and European teachers, jurists, artists, musicians and social service workers. The public is permitted to visit the grounds and buildings from 10 to 4 o'clock each day and to become familiar with the Theosophical activities. The permanent residents on the Point Loma grounds number well-known teachers, artists, musicians and others, all of several nationalities, giving to the place an air of cosmopolitan culture. The open-air Greek theater, situated on the edge of the cliffs overlooking the Pacific Ocean, was built by Katherine Tingley and is the first of its kind in the United States, and here have been presented many of the great Greek tragedies and several of the plays of Shakspeare.

The New Lewis Machine Gun, Which Uncle Sam Took From the English

It can fire 440 shots a minute and is fed from a hopper—Tommy Atkins calls it the "Belgian Rattlesnake."

UNITED STATES ordnance experts have been so impressed with the work of the so-called Lewis machine gun, which has been employed of late by the allies in Flanders, that 250 of them, which were being built in this country for England, have been taken over for the United States army. It can fire 440 shots a minute and its whirring discharge together with the deadliness of its sting have caused the British soldiers to nickname it the "Belgian rattlesnake."

Instead of being fed with a long woven band containing cartridges, as in the case of the ordinary Maxim, the Lewis gun gets its bullets from a circular hopper at the top of the barrel. This magazine is detachable and, when it is in place, revolves over the breech mechanism. Two or more layers of shells are fixed in it, each pointing towards an opening in the center. They are fed rapidly, one after another, into the breech of the rifle.

If 10 men with Lewis guns aimed at a target should begin shooting at the same time and should keep shooting one minute, they could riddle the target with 4400 shots. Against a charging line of infantry the 10 guns would blot out human beings with incredible rapidity.

In appearance the weapon is rather clumsy. It has a thick, short barrel and a straight stock. The thick barrel, however, does not contain the ordinary arrangement of multiple-tube weapons. The outer jacket is, in fact, an aluminum chamber which contains the rifle proper, together with a cooling apparatus. Instead of being water-cooled, as the ordinary machine gun is, it is cooled by air blasts kept in operation by the explosions which drive the bullets. In other words, the same force which heats the barrel also cools it.

Among its advantages are its lightness. It can be easily carried by a man and it has been found especially adaptable to aeroplane needs. The hopper containing shells is easily removed and replaced so that a soldier can have a stack of them at hand and can keep up practically a continuous fire for as long as may be necessary. Intended primarily as a defensive weapon, its portability has made it useful also on the offense. Infantrymen, "advancing by rushes," can carry them as well as not and can hurl a deluge of bullets at any desired objective. Anything can be used as a "rest" for it, whether it be a portable tripod, a bank of earth, the trunk of a tree or the body of man or beast.

As can readily be imagined, a rifle firing 73 shots a second keeps up a continual whir. It is the peculiar noise of the Lewis gun which gave it the suggestive nickname. One can well imagine how one standing near a clump of grass in which a Lewis was setting up its battle song would liken the thing to a particularly angry and murderous rattlesnake.

Accounts of the recent Anglo-French drive on the German trenches told of how, after the artillery had cleared away entanglements, the infantrymen charged forward until they reached the enemy trenches and then swept the latter with machine guns. If every bullet told, one of these Lewis guns could annihilate an entire company in a trench in two minutes. It is to prevent just such things that modern battle trenches are built in short zigzags.

American experts have inspected the weapon carefully and declare its value has been demonstrated. When it is remembered that the whole 250 ordered, if concentrated and turned loose at the same time, could fire 110,000 shots in 60 seconds, it is not hard to understand why the army should wish to have a few in case of emergencies.

How Belgians Get War News.

A CONCEALED wireless telegraph station which exists in some part of Brussels has caused much annoyance to the local German authorities because of the fact that it has furnished the people of Belgium with war news which the Germans desired to keep from them, says the Scientific American. According to reports, the search for the station has thus far been unsuccessful, although as an added incentive a reward of $2500 is being offered for information that will disclose the location of the troublesome plant. Since the wireless station appears to be used for receiving messages only, its detection is extremely difficult and resolves itself into a house-to-house search.

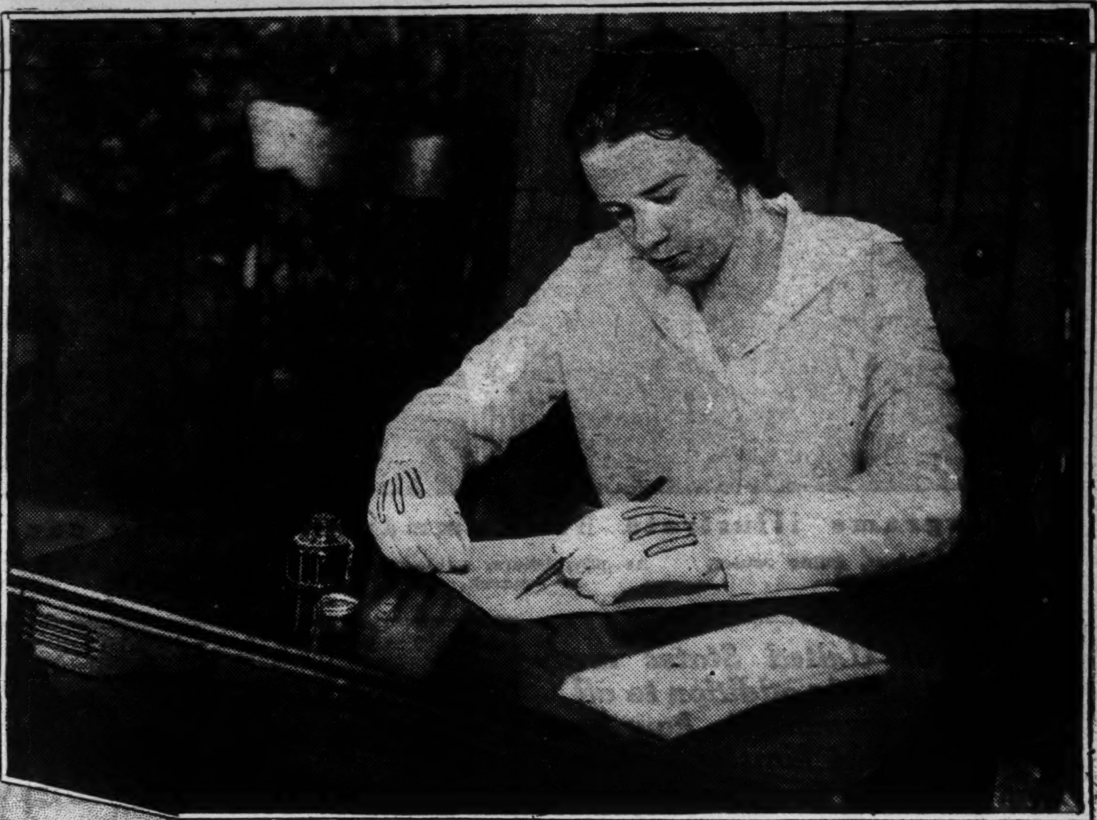
How Marie Moentman Is Remaking Her Life

Every day 16-year-old St. Louis girl, who [illegible] and parts of both arms, pathetically toils to master use of artificial limbs so as to do things for herself—In addition has had to make self left-handed—Can already write, feed self, play cards and carry a satchel, and hopes to learn to dress unaided :: :: :: ::

WE are all so accustomed to using our hands incessantly that most of us have grown quite heedless of these exquisitely efficient implements of flesh and bone, by the possession of which, next to the brain itself, man is most distinguished from the brutes. Without a moment's appreciation of nature's precious gift, we pick up a pin, or write with a pencil, or take a coin from our pocket to pay car fare, or raise a glass to our lips, or turn the leaves of a book, or do a thousand other unconsidered things.

But that the loss of one's hands literally compels the making of much of one's life over anew is demonstrated in the case of Miss Marie Moentman, 16 years old, of 8410 Michigan avenue, St. Louis. As newspaper readers will remember, both of her hands and parts of both arms were severed in an accident in a bag mill eight months ago.

With what patient toil and indomitable courage the afflicted girl is seeking to adapt herself as best she can to her tragic circumstances is told in the following article. Besides practicing hours every day to master the use of her artificial hands and arms, which require the development and training of a new set of muscles in the shoulders and back, she has been compelled to make herself lefthanded. This was because her right arm, severed four inches below the shoulder, can never become as dexterous as the left, which was amputated three inches below the elbow.



One of Miss Moentman's proudest achievements is her ability to write, grasping pen or pencil in her left hand, and steadying paper with the right.

MISS MOENTMAN has perforce rediscovered the use of the lips and teeth as prehensile instruments—an accomplishment which man, on the upward road of evolution, discarded myriads of ages ago when he took to the treetops and developed his paws into hands.

Several times during a conversation with a Post-Dispatch reporter a few days ago, she stooped over with a movement which has become almost unconscious, seized the neckband of her low-cut shirt waist with her teeth, and hitched it up into place.

"I can put on my hat by myself," she stated, while a sort of somber pride glowed in her dark eyes. The hat was lying on a cupboard with the brim turned upwards. She bent over, grasped the brim with her teeth and skillfully flipped the headgear over, so that the crown was above. Then she hitched her left shoulder with a vigorous, twisting motion, and the metal forefinger and thumb of her mechanical hand closed upon the hat brim. She gave it a toss upward, at the same time bending her head low, and the hat landed askew upon her hair. It was only a moment's task before a mirror to straighten it on. She stood very erect, her face shining with satisfaction over the feat. There were several persons present, but she was the only one in whom this pathetic means of putting on one's hat seemed to arouse no feeling of sadness.

When playing cards—for, despite her misfortune, she is much addicted to seven-and-a-half—she often holds a hair pin in her mouth, with which she can tilt her cards so as to see their faces. And when reading books and magazines, she usually turns the pages with her lips, for she has not yet sufficient command of her new fingers to perform this delicate operation very easily.

Her teeth came into use again when she was asked to display her ability to write, the accomplishment of which she is perhaps the proudest. Besides learning to hold a pencil with her artificial fingers and thumb, she has taught herself to write left-handed from left to right, instead of from right to left, as is most natural to those using the sinister hand.

Her mother placed a pencil between the first two fingers and the thumb of her left hand. Her shoulder again twisted energetically, there was a sharp click, and the digits closed upon the pencil. But as she was holding it too low, she stooped and drew the pencil higher with her teeth. Then, using her shoulder as a pivot and resting the weight of the forearm on the pencil, she proceeded to scrawl her name and address in bold, angular letters. That her writing is perfectly legible is proved by a reproduction of her penmanship on this page. She has written a number of letters to friends without aid.

Before her accident, Miss Moentman was a girl of much physical activity. In grammar school she played handball, and at the neighborhood picnics to which she frequently went, she took her part in baseball, running, beanbag, tennis and other sports. Her favorite amusement was taking pictures with her camera. She was an ardent reader of books, having a Public Library ticket, and spent at this pastime the periods in the morning and evening when she rode on the street car to and from the factory where she worked. She took lessons on the piano, and was in much demand to play for neighborhood dances.

Most of these activities, she says wistfully, are now forever past. Never again will she be able to play handball, or baseball, or tennis. It is doubtful whether she will ever obtain enough mastery of her mechanical fingers to manipulate a camera. She reads much less than before, because of her difficulty in turning the leaves, and confines her reading mostly to the newspapers. But to her great joy she has found that a player piano, which she can operate with her feet, is a very satisfactory substitute for her lost skill at the instrument.

When she rises in the morning, she is washed and dressed and her hair is combed by her mother, for she has not yet learned to do any of these things for herself. She tried for a time to wash her face by means of a sponge tied to the end of a stick, but gave it up because she could not wring the sponge out, and water dripped down on her papier-mache arms, which she was forbidden to get wet. But she insists upon brushing her teeth, which she accomplishes by holding the brush between her knees and bending over until the brush is in her mouth. By moving her knees and head she makes shift to scrub her teeth vigorously.

At breakfast, as well as at other meals, her food is cut up for her on her plate, but when a fork is placed in her left hand she is able to feed herself with ease. In her glass of water is placed a long, bent glass tube, through which she drinks.

She can help but little with the morning's housework, although, if a cloth is placed in her fingers, she can do a bit of dusting. Sometimes she has tried to run the carpet sweeper, holding the handle with her mechanical hands and pushing the sweeper forward with her foot. But this is too fatiguing to be done often.

So she spends most of the morning in practicing the use of her hands and arms. The right arm is the more troublesome, for here she has no natural elbow joint, but only one of pulleys and cords. The various parts of the limbs are operated by straps about her shoulders and across her back. With one kind of a hitch of her shoulder she can bend the right elbow, and with another close the fingers. She obtained the left arm in April and the right one in June. It will probably take months of hard daily work to learn to use them easily.

You can picture her as she sits there at her melancholy practice each morning—a tall, slender girl whose red hair and firm chin reflect the determination of her character, and whose well-carved features and expressive eyes are aglow with her purpose. This is at present a resolution to learn to dress herself unaided—a thing which most of us do almost unconsciously, but which it will take her many a dreary hour of labor to master. She keeps up her courage by thinking of a man she has met whose affliction is similar to her own, and who has nevertheless so trained himself that he travels alone on the train, dressing himself in his Pullman berth.

With dogged patience she raises her arms again and again above her head, very awkwardly and laboriously; but she has confidence that in time this movement will lose its difficulties. Then she practices moving her mechanical elbow—a vigorous hitch of the shoulder, a loud click somewhere in the mechanism, and the elbow bends. Then there is a reverse jerk of the shoulder, another click, and the elbow relaxes. These movements are made over and over, and then over and over again.

Also there are exercises for the left forearm, and for the fingers of both hands. Sometimes, to turn the hand on its wrist joint, she strikes it a sharp rap on the table. Besides, there are things to practice, like picking up a coin, which she can do once in many attempts by pulling it to the edge of the table and tilting it into her fingers. She picks up sheets of paper in the same way. But although the arms grow to feel as heavy as lead, and although the straps wear red welts across her back, she keeps up with heroic persistence the daily struggle to overcome her handicap as far as is humanly possible.

She tells proudly that when going to the train recently, she carried her own small suitcase to the street car, and from the street car into the Union Station, only letting it fall once. She is also proud of a street car trip she made alone. A relative went with her to a transfer point, and pressed a transfer into her fingers. She had no trouble in delivering the slip of paper to the conductor, and reached home safely.

In the afternoons she has more practice, but also a bit of recreation. She plays cards with friends who drop in to see her, or goes over to a neighbor's where there is a player piano, or goes for a walk. In the evening there are picture shows, at which she is a faithful attendant, or, as a great event, an automobile ride with some friend who wishes for a little time to make her forget her affliction.

And at night she is undressed by her mother, she herself, however, aiding to the extent of pushing off her pumps with her feet and pushing off her stockings with her mechanical fingers. She is almost as happy in doing these small services for herself as she is in her ability to hold a telephone receiver to her ear, a new accomplishment which she has mastered.

Thus, at an age when other girls are in the prime of youthful activity, Miss Moentman is condemned to the laborious enterprise of reconstructing a large part of her life. If one reflects for a moment upon the manifold uses to which he puts his hands in the course of a single day, he will have an idea of the pathos of her plight and of the formidable task before her. Her cheerful courage and her determination are assurances that she will succeed as far as anyone could in conquering her pitiful handicap.

For the present, she is absorbed in mastering the apparatus which must serve her through life as hands and arms, and has cast but few glances into the future. She would like to study singing, she says; or perhaps, when she has learned to dress herself, travel as a saleswoman for some company manufacturing artificial arms. But most of all, she would like to do something towards establishing in this city a school for the education of crippled persons in self-sustaining occupa-to ride no more silly old sidesaddles, neither," said Maudie, laughing good-naturedly.

"Come along and git acquainted with the lady, Jackson, and by the time you've et dinner with her maybe you'll feel better. She can beat me all to pieces makin' biscuit bread, which is sayin' a right smart."

[illegible] wanted to "swap" me a couple of mule colts for her. A man is always in a good humor when bantering for a horse trade. It's a sure sign.

The afternoon was mostly gone. I had seen one man in his calf lot since leaving Jackson and Maudie; another hunting the range for his horses and three others putting up hay. All of them declared their intention of coming to hear me speak the following Sunday, frankly admitting that they had never heard a woman speak and that curiosity was bringing them.

At 5 o'clock I came upon a lone fisherman by the sea—"sea" being short for Bear Creek. I was beginning to feel weary and was wondering where I should spend the night, but this fisherman looked interesting—and besides, it was my policy to let not a single inhabitant escape. He seemed a very self-satisfied individual, and before I could speak he opened the conversation.

"I ain't hoein' corn this evenin'," he drawled, "and I ain't any slabs to nail. I ain't even makin' biscuit bread. But I got a hook to bait. Air you game?"

I laughed and asked him how he knew about the corn and the nail and the "biscuit bread."

"Young lady," he said (I mentally thanked him for the adjective), "what do you s'pose our phone is fer? Why, the whole diggins knows about it. But air you game fer another dare?"

"Why do you all ask dares of me?" I demanded.

"Jist the habit of the neighborhood, I reckon, and it was plumb the fashion by the time you driv the nail, 'specially with Jackson on the line sayin' that maybe you could hoe corn and drive nails and do other things that men could do better, but that, of course, you couldn't cook. I always listen to Jackson's ring. He's a plumb sight. But, as I asked before, air you game fer another?" and he held a tin can toward me.

I looked at the contents and shuddered. I wouldn't have touched one of those wriggling angleworms for any amount of money and told him so.

"Then you ain't fit to vote," he said belligerently.

"That hasn't anything to do with it," I said. "You are confusing your ideas, sir. Whether one can bait a hook with an angleworm is one thing; whether a person is fitted to vote is another. I know a few fine men who wouldn't bait your hook and few rascals who would, and some of both would and wouldn't. And I know women who do bait hooks with angleworms and those who won't. I chance to be one who won't."

[illegible] man, I reckon, is at home darnin' his socks while you're gallivantin' around, and I reckon your pore little children air cryin' their eyes out fer their ma."

"Wrong," I said. "Guess again."

"Maybe you're wantin' the old man to git a divorce and air stayin' away to give him a chance, or maybe you think you can git one yourself if he'll run away with the housekeeper while you're gone. I say" (with the accent on the pronoun) "that the woman's place is the home."

"Yes," I replied, "it is. But so is the man's."

There was something so irresistibly provoking about this self-satisfied old codger that I felt a diabolical impulse to "sass" him.

"Yes," I continued, "I have seen cases where a man would have looked better hanging round home a little bit himself. In all probability your wife has hoed in the garden all this warm afternoon while you sat here in the shade pretending to fish. How many fish have you caught, anyhow?"

"They ain't bitin' much today," he admitted.

"No, they 'ain't bitin' much.' But they're an excuse for you to sit here and let her do that hoeing. About the time you think supper is ready you will stroll along home. After supper your wife will wash the dishes while you smoke out in front. Then she will do the milking. She will bring in the kindling for morning and will carry in the wood. By the time she gets all that done, she will be so dead tired that she can do nothing but get to bed as quickly as possible, while you, rested from your day of doing nothing, will wonder why women folks are so sleepy of evenings, just when you would like to sit up and talk.

"In the morning she will make the fire before you are up. If you work in the field tomorrow, she will help you. You have been married 20 years, maybe, and you are not poor. Your wife has helped you gather together what you have. But when she wants to go to see her mother, several miles away, she has to walk. You haven't a horse on the place that she can ride or drive—and anyhow you have nothing to drive one to. She has"——

"Say, if you will just shet up a minute! Who's been talkin' about me to you?"

"Nobody. If I have stepped on your toes, it is just because of the multitudes I have seen like you."

"I don't reckon you're the kind of a campaigner what carries a bottle of snakebite with 'em. Copperheads and [illegible] not that kind."

"Well—air you goin' to write this up fer the paper?"

"Yes."

"Language and all?"

"Yes."

"It might make us country folks mad at you."

"It shouldn't. You all know better language than you use; it's just carelessness that you don't use it. But even as it is, it's as good or better than that of the city—only different."

"Do you ever write up city people, language and all?"

"Yes."

"Allright, then, let 'er go. But say! You'll have to stay somewheres tonight. Tillie believes in woman suffrage and would be proud to have your company. I wouldn't object myself. Maybe you could convert me. The only reason I ain't been believin' in it is because all the women is gittin' in favor of it and it has been my policy to never give women anything they want too easy. But I'll see. As a rule a country man is more open minded on a thing like this than the city fellers, I reckon."

I agreed with him. I told him I was reared in the country and was pinning my faith to the country people.

"Well, I'll own that you're workin' on the right track," he said. "Most of us has a picture in our mind of a suffragette as a wild-eyed, short-haired, bloomer-wearin' creature, going about with an ax, raisin' cain and smashin' things. We've been needin' a missionary to tell us better. So jist go on up to the house. Tillie was wishin' at dinner time that you would git round this way. We'll talk it over. I reckon there is a campaign on hand till you git the vote and that it's converts you're after."

And with Tillie and the lone fisherman I spent the night, thus ending the first day—the day of stunts—of my horseback campaign in the Ozarks.

As I was leaving next morning, Tillie whispered confidentially that her man said he would not "go agin it" the next time the question was voted upon.

And I went joyously on my way, singing "Every little bit added to what we've got makes just a little bit more."

How Conscience Made Man Pay Back $20,000

clergyman wrote again. Five $10 bills were in his letter. 'Many years ago,' he said, 'I drew a pension for a gunshot wound in my right shoulder. The pension was finally discontinued. I sometimes suffered from lameness in my neck and pain in my head, but I do not certainly know if the wound caused the trouble. I am, therefore, restoring the old pension, as I can spare the money. So this is for the conscience fund.'

"I can see the aged preacher," Mr. Cooksey said, with much feeling, "pinching here and pinching there and doing without things he really needs for his comfort that he may put back into the treasury of the richest nation on earth the money that he fears was paid him unfairly.

"A study of the hundreds of letters received from persons who want to straighten up their back lives, as the private in the Spanish War phrased it, cannot help but increase one's respect for human nature. Contributions, as I have said, come from every part of the country. Occasionally, repayments are even made by residents of Great Britain and its colonies.

"Last April, a lady in Edinburg, for instance, sent a British postal order for $50 to Secretary McAdoo in settlement of a debt of honor, not of her own, but of a relative, whose small estate she had inherited and who, during his lifetime, she feared, had evaded paying duty on family gifts he had brought into this country from Europe.

"An Englishman, while in the United States, back in the year 1891, forged a check and defrauded the Government of $300. Friends of this man, four years ago, living in Lancastershire, England, 'thinking it right, first of all, to make good the defalcation,' sent a draft to Washington for $519.50, 'which,' they added, 'includes compound interest at the rate of 4 per cent.'

"From the vicar of an Episcopal church near London, to whom I have referred, came $14,250.15. An Englishman, when in this country, had stolen that amount from the Government.' He was converted, after going home, confessed to the clergyman and through him desired to make full restitution. Only the other day 10 British shillings were received from Australia, and $20 came later from New Brunswick, 'to cover customs on goods taken into the United States by one of my friends.'

"Names, as I have stated, are rarely signed to conscience letters. A Californian, this year, however, broke the rule. He wanted a receipt for his $16. 'Don't be inquisitive; don't betray a trust; withhold my identity,' he ordered, but he did not describe the nature of his crime.

"Now and then money comes in dainty, perfumed envelopes. A lilac-colored envelope from Chevy Chase, the beautiful Washington suburb, inclosed $1. 'For the conscience fund,' wrote the sender. Bills to the amount of $630, from Burlington, Io., were put inside of a sheet of paper, on which was scrawled a name that no living man could decipher. So comes most of the money to the fund and there is no practical reason why it should come in any other way.

"An old man and a gentleman, I am sure, a resident of Washington, and poor, sent in $5 at a time from month to month. There was dignity in his penmanship and the small pieces of paper on which he wrote were neatly cut and folded. 'I believe,' he said at last, 'that this absolves my indebtedness.' I could almost hear his sigh of relief as he sealed his farewell letter."

"The conscience fund, as a bookkeeping device, has been in existence for 105 years. In 1811, some repentant person paid $5 into the treasury. The fact, probably, became known through the newspapers, because other sums, totaling $245, were received the same year.

Then for 15 years no further contributions were made. They began again in 1827 with the receipt at the treasury of $6. Every year since then, except in 1848, conscience money had been paid by many persons. The banner years, if the term is permissable, up to 1916, were 1868, when $29,000 was received; 1873, with a total of $23,000; 1902, with a total of $36,000, and 1905, with a total of $21,000.

In January, 1906, 11 contributions came in, ranging in amounts from 2 cents to $200. That was the record month, as this is the record-breaking year.

"Rich and poor, the ignorant and the educated," Mr. Cooksey commented, "as I have shown, belong to what might properly be called 'Uncle Sam's Put-It-Back Club.' They are a great company of good citizens. I hope all the eligibles in the United States will step up, pay what is due and take their places among the elect."

of an army organization. He is told that a cavalry charge can accomplish little against infantry, even in inferior numbers, unless the latter are surprised, become panic stricken and run away, or are unable to use their rifles. In a melee, the manual declares, an infantryman with his bayonet has at least an equal chance with the cavalryman, but in any situation, to try to escape the issue by running is the worst and most dangerous course that the infantryman could adopt.

Against artillery the recruit is informed he has little chance, unless a charge can be made from cover at close range. The best weapon against hostile artillery, he learns, is one's own artillery, but advantages can be gained by preventing the withdrawal of large pieces when they run out of ammunition and he is told that the targets at a time like this should be the horses. The soldier's education in actual warfare is completed by thorough instruction in the duties of patrols.

In order that the men be kept in the best possible physical trim many paragraphs are devoted to instruction as to how properly to make camp and how to keep the camp clean and sanitary. He is also hardened to long marches, first being given vigorous "setting up" exercises for 10 minutes three times a day and then marched two or three miles with his full equipment, including rifle, ammunition, pack and all other accouterments. The distance is increased from day to day until the soldier can march an entire day without experiencing undue fatigue. Special attention is given to shoes and the care of the feet.

Even when in the field, the soldier at times must participate in ceremonies such as reviews, inspections and funerals. He is instructed on how to conduct himself on these occasions, when to come to attention, when to salute, and when to come to rest. For officers there is the manual of the saber, which instructs him how properly to draw his sword and the various positions in which it is carried. The soldier must know how to pitch a tent and also how to strike it, this applying both to the common "dog" tent of the army, which shelters two men, and the large pyramidal tent which accommodates a dozen or more men.

Although an infantry soldier relies mainly on rifle fire to disable the enemy, he should know that personal combat is often necessary to obtain success, and therefore he is instructed in the use of the bayonet. There are many positions which a man with this weapon can assume. When he is at the "thrust," the left foot forward with rifle extended, he is told that he should aim, in the order of their importance, at the stomach, chest, head, neck and limbs. The "lunge" is executed in the same manner except that the left foot is carried forward farther. The bayonet of the United States army has a cutting edge, and the recruit is drilled in the most effective use of the bayonet in this fashion. Finally, he is carefully taught how, in action, when all other means have failed and he is face to face with an adversary, most effectively to use his rifle as a club, being told that the head of his opponent is the most vulnerable point when using the gun in this fashion.

Small wonder that when a citizen army is recruited, as must needs be if the United States ever needs millions of trained men instead of the thousands now available, that it will take months and months before the men are ready for the field. Preliminary instruction is necessarily slow because the men are not physically hardened. And at all times he must remember that he is only a small part of a vast whole, that "the excellence of an organization is judged by its field efficiency" and that "the field efficiency of an organization depends primarily upon its effectiveness as a whole. Thoroughness and uniformity in the training of the units of an organization are indispensable to the efficiency of the whole; it is by such means alone that the requisite team work may be developed."

WHAT a man must know to be a soldier fills a large book—a book of 250 pages, in fact. Fathers and mothers who raised their boys to be soldiers and gave them to their country for service on the Mexican border were wrong when they fondly imagined that because they returned to them from their places of enlistment in khaki, campaign hat and leggings that they now were full-fledged members of Uncle Sam's army. They had not even begun to be soldiers.

The book is the Manual of Drill Regulations of the United States army, as revised and improved from George Washington's time down to the present. In it is everything a soldier should know, from instructions in the manner of how he shall stand and take his first step to how he shall conduct himself in battle.

"Success in battle is the ultimate object of all military training," saws a paragraph in one of the opening chapters of the book. A little farther on the student is told that "In the interpretation of the regulations the spirit must be sought. Quibbling over the minutiae of form is indicative of a failure to grasp the spirit."

When the recruit has been accepted and given his uniform he first enters what is known as the "School of the Soldier," and is given individual instruction on how to carry himself. "Heels on the same line, feet turned out equally, knees straight, hips level and drawn back slightly, body erect and resting equally on hips, chest lifted and arched, shoulders square and falling equally, arms and hands hanging naturally, thumbs on the seams of the trousers, head erect, chin drawn in, eyes to the front, and weight of the body resting equally upon the heels and balls of the feet," says the manual. This is practiced until the soldier assumes this position subconsciously at all times.

The recruit then learns how to right or left face and is taught his first steps. He learns quick time, the ordinary marching time of the United States army, and double time. The former is a pace 30 inches in length. He also is taught how to mark time and he learns the half step, the side step, the back step, how to halt properly and all the evolutions by which soldiers change their positions in ranks or the direction of their marching.

It is no easy task to master even these seemingly simple steps, as many a recruit who has been bullied by the old "top sergeants" at Jefferson Barracks will testify. But when he has learned them the man then is qualified to be given instructions in the use, nomenclature and care of his rifle. He is taught the manual of arms. He learns for the first time what "carry arms" means, also "port arms," "present arms," "order arms," "right shoulder arms," "parade rest," and all the other positions which a soldier with a gun must assume. Along with this instruction, also, he is taught how to fix and unfix his bayonet, although actual training in the use of this weapon is reserved for the time being.

By this time the soldier is ready to be drilled with a squad, a squad consisting of seven men in charge of a corporal. Here he learns how bodies of soldiers preserve their alignment, how much distance is allowed between each soldier in line and between soldiers in front and rear ranks. Here for the first time he receives training as to how he shall act in battle, being shown how to deploy as skirmishers, how to kneel and lie down when in the field and how to load and fire his piece. Included in this is instruction in the use of cover when on the firing line.

"It should be impressed upon him," says the manual, "that in taking advantage of natural cover he must be able to fire easily and effectively upon the enemy; if advancing upon an enemy he must do so steadily and as rapidly as possible; he must conceal himself as much as possible while firing and while advancing.

"The evil of remaining too long in one place, however good the concealment, should be explained. He should be taught to advance from cover to cover, selecting cover in advance before leaving his concealment.

"It should be impressed upon him that a man running rapidly toward an enemy furnishes a poor target. He should be trained in springing from a prone position behind concealment, running at top speed to cover and throwing himself behind it. He should also be practiced in advancing from cover to cover by crawling or lying on the left side, rifle grasped in the right hand and pushing himself forward with the right leg.

"He should be taught that, when fired on while acting independently he should drop to the ground, seek cover and then endeavor to locate his enemy."

When the recruit gets his diploma from the school of the squad he is graduated into the school of the company. The company is the basic unit of all tactical army formations. It is subdivided into squads and platoons, a platoon consisting of from two to four squads. When he has learned the various evolutions which a company must perform the recruit is a finished soldier so far as drilling is concerned, for the movements of battalions—four companies—and of regiments, brigades and divisions are but those of a group of companies acting in mass.

All commands which the recruit has received up to this time have been by word of mouth, but he will be told that in battle the voice is generally inadequate for directing the movements of men and he must learn a system of whistle and arm signals. For instance, if an officer carries his hand to his shoulder and straightens out his arm horizontally, he means "forward, march." If he rapidly thrusts his hand upward the full extent of the arm several times, the soldier breaks into double quick. A long blast of the whistle informs the soldier to suspend firing, a short blast summons him to attention to receive arm or other signals from his commanding officer. There are also a multitude of flag signals to learn and the soldier must familiarize himself with the various bugle calls, this instrument being used in the field as well as in barracks or camp.

The soldier now is taught the importance of fire control and fire discipline when in action, the former implying the ability to stop firing, change the sight setting and target and resume a well directed fire.

"Fire discipline," says the Small-Arms Manual of the United States army, "implies, besides a habit of obedience, a control of the rifle by the soldier, the result of training which will enable him in action to make hits instead of misses. It embraces taking advantage of the ground; care in setting the sight and delivery of fire; constant attention to the orders of leaders and careful observation of the enemy; an increase of fire when the target is favorable and a cessation of fire when the enemy disappears; economy of ammunition.

"In combat shots which graze the enemy's trench or position and thus reduce the effectiveness of his fire have the approximate value of hits; such shots only, or actual hits, contribute towards fire superiority."

In battle, the battalion is the attack unit, whether operating alone or as a part of a larger unit. The soldier is taught that when charging the predominant idea must be to close with the enemy as soon as possible without ruinous losses and that it is imperative that fire be not opened until 800 yards at the outside separate the attacking and defending forces. The recruit is taught not only how to govern himself when charging upon an opposing position, but what to do when his unit is on the defensive. His instruction embraces thorough training in how to throw up earthworks and how to build trenches, this form of warfare having had its importance demonstrated in Europe.

"Modern combat," the manual says, "demands the highest order of training, discipline, leadership and morale. It requires but one kind of infantry—good infantry. It is the duty of the infantry to win the local successes which enable the commanding General to win the battle.

"When officers or men belonging to fighting troops leave their proper places to carry back or care for wounded during the progress of the action, they are guilty of skulking. This offense must be repressed with the utmost vigor."

To reap the full fruits of victory, the embryo soldier is told, a vigorous pursuit must be made and the natural inclination to be satisfied with a successful charge must be overcome. He is thoroughly drilled in the duties of reconnaisance and scouting and also in the methods of conducting himself when his command is making a counter attack.

The infantryman then is instructed on how to conduct himself when operating against other branches withdrawn again. I knew the head for Enoch's, Matthew's eldest son's, though I had seen the fellow but once, some years back. There were unpleasant tales told of Enoch.

I went swiftly on tiptoe up the hall, paused an instant outside that closed door, and, pistol ready, entered. The door swung to behind me and I heard the latch click into place.

It was a large room, nearly as large as the library below. Not a bedroom, for it was furnished only with tables and chairs, a long sofa and some book shelves. There was a fireplace at one side and, opposite, a tall mirror with faded velvet hangings. There were the dead ashes of a fire in the grate, and a single large lamp burned on a center table. The room was unoccupied.

At first I thought I must, in my haste, have mistaken the embrasure out of which I had seen that furtive head peeping. I turned quickly back to make sure. I felt for the knob of the door, to let myself out, and there was no knob. Then I remembered how promptly the door had swung to after me, how neatly the oiled latch had clicked home, and I knew I had been lured here and trapped like any rat.

For just an instant I was afraid. I had a moment of the trapped rat's panic. Then my spirits rose again, for, after all, the room had two windows, and the wall of the house was covered by ivy. Escape was easy enough if I wished it.

But how had Enoch Gaunt got out of the place? There were no other doors. By a window? I went to one of them and examined it. It was a French window that could be closed only from the inside, and closed it certainly was.

I stood thinking, and once more I began to be a little afraid. It is more exact, perhaps, to say that a kind of uneasiness, very like fear, began to grow in me. I had the uncomfortable consciousness of another unseen presence in that room—the feeling that I was watched by eyes I could not see. I looked about me, and there was no conceivable hiding place for a human being. But then there was no visible means of exit other than the door, yet I had seen Enoch Gaunt enter the room, and now he was gone from it like a ghost.

The feeling of another presence near me grew stronger still. It was like something heard or smelled. It was like ghostly noises at night to a child. I began to be more afraid, and I knew that soon I should be running round the walls in a panic. I pulled myself together with a great effort, slipped my pistol into a side pocket and drew out my cigarette case. I bent over the big lamp on the center table, as if to take a light from it, and saw it was one of those lamps that are extinguished by pressing down a little lever. I put out my hand, and in an instant the room was in darkness.

I chanced to be facing the tall mirror opposite the fireplace, and as my eyes accustomed themselves to the sudden gloom I saw a strange thing. I saw that the whole, high, narrow panel of glass, which was, perhaps, the size of an ordinary door, glowed faintly yellow with light, and that behind it, dim and black, a man's figure stood in a crouching attitude, half turned away, as if for flight.

It was exactly as if I, outside in the dark, looked in through a somewhat clouded window upon a very dimly lighted room, or, rather, passageway, for beyond the man's crouching figure I could see nothing but black hangings, turned gray by the faint light which came from somewhere at one side, out of my line of vision.

For a moment I stood staring, and I confess that the back of my head felt cold and that the hair bristled there. Then, all at once, I remembered to have read in an old book of glasses which had all the appearance of a mirror from a brightly lighted room, but were transparent to a spy hiding in darkness behind them. I drew a long breath of relief, and I recall that I even took the time to wonder what possible use old Matthew could have found for such medievalism in Westchester County. Well, I had heard queer tales of Eagle's Nest.

I realized that I was now, in my complete darkness, invisible to the man behind that sham mirror. I suppose it never occurred to him that he was visible to me. Certainly he stood still where he was, waiting. I took a step or two. I caught up a small, heavy, mahogany chair, whirled it once round my head, and threw it with all my strength.

There was a great, rending, shattering crash and a scream. I leaped forward into the passageway almost as the broken glass shivered about my feet. It was narrow, as I had guessed, and hung with black cloth. It was damp, too, and smelled of confinement and decay. I found that the faint light came from a candle set in a niche in the wall and well shaded.

Before me a dark figure staggered and scrambled and ran, its hands over its face, down the narrow passage. I called out: "Stop, or I'll fire on you!" but the figure ran on, bumping from wall to wall, stumbling, half falling, and I ran after it, my pistol ready in my hand. We came to some stairs leading upward, and there I might have had my man by the heels, for I ran better than he, but I bided my time. We mounted to what seemed a great lumber room under the roof, ran across this, and on the opposite side of the house, half fell, half leaped down a similar stair. I hung a little back, wary of traps, so that the fellow who fled from me was perhaps 15 or 20 feet in advance. He looked back over his shoulder, turned suddenly, like a coursed rabbit, there was a great flash of light, and he was gone.

He had not taken time to close the door or panel after him, and when I reached it I saw that he hadn't escaped, for he had caught his foot as he leaped, and fallen full length upon the floor. I stood in the opening and looked down some three feet into a brightly lighted room, hung with flowery chintz and smelling of roses. There was a brass bed under a chintz canopy in a recess; there were comfortable chairs about; there was a fire burning, a lamp on a center table, covered with books and magazines.

Beside the center table, with her hands over her mouth to check a scream, stood a tall young girl with her red hair in a big braid down her back. She was dressed in something straight, white and clinging. I am unfamiliar with the names of women's garments. She stood beside an overturned chair, silent, her hands caught up over her mouth, as Gaunt, cut, torn and bleeding, sprawled at her feet, half under the round table.

He was struggling to get something into his hands. I might have known what it was, but I didn't. I was looking elsewhere. He rolled suddenly over, and, without a word, but with sobbing, breathless cries, fired five pistol shots at me in quick succession.

I hope he was a better marksman in his calmer moments.

Still that splendid girl did not scream nor shrink, though the air about her was full of biting, acrid smoke.

I stepped down into the room and bowed to her. Enoch scrambled away from me and lay further off, panting. "You are very brave," said I. "I think you are the bravest woman I have ever seen, and I am bitterly sorry for this affront to you. May I ask you, for your own sake, to leave the room a moment? I have to deal with that ruffian on the floor yonder."

Her eyes questioned me over the white hands that were still clasped at her lips, and I shook my head:

"I am not a thief. I have only come to Eagle's Nest for my own."

"He lies! He lies!" cried Enoch Gaunt, on the floor yonder. He got to his knees, chattering like a frightened, wounded ape.

"He's a thief, a murderer. He's"——

"Get up!" said I, looking at him, and he got to his feet, looking toward the door.

"You saw him shoot at me," I said to that tall, red-haired girl. "And you saw that I did not shoot back, though I have a pistol here. Won't you please go? I ask it for your own sake."

She looked at me for another long moment, then shook her head, and I sighed and turned to the man.

"For this lady's sake, give me what you have that is mine and go quietly."

"I've got nothing of yours!" he cried, coughing in the bitter smoke. And he grimaced at me and added: "Thief!"

"Have I got to make you give it up?" I took a step toward him and he howled and covered his torn face. He was a poor thing. Old Matthew would have been ashamed of him.

Then the girl, who had been standing silent, went across to where Enoch was and stood before him with her hand on his shoulder.

"Haven't you done enough already?" she asked, looking at me with a kind of high scorn. "You have half killed him." I shook my head.

"I threw a chair at the trick mirror he was hiding behind. The glass cut his face. He's not really hurt, he's only afraid." She looked at him and back at me.

"What is it you want?"

"Only my own. I am Peter Gaunt; since my father's death, three days ago, something very sacred to my family for centuries has been in my care. Last night this coward yonder, or his father, or both, broke into my house, drugged me in my sleep and stole what is more to me than any other conceivable thing. I must have it, for it stands for the honor of my race."

"Does your honor need something to stand for it then?" asked the red-haired girl, and I flushed and hesitated, for that was a new point of view to me.

"I hope not," I said at last. "Perhaps 'honor' is the wrong word. Perhaps I should have said 'pride.' Well, the six rubies have been the pride of the Gaunts for a very long time. Shall I let them be stolen from me and from my children and do nothing to get them back?"

The girl caught her hands up to her breast and came a step toward me. Her big eyes looked suddenly much larger—too large for her beautiful face.

"Rubies?" she asked me. "Six rubies?" And I said:

"Yes. Matthew confesses that he stole them. He has given one to each of his six sons as an insult to me and my house. So I have come for the ruby Enoch has."

The man by the wall burst out with denials and curses, but she turned to him: "Wait!" And came a step nearer.

"The Gaunt rubies. Yes, I know. I know all about them." She seemed in some strange, still state of agitation. She spoke under her breath, as if to herself:

"It can't be. I won't believe it. Oh!" She drew a quick breath, that was like a sob.

She looked long and hard at Enoch Gaunt, then turned once more to me.

"I must explain why I seemed surprised. You see, today is my birthday, and he gave—and I was given a most heavenly ruby as a present—so when you spoke of rubies, I naturally—of course, I——. It seemed so very odd!" She looked up at me like a child—a little, trusting child, and her voice had sounded like a child's voice, too. She was, after all, very young, though so tall and brave.

"Of course!" said I. "I understand." She asked:

"Would you like to see it? It's so very beautiful—the only beautiful thing I have ever owned. I've been quite mad with delight. When the sun shines through it, or the lamplight—— Oh, I can't tell you what it is to me! You must see."

That soft and clinging white robe she wore was open a little way down upon the white breast. She put a hand there and pulled out a little gold chain that I had seen about her neck. She drew into sight a great roughly polished stone, so dark in color that it looked black save where the lamplight struck through and made a little spot of crimson against her throat, like a drop of bright blood.

"You fool! You fool!" chattered Enoch Gaunt from where he clung against the wall. He cursed again viciously. "He'll take it and bolt, you idiot!" He stammered on, shivering and shaking, but neither that red-haired young girl nor I seemed to hear him. It was as if he were not there.

"Isn't it heavenly?" the girl cried with shining eyes. She came nearer, holding the jewel out at the end of the chain, and I moved awkwardly a step and took it in my hand.

I knew the six stones as I knew my own features in a glass. This was the top ruby of the dexter side. They were all pierced. They had been worn by Eastern princes long, long ago.

"Isn't it heavenly?" the girl asked me once more in her sweet child's voice, smiling up at me with her trustful, great eyes. I said:

"It is very beautiful."

"And to think that it's really and truly mine! Oh, if you'd never had anything beautiful to call your own, and then, quite suddenly, this wonderful thing! * * * I can't explain how dear to me it is and will be."

All at once, as we stood close, looking each into the other's eyes, I saw a sudden change sweep across her face, a look of doubt, of terror—a bleak look. She recoiled a little from me.

"This—— You look at me so strangely! You don't mean— This isn't—your ruby? Oh, it isn't your ruby, is it? You don't mean I've got to give it up after—all? Tell me! Tell me!" She seemed to hold her breath.

Well, there are things one cannot do.

I drew a sigh, and I think I smiled. I hope so. I said gently:

"No, I must look elsewhere." And at that the young girl seemed to draw herself up a very little and to give me a strange, straight look of gladness, and, as it were, of pride.

"So," said I, "I must be going on my way. Once more I humbly beg your forgiveness for the scene you have had to witness. And I hope you will always be very happy as long as you live."

I looked toward Enoch Gaunt, who leaned against the wall, staring and clawing at his torn face, and so went toward the door. But once I turned back to where the red-haired girl stood erect, her hands at her breast and the Gaunt ruby between them. I asked her:

"May I know your name? I don't want to remember you nameless."

She said: "It is Diana."

I said: "It is beautiful," and went out of the room.

In the library below I found my Uncle Henry, very white, guarding Matthew Gaunt. He drew a great breath when I entered, and said: "Thank God! You're all right then. I heard shots."

Afterward he asked: "Did you find it?"

And I smiled as well as I was able, and said: "I'll tell you later. We must be off now."

I looked toward Cousin Matthew. "I suppose we ought to tie him up and gag him. He'll be shooting at us as we go."

"Handkerchiefs will do it," my uncle nodded, and tossed me his. But Matthew Gaunt said:

"You needn't trouble. I don't care for bonds and gags. I give you my word not to stir for 10 minutes."

I looked at him doubtfully, and he flushed red.

"I suppose you think my word is not worth much. Well, it is when it's pledged."

"I'll trust you, Cousin Matthew," said I, and he growled in his big beard something that I couldn't hear.

We found our horses out beyond the wall where we had tethered them, and mounted in silence. I was very heavy and glum now, deep in reaction against my earlier mood. For I had betrayed my house to save an unknown girl a half hour's pain. I wondered darkly if another time I should behave otherwise, and tried to think I should. But all the while I knew it wasn't so.

There are things one cannot do.

"Off with us!" said my Uncle Henry, and I turned my horse's head, but suddenly became aware of a tall, cloaked figure standing beside me—a darker shade in the gloom. It pressed closer still and held out something for me to take.

"What's this?" I asked.

The figure said, whispering: "It's for a noble gentleman!" gave a small parcel into my hand, and was all at once gone.

"For a noble gentleman!" I spurred after my Uncle Henry and caught him up.

He asked: "Did you speak?" And I said I thought I had seen someone beside the wall. But at the bottom of the hill I drew rein for an instant and tore the wrappings from what had been slipped into my hand.

"What's that?" my Uncle Henry asked. A flash of moonlight came down from the broken, scudding clouds and shone upon us briefly.

"It's the ruby," said I. And he laughed and said I didn't sound very gay over it; and we spurred on toward Gaunt Hause.

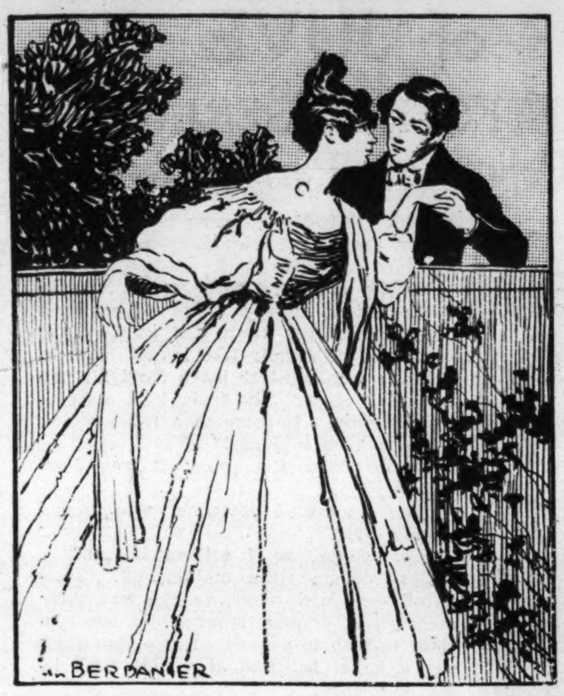
Fortifications of the Future.

ONE of the most startling surprises of the European war, not only to the laity, but to military men as well, was the comparative ease with which the big guns of the Germans battered down fortifications, such as those of Antwerp, which had been considered practically impregnable. Under the iron hail from the "42-centimeters," massive masonry, reinforced concrete crumbled like heaps of sand before a flood tide. As a result, the entire scheme of defensive fortifications all over the world will undoubtedly undergo serious modification. Naturally enough, nowhere more than in France has the subject received grave and anxious consideration. Already a well-known army man, Lieutenant-Colonel Boissouet, has contributed an article upon the subject to the supplement of a leading French encyclopedia. He declares that the number of fortresses will doubtless be greatly reduced, while those that remain will be entirely reconstructed at an enormous expense.

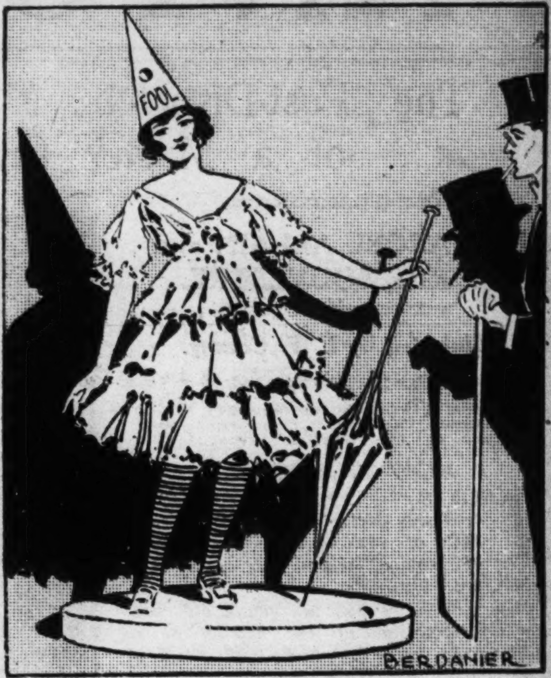
The main features of the newer style of defensive constructions are systems of connecting trenches and magazine batteries completely buried and masked, and protective networks of wire. He continues: "The infantry works will be analogous in dimensions and organization to a German fortress (feste), in which there is neither a fort nor armored batteries; there will be a few batteries for the defense of the works and the concrete shelters, but these will be completely buried, with no projection above ground. The shelters, of restricted dimensions, will so far as possible receive light and air from the side towards the interior of the fortress. The line of combat will be constituted by works of this type."

"Don't Blame the Girls, Blame the Mothers!"



The beaux of past generations were genuinely respectful to the women and their ideals.

So says Mrs. J. L. D. Morrison, social arbiter of St. Louis, in a discussion of the scantiness of the dress and the forwardness of the manners of modern young women—She declares up-to-the-minute apparel offends against modesty—Agrees with the Milwaukee prelate who refused communion to women in low necks and short sleeves



You ask why the young things dress as they do——Primarily because they are fools.

IT has been a long time since certain good people began saying harsh things about the tendency of women's apparel to become more scanty each successive year. How many ages since we first heard of peekaboo waists and sheath gowns! More than two decades ago, irreverent wags wrote flippant verses about network things, and he has no true journeyman jokesmith who couldn't think up something witty and biting to say about the costumes of the daughters of Eve.

Yet it has remained for this year of grace 1916 to see a powerful churchman thundering against what he is pleased to call the indecency of extreme modern fashions. Archbishop Sebastian Messmer of Milwaukee instructed the clergy of his diocese to refuse communion to women who approached the communion table in low-neck dresses and short sleeves.

"It is," said the Archbishop, "a most distressing and ill-boding feature of modern society. It becomes the strict duty of the Catholic clergy to warn the faithful against this evil, which is the cause of so much sin and scandal * * * and to remind Catholic parents of their duty to restrain the natural vanity of their daughters."

The Archbishop requested his clergymen to prepare sermons which would "powerfully help to prevent among our Catholic girls and women indecent exposure of naked arms, breasts and shoulders, which has become particularly ostentations during the warm summer season."

And now comes condemnation from a different source. The woman who, for many years, has been regarded as the social arbiter of St. Louis, has taken a stand alongside the Milwaukee prelate and declares that the scantiness of modern summer apparel is shockingly immodest and that something ought to be done about it. The Archbishop's powerful ally is Mrs. J. L. D. Morrison, who not only is a dictator in matters social, but is a woman of numerous interests and extraordinary energy.

You, on any day, might surprise Mrs. Morrison in her apartment at the Buckingham prosily engaged at a typewriter. She is the author of several books and is in the midst of creating another. She has found time in her life above her literary devotions, charities and social obligations, to master five languages, music and art. Mrs. Morrison masters the piano, the guitar and zither and paints in oil! Every moment of her wakeful life is a busy one.

Her desk interests her most. It is there she plans for others and many, many have been benefitted socially and otherwise through her persistent thoughtfulness. What she has to say on a subject [illegible] real thought. Her mind made up, the resultant statement is a fiat. She is fearless in her statements. She does not court publicity but braves it. There is no anonymous hiding place for her. Her fiat given, all the protest in the world will not alter one iota of it nor disturb her serenity.

The note of superficiality is lost in this keenly human woman and when she launched into a retrospective comparison of present day youth with that of her own springtime, her words bore the tones of concerned motherhood. Her denouncement of present day proprieties was made sorrowfully; but with vigor and bitterness. In lamenting the staid past you are convinced that the world has lost much of substantial happiness and selfrespect.

"The beaux of the past generations were courteous, genuinely respectful of the women and their ideals," she said. "The kiss of the hand was a mark of sincere respect—the woman was upon a pedestal hewn from the rock of modesty, embellished by a native grace—and gentlemen were pleased to have her there to worship. Only was she lifted therefrom to occupy the equally respectable pedestal of wifehood-motherhood.

"In the good old days there was more of the smack of masculine elegance, courtesy, appreciation of women and a keener realization of the immense respect due the feminine sex. The men drank more freely at social functions, perhaps, but to no bestial degree and never permitted the cup to drown respect of sex. However, the gentlemen of today are sufficiently temperate, I will say that for them. Of course, I am speaking of masses, not individuals.

"The women were demure—naturally demure—reserved, polished in manner to the minutest point of delicacy and so decidedly feminine and winsome that an honest love and respect was inspired in the sterner sex.

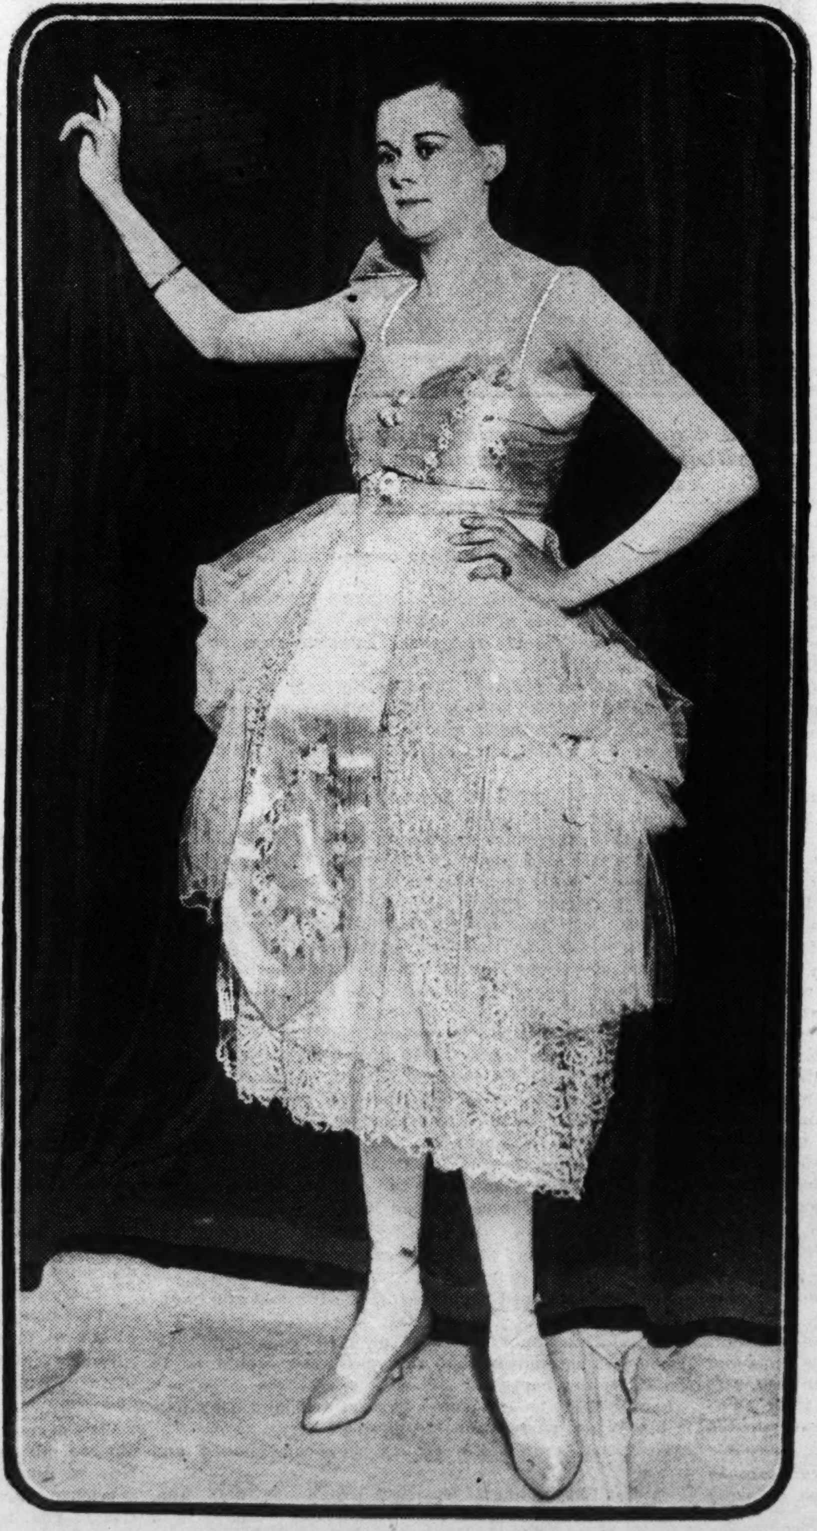
"The lover was prone to measure the object of his love by the high, idealistic standard he admired in his own mother. What he found in his mother he sought in the wife. And the old-fashioned mother! She was indeed angelic—a guardian of every virtue worth while to womanhood.

"The young woman of today falls far short of the beautiful feminine qualities of yesterday. Indeed, she eclipses the maid of yesterday in that high intellect born of education—in wrestling with problems that were before left solely to man—problems resulting from diversified occupations and studies. Woman has made colossal strides and is measuring well up with the masculine intellect and endeavor, but, unfortunately, she is losing her modesty in the going and her coy reserve is becoming rare. Oh, what a pity!

"And is the young girl all to blame?"

"No, indeed, the shame of the decadence in propriety might be laid heavily upon the mothers. Why will not the mother be more firm with her daughter and set her foot down solidly against the disgraceful, present-day costuming? I think it an outrage the way the young women parade the streets half clad and in such brazen manner that would mortally wound propriety and modesty were these virtues sentient things.

"You ask why the young things dress as they do: Primarily because they are fools. They imagine they attract the men, I suppose. Perhaps they do, but it is in the manner that the chorus girl attracts him. The real man who thinks of a home when he selects a wife is not the one to select a girl who makes it a virtue to scorn modesty and all that is honorable and holy, who makes of herself a free show, advertising her physical self rather than making soul-character paramount.



Typical costume of the present day which Mrs. Morrison condemns.

"Real red-blooded men are not seeking underdressed women to marry. They may be temporarily lured by such, but at the crucial moment manhood asserts itself and the marrying man seeks that ideal which masculinity has engraved on its heart in the idealization of a mother.

"I am most willing to accept the condemnation that will stamp me from many sides with the hateful term of old fogy if I can put forth a message to young girls that will bear fruit. I would sacrifice everything joyously if I could have the power and vehicle to make clear to the young people their weakness and folly—if I could clearly contrast the pure and joyous woman of the past that the present might see its hollowness. Let there be no mistake in comprehending me—I am making no charge of absolute grossness.

"Nor do not, for one moment, think I am hurling a sermon at the shop girls in these criticisms; the most bizarre of flimsy costumes and unpardonable practices among young girls have no class limits—perhaps the elite is the more guilty—more guilty because better environments should safeguard against immodest dress idiocy. Girls no longer consider the propriety of being well clad and scorn the advice of older heads.

"It is a common thing nowadays for a young girl to make unpardonable appointments with men to take them to the theaters and luncheon. They purchase the tickets themselves and then 'phone to some one of their gentlemen friends begging for their companionship, possibly adding a white lie in the bargain by saying they 'came by the tickets and hated to see them wasted.' Such practices have been mentioned in my hearing. It is amazingly shocking. No self-respecting woman should be guilty of inviting herself anywhere with a man. She must brave the consequences of lost respect.

"It seems anyone with a sense of modesty would condemn the present style of feminine garb and I do so fearlessly for I know I am right. Let those who will be offended with me, let them call me old fogy—I stand by my convictions—arguments are not needed to convince—a pair of good eyes will disclose hordes of underdressed women shamelessly parading streets and indoors.

"Not long since I attended a social function where a certain young woman's costume—or lack of it, because it couldn't be called decently a costume—was so amazingly brief and transparent that many of us were shocked. I dared comment and will continue to comment in such cases, hoping that I might arouse some dormant shame, and if this come to the eyes of the guilty my independence of utterance will not be shaken. Let the shoe pinch.

"How, in the name of heaven, can a mother see her daughter so arrayed? I cannot understand it. Could there be a more beautiful jewel in the crown of womanhood than modesty? What has come over our mothers? Why are they not more particular? It is the child who dictates today. The maternal function of dictating morals, of disciplining seems to be lost.

"No young girl, and I say it with all the earnestness of my heart, no young girl should be permitted to leave home until parental approval is placed upon her costume. Impropriety in dress can be stamped out and the work is alone for the mothers."

Archbishop Messmer's decree has not been widely duplicated in the other dioceses of the country. Most of the prelates have been content to leave these matters to individual taste and discretion.

THE SIX RUBIES

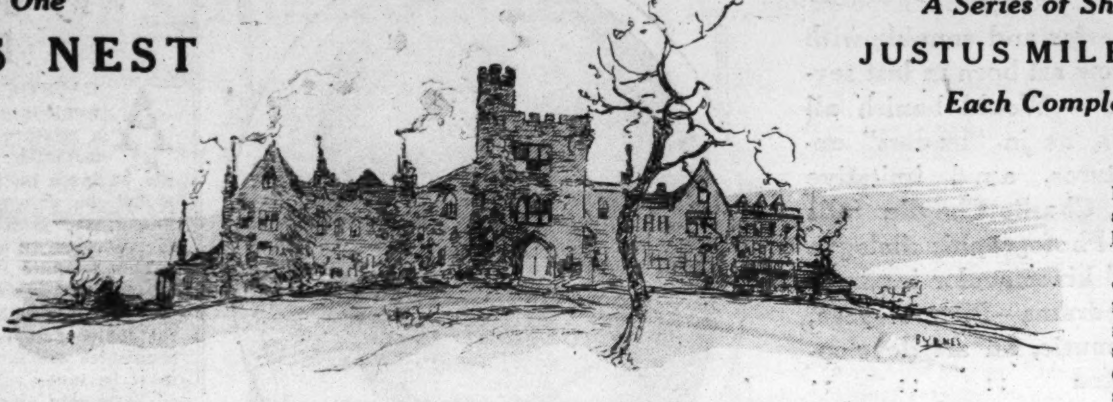
Number One

EAGLE'S NEST

A Series of Short Stories by

JUSTUS MILES FORMAN,

Each Complete in Itself.



They built a great rambling house in a kind of crazy Gothic style, part of stone and part of wood. Passersby used to laugh at it.

ON the morning of the day upon which I came of age we buried my father, who had died of a stroke following upon a roadside altercation with Cousin Matthew Gaunt, and on that night, my Uncle Henry having been summoned to town upon affairs of importance, the six rubies were stolen from the agate shield above my head as I lay sleeping.

I suppose I must at the outset explain a little about the six rubies and about the enmity between the two branches of the Gaunt family, but I promise to be exceedingly brief. To begin with, the Gaunt arms, simple like all very ancient escutcheons, are: Upon a field sable six gouttes (or drops of blood) gules, and the motto is "Je garde." There is an interesting reason for this symbolism, and perhaps I shall tell the story one day, but not now. All that matters here is that a certain crusading ancestor of mine and of Matthew Gaunt's brought home, from I know not where, six rubies, obtained in I know not what fashion—enormous stones, uncut, irregular in shape, roughly polished—brought them home to England and fastened them upon a shield of black agate where before there had been six dabs of red paint. They became and remained a family possession (for they were inscribed in the entail) of peculiar pride, importance and sanctity. They were more than treasures. Their money value, great as it was and is, seems never to have come into consideration. They were like the gold crown to the Monmouths; like the Dorset lance. They were to my house for many centuries like the martyr's bones or the fragment of the Holy Rood to the church that harbors them. They were the honor of the Gaunts.

So much for the six rubies. Now for the quarrel. Something above two hundred years ago one Joseph Gaunt, being the third of four sons and a pretty bad lot, ran away from home to foreign parts. Shortly afterward the two elder lads died of a fever, and 10 years later, credible evidence having been found of Joseph's death, the fourth son, Henry, came into the title, married and produced an heir. Then Joseph returned, much the worse for ill living and with a wife and male child. He at once claimed title and estates for his son, being himself near his end, but it turned out that the child had not been born in wedlock, and his claim was set aside. He died, cursing his house with his last breath; but the child lived and married and had sons, and there was a bitter feud.

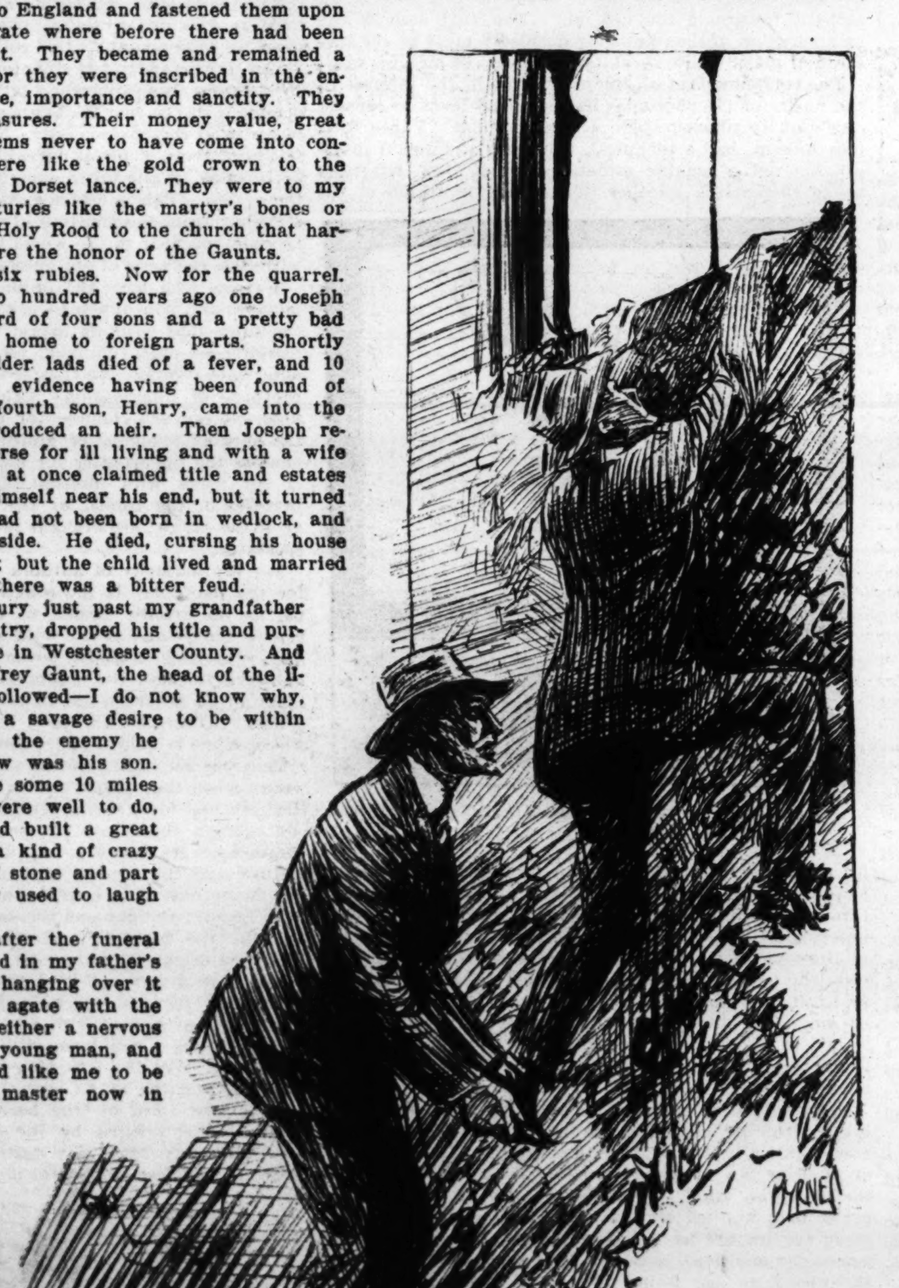
Early in the century just past my grandfather removed to this country, dropped his title and purchased a great estate in Westchester County. And not long after Humfrey Gaunt, the head of the illegitimate branch, followed—I do not know why, but I think it was a savage desire to be within striking distance of the enemy he hated. And Matthew was his son. They bought a place some 10 miles from ours. They were well to do, though not rich, and built a great rambling house in a kind of crazy Gothic style, part of stone and part of wood. Passersby used to laugh at it.

I lay that night after the funeral in the state room and in my father's great bed that had hanging over it the shield of black agate with the six rubies. I was neither a nervous nor a superstitious young man, and I felt that he would like me to be there, for I was master now in Gaunt House. I slept well from the moment I lay down, for I was dog weary, worn out with fatigue and grief. And old Stanes, the butler, had made me drink a glass of hot whisky and water — a pretty stiff dose for a lad of one and twenty unused to spirits.

I remember that I fell asleep with old Staines' words in my ears — the sole comment he had permitted himself to make upon his dead master: "He was the finest gentleman, sir, in all the land."

And no one could conceivably have bettered that summing up of my father. He had been a relic of a past age—a fine gentleman in a time when the very word had almost ceased to have a meaning. There had been nothing modern about my father. He had lived out his days, proud, gentle, a little austere, an incurious, courtly and amiable ghost cherishing forgotten ideals.

I awoke with reluctance, dread and physical pain to a kind of halfway house, or borderland between consciousness and unconsciousness. There were shapes—faces—drifting horrors. I thought I was having just a bad dream, and so in a fashion I was, but a dream unlike any hitherto of my experience. I heard a confusion of dim voices, and, among them one dear and familiar, though unrecognizable. I strove to call out in answer to this voice. I strained and shook with prodigious effort. Someone said millions of miles away: "The sal volatile again! Hold it to his nostrils!" There was a tingling pain in my head, and I thought I was a little stronger, the voices a little nearer, but I was as if held under a smothering cloud of darkness. I thought I screamed. Then quite suddenly something snapped, like a breaking wire, and I was aware of sitting up in my father's bed. My Uncle Henry's arm was about me; Staines and Mrs. Meadows, the housekeeper, was there, very much agitated; the light of broad day streamed in at the windows, and my head ached with a fiery dizzying pain. I said in a weak whisper:



He held out his clasped hands. I stepped into them, and clinging to the ivy that was thick upon the wall there, stood looking into Cousin Matthew's house.

"I've had the devil of a bad dream, old Henry!" And my uncle answered me tenderly:

"So you have, Peter. So you have, my boy. But you're out of it now." I asked what time it was and one of them said evasively that it was rather late.

I believe I lay back for a few minutes, sick with pain, but presently said I wanted to get up. So they sent Mrs. Meadows out of the room. I got to my feet, and, still with my Uncle Henry's arm about me, for I was extraordinarily wobbly, I took a turn down the room and back.

It was on the return that my eyes fell by accident upon the wall over the bed's head, and I saw. I said:

"Where's the shield gone to?" My uncle's arm tightened, and Staines, the butler, gave a kind of moan. My Uncle Henry said:

"I'll tell you presently, Peter. We must get you fit and well first. How's the head?"

It was pretty bad, and I confessed it. So he made me get into bed again and gave me a spoonful of something vile. Staines drew the shutters, and I slept again.

It was later afternoon when my Uncle Henry and I, clear headed again and without pain, faced each other over the shattered fragments of black agate from which the six charges had been plucked, and over the velvet banner from which the gold embroidered letters of the motto had been ripped with a knife. The world wheeled about me, and I felt physically sick.

This horror to follow so hard upon my father's death! In the very first days of my stewardship!

You must remember always that I had been brought up from infancy to regard those six rubies as sacred things, inseparable from the honor of my house. And there was, by modern standards, an excess of honor about Gaunt House. We breathed, ate and drank it.

With shaking hand I touched the fragments of black stone, and I stared at the six empty pits of them.

"Gone!" I said, in a sort of groan. "Gone! Stolen from over my very head!" I fingered those broken bits of agate as a child plays with blocks, and beside me my Uncle Henry sat silent, his hand on my shoulder.

Then began to pierce through the stunned apathy of my mind a sense that there was something mysterious here—something beyond common forthright crime. I said dully:

"But why smash it? Why break up the shield? Why rip the motto off the velvet?"

"Why, indeed, Peter?" echoed my Uncle Henry's voice beside me.

"I don't understand!" I said, helplessly. And my Uncle Henry said, pressing my shoulder:

"Try, Peter! Try! Think well. * * * "Who," he asked me in the manner of a helpful schoolmaster, "who, outside this house, knew that the six stones on the escutcheon were rubies and valuable?" And I said:

"Why, nobody! Nobody has even so much as seen them. Not even the servants can have known—except, perhaps, old Staines."

I stirred with my finger the ripped and tumbled banner that had so long borne the motto of my race. Then, all at once, I caught it up to me, for there were words scrawled across it where the gold letters, "Je garde," had been sewn. There were other letters there, dimly fashioned in what must have been common white chalk: "Je prends." I sprang to my feet with a cry.

"By God, it is Matthew Gaunt!" And my Uncle Henry rose to face me, very pale, with burning eyes.

"Yes, Peter, it is Matthew Gaunt. He or his sons or his bullies—Heaven knows which—broke in here last night during the storm, drugged you in your sleep—they nearly overdid it, too—and stole the six rubies. The broken bits of black agate were found this morning lying across your body, and the banner they'd trampled under their feet on the floor after scrawling an insult across it. They didn't try to hide what they had done. They meant us to know just where the rubies had gone."

I still felt sick. A priest before his rifled and desecrated altar must feel as I did. I hadn't yet begun to be angry. I was dazed.

"Why? Why?" I cried over and over again with my head between my hands. My uncle said a little wearily:

"Do you mean 'Why should Matthew come here and do what he did?' Need you ask? You're, officially, his enemy, now that your father is dead. You're the head of the Gaunt House. He considered what might be the severest blow he could deal you—the foulest insult. He thought of this, and I expect he laughed over it. Yes, I can hear him laugh. The six rubies have been for centuries a kind of symbol to us Gaunts—the pride and honor of the house. If he takes them from us he leaves us naked indeed!"

I had begun to be angry. I was so angry that it was like a physical pain. But I controlled [illegible]

"The thing is to get them back."

"How?" my uncle asked, watching me. "You can, of course, bring suit against the other house. You can go to law." But at that I burst into a bitter laugh. From head to feet I tingled with shame and rage and lust for vengeance. I ached and burned with intolerable fury. I had been always a little conscious of the anachronism of my house—a wee bit ashamed of it—but in this moment the lawless spirit of my forebears possessed me altogether. I was all at once as medieval as my dead father, as my living Uncle Henry. I was a Gaunt.

"Law!" Am I a miserable farmer squabbling over an acre of disputed land? Can the law give me my honor back?"

I knew what I had to do. There was no need of oaths or promises or wild words. My anger left me quite suddenly, and I felt calm and sure of myself, and rather gay and merry.

"Come, Uncle Henry!" said I. "That wicked old hyena has sat yonder on his hilltop and laughed and sneered long enough—he and his six young hyenas. Let's put an end to it! He's got the Gaunt rubies. Yes. But he shan't have them another day, not if I have to tear his head off his shoulders to get them out of him. Come, let's make a call, you and I. Eh? We've been unneighborly. Let's go pay our respects to Matthew Gaunt."

FANTOMAS— or, THE EXPLOITS of JUVE

The Post-Dispatch Magazine's GREAT NEW DETECTIVE SERIAL of a Master Criminal Who Mystifies the Police of Paris

By MARCEL ALLAIN and PIERRE SOUVESTRE.

Illustrated by L. F. Conrey.

(Printed by special arrangement with Brentano's, New York, American publishers of the English translation.)

HOW IT BEGAN.

JUVE, the celebrated Paris detective, is fairly outdoing himself in pursuit of the elusive arch-criminal "Fantomas," whose very existence is questioned by many.

Just now, Juve and his young aid, Fandor are investigating the murder of an unidentified woman, which took place almost under their very eyes in the apartment of a certain mysterious Dr. Chaleck, while the detectives were lying in wait for the Apache Loupart. Here the detectives themselves narrowly escaped death in a diobolical collapsible room, but finally got out through the sewer. Thereupon, Juve starts after Dr. Chaleck and Loupart, while Fandor follows Josephine, the pretty girl associate of the latter. In company with an unknown man, Josephine has taken the night train for Marseilles. Fandor secures an adjoining compartment, which he shares with two other travelers—a military officer and a young collegian.

FANDOR took his own place. The officer in mufti, absorbed in a paper, was breathing noisily. The reporter said to himself: "There's a fellow who will certainly snore like the bellows of a forge."

At any other time he would have fled from such a neighbor, but Juve's friend was not minded to close an eye.

"I will keep awake. I will keep awake," he vowed to himself as he sat down. But he had overrated his powers. Scarcely had he been ensconced 10 minutes when drowsiness crept over him. He was not sleeping, but he lost consecutive count of things. He was in a state of half-consciousness, without power to define the moment when dream took the place of reality. Several times he started, opened his eyes, roused up trying to collect his thoughts, then sank back into a slumber agitated by nightmares.

He was "conscious" of coming and going in the corridor, passers many, and enigmatic, and suspicious. He heard whisperings, caught outbursts of talk, thought he saw the glitter of arms. Then he had abrupt awakenings, whereupon he sat up, uttering suppressed groans, as if he were still, as on the night before, under the shower of sand, or floundering in the drain.

Suddenly he sprang up. He had the clear impression that someone brushed against him, at least came very close.

"Who goes there?" he murmured. No one answered him. He dragged himself out into the corridor. At the far end of the carriage a passenger, with a long black beard, was standing smoking a cigar, while, with his face glued to the window, he appeared to be intently contemplating the murky country.

A couple of steps brought Fandor beside the compartment in which were Josephine and her companion; he listened, but no sound came from it. He got back to his place, shrugging his shoulders and cursing his fears.

Yet, five minutes later, Fandor started again; he had distinctly seen passing along the corridor two fellows with villainous faces and suspicious demeanor. One of them cast into Fandor's compartment such a murderous glance that it made his heart palpitate. He took a look at his fellows. The officer in mufti was snoring like a good citizen. The slumber of the "clerk" was lighter. The young fellow, in fact, often opened his eyes and cast uneasy glances about him, then pretended to sleep as soon as he caught Fandor watching him.

The train slackened speed; they were entering Laroche Station; there was a stop to change engines.

The officer in mufti suddenly awoke and got out. Fandor had the feeling that from now on he remained alone—deserted! The reporter for a mad moment was prompted to force his neighbors to establish their identity, then owned to himself it would be the most palpable of follies, as it was the most absurd of fears.

The new engine being coupled on, the train got in motion once more, gathering way, and at last covering a mile in a minute and a quarter.

The getting out of the officer had led to changes in the carriage. The compartment holding Josephine and her partner was thrown open, and, strange to say, his neighbor, the collegian, had gone to a seat in that compartment.

Fandor was too uneasy to allow himself to go to sleep. To avoid so doing, he determined to put himself to penance on one of the hammocks which garnished the corridor. He chose that which was slung just opposite Josephine's compartment, of which the door remained open.

But so great was his weariness that he was in a deep sleep in a quarter of an hour.

A violent shock sent him rolling on the cross seat of Josephine's compartment. On raising his eyes a cry of terror broke from his lips.

An inch from his forehead showed the muzzle of a revolver, while the man who held the weapon commanded in a rough tone: "Hands up all!"

Fandor, instinctively complying, put his two hands together above his head, waiting to see what would happen next.

Suddenly he uttered a cry. Slipping between the first man and the door of the compartment, a kind of gnome of supple movements appeared. Like his accomplice, he was masked.

They were not alone. Despite the roar of the train, Fandor could hear quite plainly, in the corridor, significant phrases uttered by one and another. With rage in his heart, he thought of the few banknotes that adorned his pocketbook.

At sight of Josephine the big cutthroat said: "You, woman, get out of here!"

Had this occurrence some connection with Josephine's presence and as a corollary the presence of Loupart and his gang? Betraying nothing by her expression, Josephine, hurriedly slipping between the gnome and the colossus, went and cowered at the end of the carriage. Fandor held fast by the threat of the revolver. No doubt his turn was coming to have his pockets emptied. But it was not so. The gnome, going close to the stout gentleman, Josephine's partner, waited.

"Go on!" suddenly commanded the big ruffian, who seemed to be the leader. "Go on! Go through them!"

The gnome, with wonderful adroitness, ransacked the coat and waistcoat pockets of the stout man, who, shaking with alarm, made no resistance. In an instant he was relieved of watch and a pocket book almost empty. The robbers now forced him to undo his shirt and gave a yell of triumph when he appeared in his flannel singlet. He had round his loins a broad leather belt.

From the body of the traveler the belt passed to the big masked robber, who made no secret of his satisfaction.

The belt contained pockets stuffed with gold and banknotes.

The job, no doubt, had been planned beforehand. No doubt it was known that this passenger would be in the Marseilles express.

Fandor and the collegian, who sat still and ashy pale in his corner, passed almost unnoticed.

The stout man collapsed on the seat, choked and swooned.

Fandor instinctively was for moving to help him. The masked robber reminded him of his presence by a tap on the shoulder.

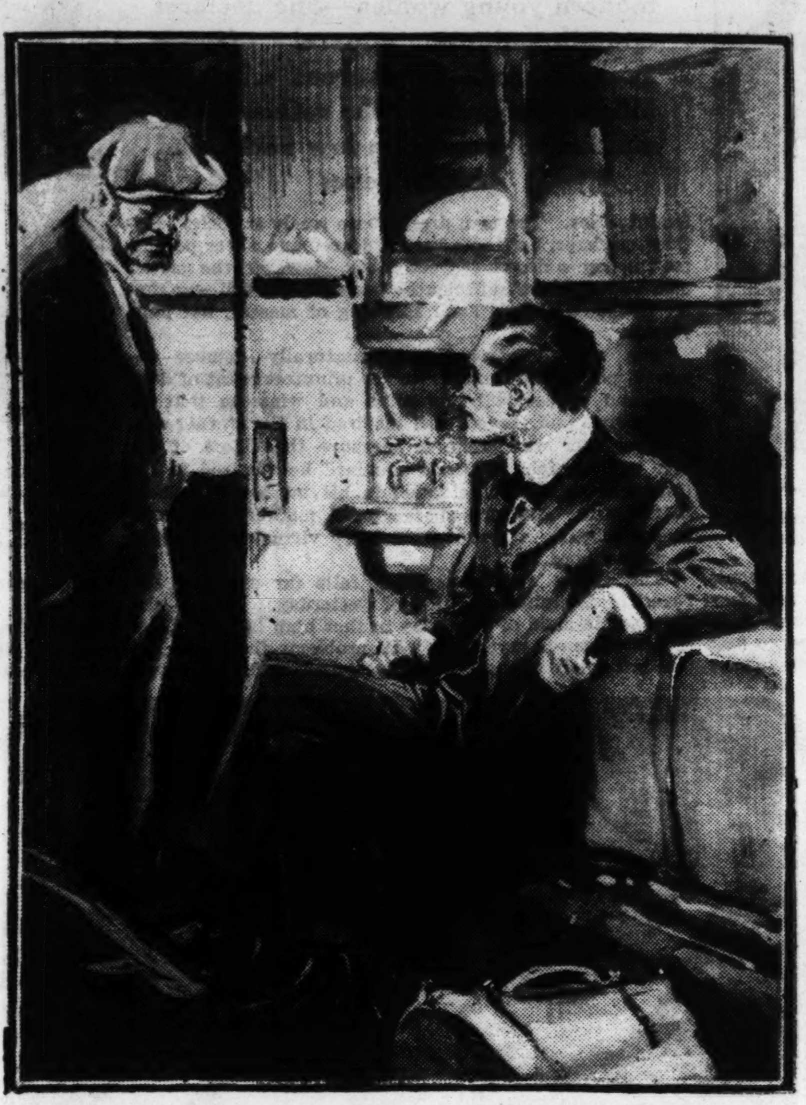
"Don't stir!" he said. "It's no concern of yours. I have my eye on you."

Fandor had essentially only one objective—Josephine. Was it Loupart's gang or not? Was Josephine to be classed with it or among its victims?

The gnome had glided away, and his fellow ruffian backed slowly toward the far end of the carriage. Fandor thought the thing most needed was to fling himself on the alarm gear and stop the train. He determined not to miss the chance, even though he might incur serious injuries.

The call ring was exactly above the pallid collegian. With a sudden movement he flung himself on the alarm, but suddenly gave a cry and fell backward. The collegian had leaped on him and cruelly bitten his finger!

At that instant the express slackened its pace. Fandor, staring at his wound and then at the stout man, still in a semi-conscious condition on the seat opposite, murmured: "Good! Someone has succeeded better than I. Here's the train pulling up."



He had distinctly seen passing along the corridor two fellows with villainous faces and suspicious demeanor. One of them cast into Fandor's compartment such a murderous glance that it made his heart palpitate.

In the corridor there was a certain bustle, but no disorder. The robbers were preparing to get down, not as headlong fugitives, but simply like honest folks in a hurry who want to leave the train the instant it stops. The train kept slackening its speed. It came to a full stop.

"Is it high to jump?"

Fandor knew the voice; it was Josephine's.

"No," answered someone, who immediately added:

"Let yourself go, I will catch you."

The robbers were making off. Josephine went with them, so she was their accomplice. Fandor sprang into the corridor to rush in pursuit. But a shot rang out, a bullet flattened above his head in the woodwork.

In an instant he formed a new plan. He would leave the carriage by the opposite side, and was making off when a groan detained him. The stout man was recovering his senses gradually; he clung to the other's clothes.

"Be hanged to it," growled Fandor. "This man is the last straw!"

But here he started: it seemed that the train was gathering away again. Fandor leaned his head out through the hole in the glass and searched the dark night.

"Here's a game!" he broke out. In the distance was the train moving on at full speed. Only a fraction of it had pulled up—the carriage in which he was and the rear goods van. Had the couplings broken accidentally? No. The breaking of them must have been the robber's parting stroke.

But a fresh surprise was in store for the adventurer. The fragment cut off from the express was on the move in the wrong way.

At that moment the stout man, having quite recovered, drew near and, bending forward to have a look, too, bellowed with alarm:

"Why, we are backing! We are going down a slope. It is appalling! The Simplon express is following us at 12 minutes' interval. If only"——

Fandor realized the frightful danger. He made for the outer door of the carriage to see if it would not be a good place to jump off, when he noticed that the speed was slackening anew.

The grating of the brakes upheld him in this notion. The guard in the rear van, which was still coupled to their carriage, had also realized what was happening and applied the brake to their salvation.

A few minutes later they stopped. Fandor and the others sprang frantically out. From the goods van two railway men also sprang, and urged them: "Make off! Save yourselves!"

The frantic wretches got over a hedge, floundered in a hole full of water, stuck in plowed ground, then suddenly lay flat and motionles, face downward, while a fearful din burst like thunder on the hush of the night.

The Simplon express, racing at full speed, had crashed into the two carriages and smashed them to bits, while the engine and forward carriages of the train were telescoped.

CHAPTER XIV.

Flight Through the Night.

SCARCELY had Loupart received Josephine in his arms as she jumped from the carriage than he urged his mates to make haste. It was a dark night, without moon, favorable to the robbers' plans.

Loupart's satellites tumbled in all haste down the bank of the line. Before them stretched fields planted with vines, and full of ups and downs. They were at the foot of the Cote d'Or.

For a good quarter of an hour the ill-omened crew continued their retreat by forced march. They at length described a pale stripe on the dark fields; it was a road.

"There's the track," declared "The Beard."

"The dusty one to Dijon?"

"No, to Verrez."

Loupart perched himself on a slope at some hundreds of yards from the road. As his mates gather round him and waited his orders, he exclaimed:

"It's a good job—it was juicy. But there was a lookout we did not foresee. We share tomorrow evening. Now we must unglue. Josephine, you, 'Beard,' and I will get back together. There's work for us in Paris. The rest of you, it's no time to be fooling around. Manage as you please; the one thing is not be pounced on and be back in the nest about 10. Understand?"

The collegian, who was no other than Mimile, queried: "Where are we to get together?"

"In the cool."

Loupart motioned to "The Beard" and Josephine to follow him.

"You, 'Beard,' show us the way to the telegraph."

"Why are you going to the telegraph?"

It was a natural question, yet Loupart thundered:

"Why, idiot, we are robbed. Did you see the wine dealer's notes? Halves! The piker had insured himself for nothing."

"The Beard" understood his leader's allusion, for he broke out into recriminations.

As if the other's anger only amused him, Loupart recovered his good humor.

"Come, two halves will make a whole."

"You know where to lay hands on the tally? And

Muensterberg on the Movies of the Future

Noted psychologist expects Shakspeare of photoplay to arise and ennoble with genius only new art born in last several centuries — Would banish all printed words, as in "leaders" explaining pictures, and imitative noises "when Charlie Chaplin falls downstairs"—Photographic dialogue inartistic, and kinemacolor inadmissible in photodrama—Picture-opera, with special music, an art development anticipated :: :: ::

HUGO MUENSTERBERG, the renowned professor of psychology at Harvard University, has lately turned his penetrating mind upon the subject of the movies, which he proclaims to be the only new art-form born in the last several centuries.

Whether it will prove to be a great art lies still in the future, he believes, and will be proved only if a Shakspeare, a Leonardo da Vinci or a Mozart arises to ennoble it with genius. Some of the esthetic developments which the photoplay must experience in the future are described in the following extracts from Muensterberg's latest book, "The Photoplay" (Appletons).

PROF. HUGO MUENSTERBERG.

By HUGO MUENSTERBERG.

THE greatest of all the esthetic demands of the new art of the photoplay is the one for which no specific prescription can be given, namely, the imaginative talent of the scenario writer and the producer. The new art is in that respect not different from the old arts. A Beethoven writes immortal symphonies; a thousand conductors are writing symphonies after the same pattern and after the same technical rules, and yet not one survives the next day. What untalented amateurs produce is trivial and flat, and it cannot be otherwise with the art of the film. Even the clearest recognition of the specific demands of the photoplay cannot be sufficient to replace original talent and genius. The most slavish obedience to esthetic demands cannot make a tiresome plot interesting and a trivial action significant.

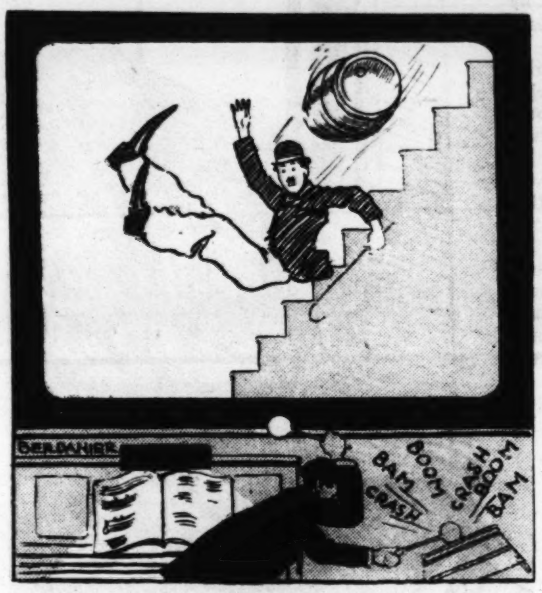
When we begin to analyze the psychology of the moving picture we soon become aware that the photoplay has a way to perform this task of art with entire originality, independent of the art of the theater, as much as poetry is independent of music or sculpture of painting. It is an art in itself. Only the future will tell us whether it will become a great art, whether a Leonardo, a Shakspeare, a Mozart, will ever be born for it.

One of the supreme demands must be for an original literature of real power and significance, in which every thought is generated by the idea of the screen. As long as the photoplays are fed by the literature of the stage, the new art can never come to its own, and can never reach its real goal. It is surely no fault of Shakspeare that Hamlet and King Lear are very poor photoplays. If ever a Shakspeare rises for the screen, his work would be equally unsatisfactory if it were dragged to the stage.

If we turn to a few special demands for a new artistic method, we naturally think at once of the role of words. The drama and the novel live by words. How much of this noblest vehicle of thought can the photoplay conserve in its domain? We all know what a large part of the photoplay today is told us by the medium of words and phrases. How little would we know what these people are talking about if we saw them only acting and had not beforehand the information which the "leader" supplies? Usually the series of pictures is interrupted and an explanatory statement which gives meaning to the whole is thrown upon the screen. Even the most intelligent spectator would feel helpless without these frequent guideposts. But this habit of the picture houses today is certainly not an esthetic argument. They are obliged to yield to the scheme simply because the scenario writers are still untrained and clumsy in using the technique of the new art.

Some religious painters of medieval times put in the picture itself phrases which the persons were supposed to speak, as if the words were leaving their mouths. But we could not imagine Raphael or Michelangelo making use of a method of communication which is so entirely foreign to the real spirit of painting. The photoplay of the day after tomorrow will surely be freed from all elements which are not really pictures. The beginning of the photoplay as a mere imitation of the theater is nowhere so evident as in this inorganic combination with bits of dialogue or explanatory phrases. Whoever writes his scenarios so that the pictures cannot be understood without these linguistic crutches is an esthetic failure in the new art. The next step in the emancipation of the photoplay decidedly must be the creation of plays which speak the language of pictures only.

The condemnation of guiding words, in the interest of the purity of the photoplay as such, also leads to earnest objection to phonographic accompaniment. Those who, like Edison, had a technical, scientific and social interest, but not a genuine esthetic point of view, naturally asked themselves whether this optical imitation of the drama might not be improved by an acoustical imitation also. All who devoted themselves to this problem had considerable difficulties, and when their ventures proved practical failures with the theater audiences, they were inclined to blame their inability to solve the technical problem perfectly. They were not aware that the real difficulty was an esthetic and internal one. As soon as we have clearly understood that the photoplay is an art in itself, the conservation of the spoken word is as disturbing as color would be on the clothing of a marble statue.

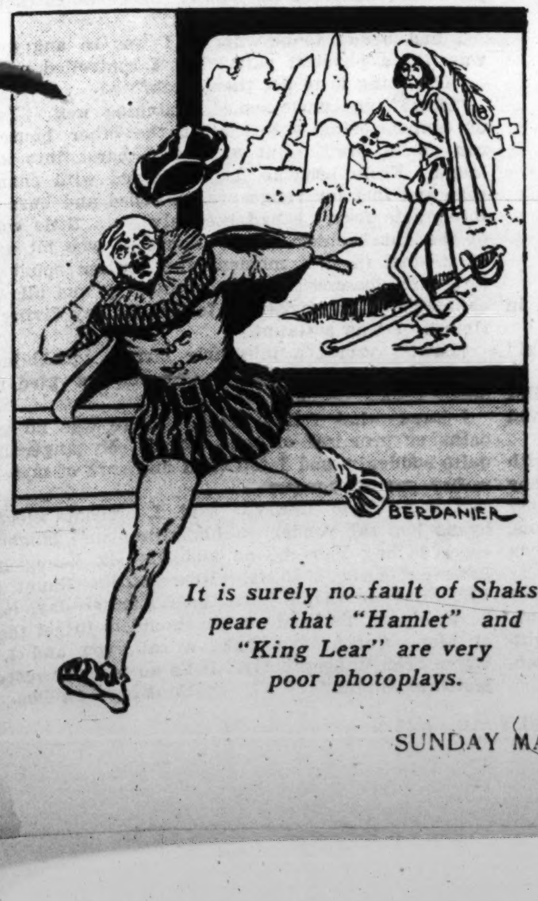


We hear the noise when Charlie Chaplin falls downstairs.

It is quite different with accompanying music. Even if the music in the overwhelming majority of cases were not so pitifully bad as it is in most of the picture theaters today, no one would consider it an organic part of the photoplay itself, like the singing in the opera. The music does not tell a part of the plot and does not replace the picture as words would do, but simply reinforces the emotional setting. It is quite probable, when the photoplay has found its esthetic recognition, that composers will begin to write the musical score for a beautiful photoplay with the same enthusiasm with which they write in other musical forms.

Just between the intolerable accompaniment by printed or spoken words on the one side and the perfectly welcome rendering of emotionally fitting music on the other, we find the noises with which the photoplay managers like to accompany their performances. When the horses gallop, we must hear the hoofbeats; if rain or hail is falling, we hear the splashing or the thunderstorm. We hear the firing of a gun, the whistling of a locomotive, ships' bells, or the ambulance gong, or the barking dog, or the noise when Charlie Chaplin falls downstairs. They even have a complicated machine, the "allefex," which can produce over 50 distinctive noises, fit for any photoplay emergency.

It will probably take longer to rid the photoplay of these appeals to the imagination than the explanations of the leaders, but ultimately they will have to disappear, too. They have no right to existence in a work of art which is composed of pictures. We might just as well improve the painting of a rose garden by bathing in rose perfume in order that the spectators might get the odor of the roses, together with the sight of them.



It is surely no fault of Shakspeare that "Hamlet" and "King Lear" are very poor photoplays.

It may be more open to discussion whether this same negative attitude ought to be taken toward color in the photoplay. The famous British coronation pictures were superb, and they gained immensely by the rich color effects. For the news pictures of the day the "kinemacolor" and similar schemes are excellent. But when we come to photoplays we stand before the problem: How far does the coloring subordinate itself to the aim of the photoplay? Would not this color be again an addition which oversteps the essential limits of this particular art? We do not want to paint the cheeks of the Venus de Milo; neither do we want to see the coloring of Mary Pickford or Anita Stewart. Colors would be almost as detrimental as the voices.

The unique task of the photoplay can be fulfilled only by a far-reaching disregard of reality. The real human persons and the real landscapes must be transformed into pictorial suggestions only. We must be strongly conscious of their pictorial unreality in order that the wonderful play of our inner experiences may be realized on the screen. This consciousness of unreality must suffer seriously from the addition of color. We are once more brought too near to the world which really surrounds us with the richness of its colors.

Writers who have the unlimited possibilities of trick pictures and film illusions in mind have proclaimed that the fairy tale with its magic wonders ought to be the photoplay's chief domain, as no theater stage could enter into rivalry. No theater could dare to imitate such raptures of imagination. Other writers have insisted upon the superb chances for gorgeous processions and the surging splendor of multitudes. Again others emphasize the opportunity for historical plays or especially for plays with unusual scenic setting, where the beauties of the tropics or the mountains, of the ocean or of the jungle, are brought into living contact with the spectator.

Yet the majority of authors claim that the true field for the photoplay is the practical life which surrounds us, as no artistic means of drama or literature can render the details of life with such convincing sincerity and with such realistic power. These are the slums, not seen through the spectacles of a litterateur or the fancy of an outsider, but in their whole abhorrent nakedness. These are the dark corners of the metropolis where crime is hidden and where vice is growing rankly.

They are all right; and at the same time they are all wrong when they praise one at the expense of the other. Realistic and idealistic, practical and romantic, historical and modern topics are fit material for the art of the photoplay. Its world is as unlimited as that of literature, and the same is true of the style of treatment. The humorous, if it is true humor; the tragic, if it is true tragedy; the gay and the solemn, the merry and the pathetic, the half-reel and the five-reel play, all can fulfill the demands of the new art.

Yes, it is a new art—and this is why it has such a fascination for the psychologist who, in a world of ready-made arts, each with a history of many centuries, suddenly finds a new form still undeveloped and hardly understood. For the first time the psychologist can observe the starting of an entirely new esthetic development, a new form of true beauty in the turmoil of a technical age, created by its very technique and yet more than any other art destined to overcome outer nature by the free and joyful play of the mind.

We do not want to paint the cheeks of the Venus de Milo.

Why the Picture Show Is Popular

A CAUSTIC critic, Prof. Muensterberg writes, would say that the average American is a mixture of business, ragtime and sentimentality. In the photoplay he satisfies his business instinct by getting so much for a nickel, he enjoys his ragtime in the slapstick humor, and gratifies his sentimentality with the preposterous melodramas which fill the program.

This is quite true, and yet it is not true at all. Success has crowned every effort to improve the photostage; the better the plays are the more the audience approves them. The most ambitious companies are the most flourishing ones. There must be inner values which make the photoplay so extremely attractive and ever fascinating.

The richest source of the unique satisfaction of the photoplay is probably that esthetic feeling which is significant for the new art. The massive outer world has lost its weight, it has been freed from time, space and causality, and it has been clothed with the forms of our own consciousness. The mind has triumphed over matter and the pictures roll on with the ease of musical tones. It is a superb enjoyment that no other art can furnish us.

that's why you are scuttling to the telegraph?"

"The Square" clenched his fists.

"No," he rejoined, his voice full of anger. "It's not only to cut the slice we shall eat tomorrow, it's to put something sweet on it."

"Who?"

In a low tone, for the leader did not like talking before women, and Josephine was trapesing at his side, Loupart answered his deputy.

"Juve!"

The conversation stopped short. Never would "The Beard" have ventured to argue over one of Loupart's decisions, still he was a little afraid of the latter's plan. Juve, whose death Loupart had just announced with a calm certainty, had among the Apaches such a name for bravery and skill that "The Beard" could not fail to regard the match as perilous in the extreme.

The little group moved forward in silence. Josephine began to get out of breath.

"Say, boy, do we go far?"

"Ask 'Beard.'"

"No," replied the latter, "we are getting there, Verrey village is behind that hill, little one."

Loupart now broke in:

"Go and wait for me with Josephine. I shall catch up in a quarter of an hour. Just time to send off a wire."

"The Beard" and Josephine left the road and went across country, making for the highway from Paris to Dijon, which "The Beard" had pointed out in the distance. His acolytes gone, Loupart resumed his way.

From the first houses in the village of Verrey, Loupart could see that the little place knew of the accident. From the top of the little hill he could see, in the distance, reddening flames.

"That's going all right," he thought; "the Simplon express has run into the raft in distress. There must be a fine stew."

He put on an anxious expression and assumed a hurried and agitated air, stopping the peasants who were bustling about the streets of the little place.

"The telegraph office? Which way?"

Loupart seized a form and wrote on it hastily:

"Juve, Inspector of Safety, 142 Rue Bonaparte, Paris. All is well; found gang complete, including Loupart. Robbery committed, but failed. Cannot give details. Am certain we can end it speedily. Be at Bersy Stores alone, but armed, tomorrow at 11 in the evening, near the cellars of Kessler House. FANDOR."

Loupart read over his message contentedly, observing in a low tone:

"The trap is good; even splendid! There are nine chances out of ten in favor of the idiot of a reporter by now being smashed up by the express."

The clerk held out her hand to take the message. The bandit looked extremely polite.

"Pay special attention to this message," he insisted. "Read it over. You see it must be kept wholly secret, it is of the utmost consequence."

The clerk was greatly excited.

"You may count on me, sir. Do you belong to the police?"

Loupart, a perfect actor, assumed to perfection the air of a police official who must be silent, but who knows a great deal about it!

"I reckon on you, may I not?" he said again.

He left the office just as two policemen brought in a fresh official message.

Ten minutes' quick walk brought Loupart once more to the side of Josephine and "The Beard." His two accomplices had waited for him at the side of the highway.

"Josephine," he ordered, "get down the hill, get a quarter of a mile from here, and the first motor that passes, set to and howl. Call 'help' and 'murder.' It must pull up."

"But, Loupart"——

"Go, I tell you."

The young woman went, knowing she must obey.

Some minutes passed. "The Beard" and Loupart saw Josephine go down the road, then hide in one of the ditches.

"Your gun is ready, 'Beard'?"

"Six plugs, old man."

Loupart had scarcely given these orders when, on the horizon, a bright gleam became visible.

An automobile was fast nearing them. As it passed Josephine, she rushed out in the road, uttering piercing cries.

"Help! Murder! Have pity! Stop!"

The chauffeur, taken aback, made a dash at his brakes. From the inside of the double phaeton a traveler arose and leaned out.

Josephine kept running toward the car. It was about to stop when from the two sides of the way Loupart and "The Beard" rushed out.

"The passenger is yours!" cried the former; "the chauffeur mine."

In three seconds the two, masters of the situation, had the muzzles of their revolvers against the temples of the strangers.

"Josephine!" said Loupart, and pointed to a roll of cord that stuck out of his pocket, "their feet, their hands!"

And when the tying up was done and the two victims were safely gagged, he gave the order to "The Beard":

"Lay them by the side of the road. No! A hundred yards into the fields, so that they may not be found for some time."

He got under way, full speed ahead, and after a moment's silence, grinding his teeth he added in a low tone, quite to himself:

"Now, it's you against me, Juve!"

CHAPTER XV.

The Accident to the Simplon Express.

WHILE Loupart and his mates were making off across country the catastrophe occurred. At a curve the Simplon express smashed into the two coaches.

Terrified and dumb with horror, Fandor and his fellows saw the heavy sleeping cars topple over. Fandor picked himself up and ran full speed toward the ill-starred train. He was still engaged in helping the escaped travelers and the wounded, whose cries resounded from under the heaped-up wreckage of the coaches, when succor began to arrive.

The countryside was soon one great uproar. Lights flashed; a quarter of an hour after the disaster half the neighborhood was afoot from all quarters.

From a neighboring siding the railroad men telephoned the news of the mishap. Word came that a relief train was being made up and would be there in an hour.

Fandor, quite exhausted, was moving away from the scene of the disaster, seeking a place where he could stretch himself on the ground, rest an hour, and plan, when he was halted by the appeals of a stout man, who hurried toward him, wailing:

"Sir, sir!"

Fandor recognized his stout neighbor, Josephine's companion, whom the robbers had despoiled of his strong box of a belt. Fandor hastened to meet him.

"Ah," he responded, "we have had a lucky escape! Yet what has become of your wife?"

In using the word Fandor simply wanted to interview the other. But the countenance of the stout person suddenly expressed total despair.

"My wife? That's the terrible part about it. You understand precisely—after this occurrence my wife will learn the whole story! I am a lost man! Done for! And then I don't even know what became of that little one who was with me."

So then the worthy man had not discovered that Josephine stood in with the robbers, Fandor reflected.

"That poor child completely vanished. I am looking for her everywhere. I have only known her a fortnight. I was not able to see her once in Paris; I find means to tell her I am going this journey; I make an appointment at the Lyons Station, and here's this disaster upsetting all my plans! She may have perished and will be brought back bleeding on a litter."

Fandor had got a piece of information

"You made an appointment with her at the station? She knew that you were carrying money?"

"Yes—my poor money! There's yet another misfortune; here I am all but ruined!"

"Those that robbed you will be taken, we shall give their description."

"Yes, that to be sure, there's one of them I know. One of my men—a cooper."

"You are a wine dealer?"

"An agent for wines."

"In Paris?"

"At Bercy I was going to pay my makers the profits I owe them It was almost 150,000 francs the robbers took from me."

"Why 'almost?' But who exactly are you, sir? What is your name?"

"M. Martialle—Martialle of Kessler and Barru's. Oh, it was I they were aiming at. That cooper knows well enough that every month I go into the country carrying large sums. Still, the money is not lost!"

Fandor grew excited.

"Not lost? You know where to find the robbers?"

"I do not. But they only have halves of the notes!"

"Then you had not the whole sum on you?"

"Yes, but after all, it is the thieves that are robbed! Every month when I go off to make my payments I am on my guard."

"But how?"

"A very simple method. Today I had a hundred and fifty thousand to deal out. Yesterday I got the sum together in notes. With the scissors I cut these in two, and carried on me what the villains robbed me of—150 halves of 1000-franc notes. These halves are worth nothing to them, nor will be till they can lay their hands on the 150 other halves. It's a way of insuring on the cheap. Every month I only take away with me these halves of notes, the next month I hand my creditors the other halves; they paste the two parts together and have whole notes, which people take without protest. If by ill-luck, as happened to me today, I lose one of my bundles of notes, I have only to protest at the Bank of France, give the numbers, and three months later I get fresh notes."

"But where are the other halves of the notes?"

"Oh, in a safe place, at Bercy, in the office of the firm."

Fandor all at once left M. Martialle and ran to an official bellowing orders to a gang of workmen.

"Some information, please! When will the line be cleared?"

"In an hour."

"There will be no train up to Paris till then?"

"No."

Fandor moved off along the track.

"Very good! The thing now is to write a telegram for the Capital and take it to the office. I have time enough."

The reporter, sitting down on the grass, began to write his story. But for many hours he had passed through excitements of the strongest kind. He had not been writing 10 minutes when involuntarily he fell into a state of semi-drowsiness. He was soon fast asleep.

"It's all done for! And what will they say at the office?"

It must have been 5 or 6 in the evening, the twilight was beginning to fall, when Fandor opened his eyes.

He ran frantically to the station.

"How soon the first train to Paris?"

"In two minutes, sir. It is signaled. It's the 10 o'clock."

Fandor threw up his arms and went off along the platform.

"Ten at night. I shall not be in Paris till 10 in the morning! I have not even time to run to the telegraph office and warn Juve. What an idiot I was to go to sleep like that."

CHAPTER XVI.

A Drama at the Percy Exchange.

JUVE passed the whole day at the Frochot block. The papers had got wind of the drama. Blood-curdling tales were told about Dr. Chaleck, Juve, Loupart, the house of crime, the business at the hospital; but to anyone who knew what had actually taken place, the truth did not transpire from the accounts in the papers; quite the reverse.

For all that, when people had seen masons, electricians and zinc workers take possession of Dr. Chaleck's house and begin to turn it upside down under the guidance of people in frock coats, who did not look like contractors, the crowd gathered round that house.

Juve, installed in the drawing room on the ground floor, first had a long interview with the owner, M. Nathan, the well-known diamond broker of the Rue de Provence. The poor man was in despair. All he knew of Dr. Chaleck was that he had been his tenant just four years and had always paid his rent regularly.

"You did not suspect," asked Juve in conclusion, "the contrivance of the electric elevator in which the doctor placed a study identically similar to his real one?"

"Certainly not, sir. Eighteen months ago my tenant asked permission to repair the house at his expense; it must have been then that he had the queer arrangement built."

Toward noon Juve found himself alone with Detective Michel, and the two men expatiated on the occurrences which occupied them.

"What I cannot understand," said Michel, "is the telephone call which came from her asking for help. Either the victim herself phoned and in that case did not die, as we think, in the early part of the night, or it was not she, and then"——

Juve smiled.

"Remember, when we found the body at 6:30 it was cold. The call was not given till 6, when the woman had been dead some little time. I am sure of that, and the medical experts will uphold me."

"Then it was a third person who gave it?"

"Yes, one who sought to have the crime discovered soon, but yet certainly did not expect me or Fandor to come back."

Juve trapped, Fandor to the rescue in the following installment.

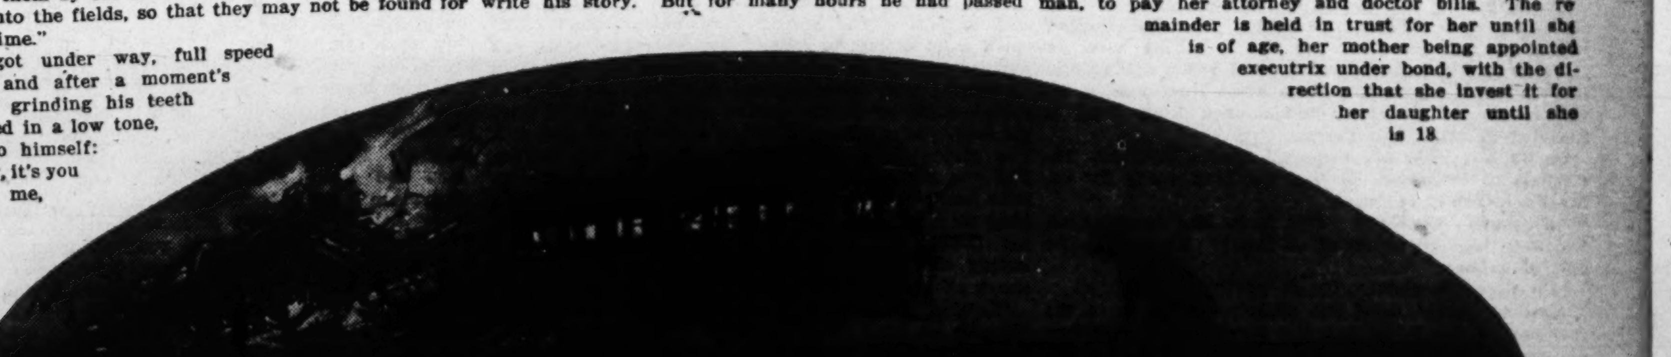
tions, like those founded in Germany to equip maimed soldiers to earn their living.

When she is 18 years of age she will receive $16,000 in cash, part of a settlement made by the company by which she was employed, and which she sued for $100,000 damages. She has no definite plans for the use of this money, except to declare emphatically that it will not be spent for an automobile or any other luxury. Perhaps she will buy real estate, she says, or let the money lie at interest in the bank.

Nearly $1800 was raised for her by private persons who were touched by her misfortune. Of this $500 was spent to buy her artificial arms, and the rest is being paid to her at the rate of $10 a week.

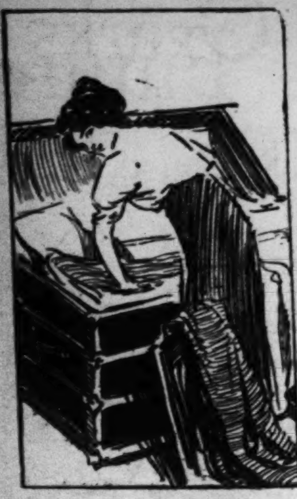
She was only 15 years old when the accident occurred, on Nov. 5, 1915, at the bag mills. She was employed in feeding bags into a press which stamped letters upon them. She worked six days a week from 7:30 a. m. until 5 p. m., with a half hour for lunch, and fed from 15,000 to 20,000 bags into the press each week, for which her wage was $5.90.

The press had metal grippers which seized the bags and drew them between the rollers. Miss Moentman's right hand was caught in the grippers and dragged between the rollers. In trying to extricate it, her left hand and arm were crushed. There was no guard on the machine to protect her hands, it was brought out. The concern settled for $21,000 cash, of which $5000 was given to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Moentman, to pay her attorney and doctor bills. The remainder is held in trust for her until she is of age, her mother being appointed executrix under bond, with the direction that she invest it for her daughter until she is 18.



"The Simplon Express had crashed into the two carriages and smashed them to bits."

How Conscience Made One Man Secretly Pay Back $80,000 for $20,000 He Had Stolen



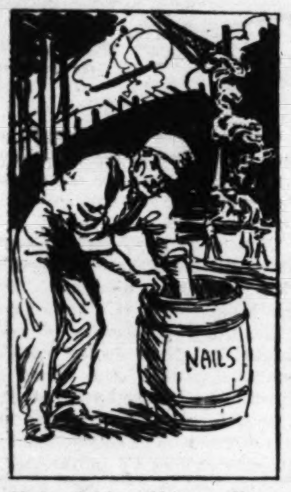
One woman smuggled table linen in from Ireland.

Wished to emulate the example of Zacchaeus, the publican, he wrote to the United States Treasury Department — Started in 1811 with an anonymous contribution of $5, the "Conscience" fund has reached $500,000 in installments ranging from 2 cents to $30,000 :: :: ::

And Zacchaeus stood and said unto the Lord: Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor; and if I have taken anything from any man by false accusation, I restore him fourfold. And Jesus said unto him, This day is salvation come to this house forsomuch as he also is a son of Abraham.—Luke XIX, 8-9.

SOME years ago a man stole $20,000 that belonged to the United States. Who he is, when he took the money and how he got it are facts that are yet unknown, perhaps, to anybody except himself. He has recently sent $30,000 to the "conscience fund" in the national treasury at Washington, with this explanation:

"This amount makes a sum aggregating $80,000 which I have sent to the United States, or four times the amount which I stole years ago. Conscience has given me no rest until I have consummated the fourfold return like Zacchaeus, the publican of old. May every thief understand the awfulness of the sin of stealing is the sincere wish of a penitent. Let no one claim any of this amount on any pretext."



Helped himself to nails at a Navy Yard.

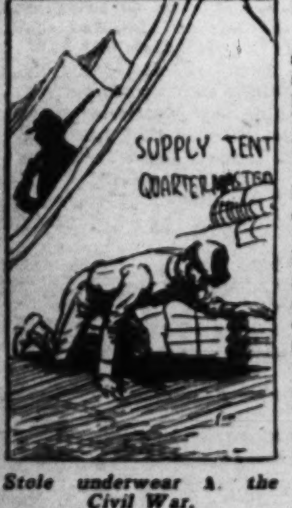
This sum and others recently received brings the total of the "conscience fund," which was started in 1811 with an anonymous payment of $5, up to $500,000. All matters relating to conscience restitutions pass through the hands of George R. Cooksey, private secretary to Secretary McAdoo. Although, in many cases, it might be easy to trace such letters to their writers, it is a point of honor in the department not to attempt to do so. No effort is made to confirm any of the statements such as that in the foregoing example.

"We have not attempted," said Mr. Cooksey recently, "to verify the statement of the writer as to the $50,000 he says he has returned to the treasury in the past. His money and his word have been accepted and, so far as we are concerned, the transaction is closed.

"Large contributors—as we call them—and small ones are treated alike. The dollar man and the $30,000 man need never fear that efforts will be made to find out their names. Their money goes into the general fund of the treasury and their letters into an office file upstairs. As the letters, in almost every instance, are without signatures and have been probably mailed at strange postoffices, the authors are safe from detection, even if the Government should engage in the mean business of locating them and checking them up.

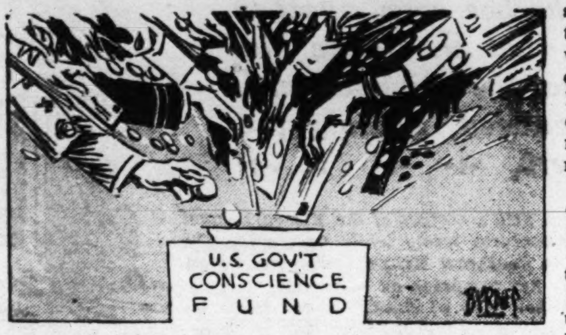
"I found $2000 in an envelope the other day. It came from Jersey City. The sender, probably, lives somewhere else. Last summer, $10,000 in currency was mailed in New York. 'The writer,' we were informed, in penmanship that was clearly disguised, 'has paid double to the United States the amount he stole, yet his conscience is not satisfied and here is another payment.'

"Still another letter, containing $5000, has recently come from New York, though the person who wrote it may be a resident of Buffalo or Boston. A man tormented in his mind for 45 years, so he told us, sent $2000 from Chicago, whereas he is living, possibly, in Cincinnati or Indianapolis. An old person, with a trembling hand—a man, no doubt—placed $3700 in a long white envelope and mailed it at Racine, Wis. Please credit,' he wrote on a small slip of paper, 'to the conscience fund.' His home, likely as not, is in Milwaukee or Minneapolis.



Stole underwear A the Civil War.

"Usually, there is unbounded faith in the honesty of the postal service, although letters from the largest 'contributors' are sometimes registered, under false names, of course, or sent by special delivery. One person, however, lacking somewhat in confidence, cut eight $1000 bills in two. He sent the half of each bill to the treasury, with the statement that the other halves would follow when he read in the newspapers an acknowledgment from Washington. The acknowledgment was printed and he promptly made his word good."



The second largest sum ever received, $18,699.60, was sent to the Collector of Customs in New York. In this case, it was plain, someone had brought goods into the country and had swindled the Government out of the tariff. A British clergyman, several years ago, gave the United States Consul-General in London $14,225.15, saying that a member of his church had cheated the Government of this country out of that amount. This, too, undoubtedly was a customs case.

A woman of education in Boston, who spent last summer at York Harbor, mailed $300 to Secretary McAdoo, in payment of the duty on goods she brought over from Europe 20 years ago. The tariff, she said, would have amounted to $67. The $233 extra, she thought, would be a fair payment for the interest lost meanwhile by the Government. She closed her letter with congratulations to "you and President Wilson on the averted war."

"I saw a letter not long ago, written on the stationery of an exclusive club in Chicago," said Mr. Cooksey, "in which the writer, a rich man, no doubt, confessed that he had smuggled a watch that he had purchased abroad, the duty on which, he thought, would be about $100. He sent the money with the observation that he would never be satisfied until the debt was paid."

Seventeen years ago, a woman traveling from Ireland to California hid a tablecloth and a dozen napkins among her clothing in a trunk. A few months ago she sent $15 to the conscience fund, with the statement that she wanted to escape further self-reproach. Another woman, only the other day, paid $5 as "duty on lace received from Europe by mail."

An amateur smuggler mailed a $20 gold piece in Boston, between two squares of cardboard. This money, too, was contributed by a woman. Indeed, more women than men admit their smuggling practices. The sums received from men, however, are larger. Early last spring a lawyer in New York paid $4876 "in behalf of a client," the client being, it is fair to suppose, an importer.

When men, it sometimes happens, bring small articles into the country, like embroidery, gloves and so on, and get past the customs officers, their wives or sisters, brooding over the matter, become conscience-stricken and send money to the treasury in Washington. They never, of course, tell their names, or point out their offending relatives.

COPYRIGHT BY CLINEDINST

GEORGE R. COOKSEY.

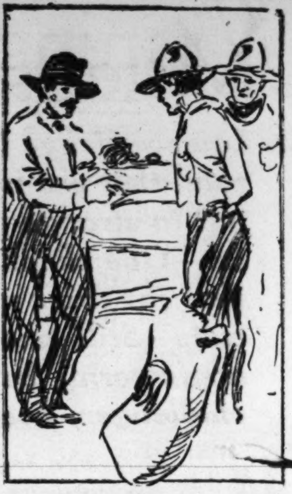
"Honesty is not a matter of sex; nor is dishonesty," Mr. Cooksey declared. "A man in South Dakota bought some oats from United States soldiers stationed in that part of the country. He knew that the oats belonged to the National Government. The matter troubled him greatly and he spoke to his wife about it. 'I mean,' he told her, 'to repay the Government.' But he died suddenly of pneumonia. The wife, however, sent Secretary McAdoo an unsigned letter of explanation and $12.

"It was a woman, too, an officeholder in Washington, who returned $2.50 to the treasury as 'restitution for a day's sick leave to which I was not entitled.' Another woman, once in office, sent Secretary McAdoo three $1 bills which, she wrote, 'is payment for such stationery as I may have put to personal use.'

"Forty years ago, a workman at a navy yard took some nails home from time to time. The nails caused trouble with his conscience—40 years of trouble, perhaps. 'I have always been poor,' he wrote, 'but I now inclose $25 that my mind may be at peace.'"

A man in Kansas bought a Government horse for $40 from three deserters, who had been locked up at Fort Leavenworth. He sold the horse for the same amount, but the money tormented him day and night. In January, this year, he paid it into the treasury. The adventure cost him $40 and no end of mental agony. Even the theft of a small apple tree from the grounds at Fort Sheridan, near Chicago, so bothered the conscience of another man that he sent a dollar bill.

"Cheating the postoffice," Mr. Cooksey went on to say, "has brought sorrow to hundreds of men and women living in all parts of the United States. The letters received from some of them tell of minds racked with pain and remorse.

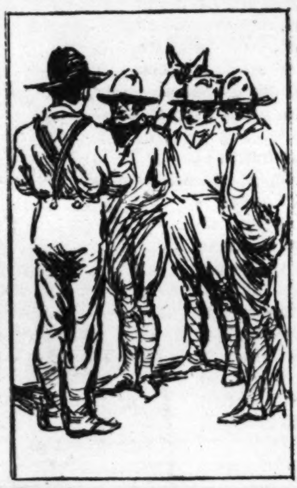


Bought stolen oats from soldiers.

"Writers of such letters often say that they 'wish to be right with God.' From a town in Michigan, this year, came two 10-cent pieces in payment for the use of canceled stamps. The coins were inclosed in a little church envelope on which were printed the words, 'Weekly offering for the support of the pastor.'

"A young woman was the writer of a letter received by President Wilson not long ago. 'Inclosed,' she wrote, 'find 50 cents for postage stamps I reused when a little girl. I didn't know any better at the time, but nevertheless it is a crime committed against the United States Government. I was convicted of it this summer at a camp meeting in California and promised God I would make it right. It is not very much, but in God's sight a sin is a sin, no matter how small.'

"An Oregon minister sent 25 cents at the request of a 'lady of excellent Christian life and beloved by all who knew her.' Forty years ago, this poor woman used a 3-cent stamp a second time. 'It had not been canceled,' the minister wrote, 'hence it was clean and she put it on a letter of her own.'



Bought army property from deserters.

"I can see that old woman," Mr. Cooksey said, "confessing to her pastor and giving him the money from a little purse that is almost empty. A religious revival in a community causes those who are converted to settle debts long past due. The conscience fund of the Government gets its share of the money so distributed. A private in the Spanish War remitted $10 for 'the grub I stole' while he was in camp. 'The Lord,' he said, 'saved my soul about 14 months ago and He is making me straighten up my back life.'

"'The inclosed,' wrote a man in New York, when he mailed us $3000 in currency, 'belongs to the United States Treasury. Conscience demands its return. God knows my name and my sin.' An aged man in North Dakota repaid $10. 'All of us,' he put down with an unsteady hand, 'become honest as we near the great hereafter.'

"From Atlanta, Ga., came, in August, 1915, the sum of $112. 'This,' so ran the confession, 'represents some money, with interest, which I took from the Government several years ago. God has forgiven my sin and I now make restitution to you.' A convert at a revival in Illinois gave the evangelist $38.58, in settlement of a debt he owed the Government. 'By the advice of a priest in confession,' wrote another delinquent, an employe of Uncle Sam, 'I return $40. I took sick leave some years back and I was not sick. I hope I am forgiven by Him.'

"'A Citizen,' as he called himself, in a typewritten letter, sent $1.12 from a town in Missouri, in payment for using 'some canceled stamps 23 years ago. I do not wish to die,' he said, 'without making the same right beforehand.' Still another sinner, brought before the bar of his own soul and duly convicted, said that he had once used three old postage stamps. 'It might have been four,' he confessed. 'I send 10 cents,' he added, 'in case the number was five.'

"Old soldiers, too, are found at the national mourners' bench," Mr. Cooksey continued. "An Idaho veteran, bravely signing his name, asked what drawers and undershirts cost the Government during the time of the Civil War. He was told and sent $3.77, to pay, he explained, for certain garments that had come into his possession by methods which he did not mention.

"An extra loaf of bread, back in 1863, was eaten by a volunteer from Ohio. 'To satisfy a reproving conscience,' he wrote ,'I remit $1, which please drop into the treasury and which, I suppose, will cover the [illegible] of the bread, along with compound interest.'

"During the rebellion,' ran a letter from a Michigan man, 'a soldier was paid two months' extra pay by mistake, and he now wishes to return the same with interest.' The amount of the inclosure was $75.. An Indiana veteran, having 'stolen a Government mule,' as he stated the case, sent $200 in large bills, and the theft of a saddle blanket by a soldier from Illinois caused him to add $5 to the cash on hand in the vaults of the Government.

"Two unusual letters were received from a minister in North Carolina. The first one, written a year ago last April, said: 'Inclosed is $40. I am refunding, as I am able to do so, an original pension. I became able to do good work. I am old, but quite well for my age.'

"Then, last January, the

To my great astonishment, my Uncle Henry's eyes grew bright, and two tears rolled down from them. He caught at my hands and gripped them hard in his. He would have spoken, but what I do not know, for he couldn't command his voice just then.

So we stood looking into each other's faces, gripping each other's hands. And about our feet lay the slashed and desecrated banner of our house.

We set out that night toward 9 o'clock—on horseback, for the roads and lanes between Gaunt House and Eagle's Nest, as Cousin Matthew inanely termed his pseudo-Gothic stronghold, were none of them of the best, and had been made worse by recent storms. It was a dark night, and a damp and dreary wind drove clouds across the sky and boded rain. I remember that my mood of high confidence—of something like gayety—still possessed me. I felt a fine exhilaration, new to my experience. I remember that I whistled a tune and made little jokes of my Uncle Henry, and laughed at them. I suppose it must have been in some such mood as this that those older Gaunts rode out to do battle; but the survival of the spirit in myself makes me wonder a little, for I had been a very modern young man, with a quiet laugh in my sleeve at the medievalism of my father and my Uncle Henry.

Well, blood tells in queer ways now and again.

So we rode through the night across that rough country, cantering along a good stretch of road, splashing through puddles, guarding our faces with an upheld arm in narrow wood lanes. And I whistled my little tune and grinned in the dark, and patted the thing that lay snug in my coat pocket. We saw the lights of Matthew's absurd house in something short of an hour, and began to mount the hillside toward them.

We brought our horses well up near the house and tethered them just outside a high encircling wall, pierced here and there by shabby iron gates, one of which hung open. There were a few lighted windows, both below and above, but most of the house lay dark. We mounted the paved terrace and rang at the big front door.

It was opened after a rather long delay by a little, bent, white-haired man in a dress coat too big for him, who looked up at us sidewise, like an elderly bird. My Uncle Henry said: "Inform your master that Mr. Gaunt and Mr. Henry Gaunt have called to pay their respects."

The little servant heard this in silence, stood a moment with bowed head, as if reflecting upon it, and then, quite suddenly and before I could check him, shut the door in our faces. I said to my uncle:

"Quick! Give me a leg up! There's a fanlight." He held out his clasped hands, I stepped in them, found a projection in the stone of the door casing, and so, clinging to the ivy that was thick upon the wall there, stood looking into Cousin Matthew's house.

I saw the little bent serving man run, scuttling like a crab down the hall toward a door at the left, near where the stairs mounted, and, as he reached it, I saw Matthew Gaunt's great gray head and shaggy beard thrust out to meet him. I thought I saw another head also, but I was not sure. They conferred there an instant, and I saw, rather than heard, one of them call out toward an opposite door. A loutish country boy with a shock of yellow hair and a footman's coat came from this door, took an order and sped clumsily up the stairs.

Then the little bent man, who I took to be Cousin Matthew's butler, turned and came back toward the front of the house. My Uncle Henry guided my foot down to earth, and we waited.

"The master," said the little bent serving man, "regrets that 'e is not at 'ome."

"It is out of the question," said my Uncle Henry, politely, "that your master should be permitted to torture himself with regrets." He pushed the little man aside and entered. He would have run ahead of us, but we checked him and made our way to the door where I had seen Matthew Gaunt standing.

He was sitting now behind a table laden with coffee things and with liquor bottles, in a large, square room whose walls were lined with books. Sitting there he gave the effect of a very big man, for his shoulders were so heavy and his neck so thick that his head, with its rough mat of gray hair and its great spreading beard, looked tiny upon them; but I knew that his legs were short and puny. He bore a far-away resemblance, the faintest in the world, to my father, but my father had been tall and had looked like a king in a picture book. Cousin Matthew looked, sitting, like a king's bully.

He scowled at us, without rising, and asked: "What the devil are you doing here?"

"Paying our respects, Matthew," said my Uncle Henry; "returning your call. Do you think we have no manners at Gaunt House?"

He said neither yes nor no to that, only his little dark eyes glittered at us and moved from one to the other, and glanced from us to the door of the room. He seemed uneasy, and I was a little surprised. He must, I thought have expected some riposte to his attack upon Gaunt House. Had our visit been quite unlooked for?

There came a stir of feet at the door, and our host sat up and gave a little exclamation. The shock-headed young footman came in. He was breathing hard, as if he had gone and come with great haste, and in one hand he held gingerly, a little away from him, a revolver—one of the big, old-fashioned kind, with a nickeled chamber and barrel.

So we had, after all, surprised Cousin Matthew. Incredible as it sounds, he had not been ready for us. My Uncle Henry laughed:

"Matthew! Matthew! This looks like carelessness. Did you think so poorly of us then?" He said to the dolt of a boy:

"I'll take the pistol. Thank you!"

Matthew Gaunt cried out sharply, springing to his feet behind the table, and the servant, aware at last of something wrong, turned and caught at the weapon he had relinquished, but my uncle slipped it into his pocket, still laughing gently, and with one hand he pushed the footman out of the room and turned the key in the door.

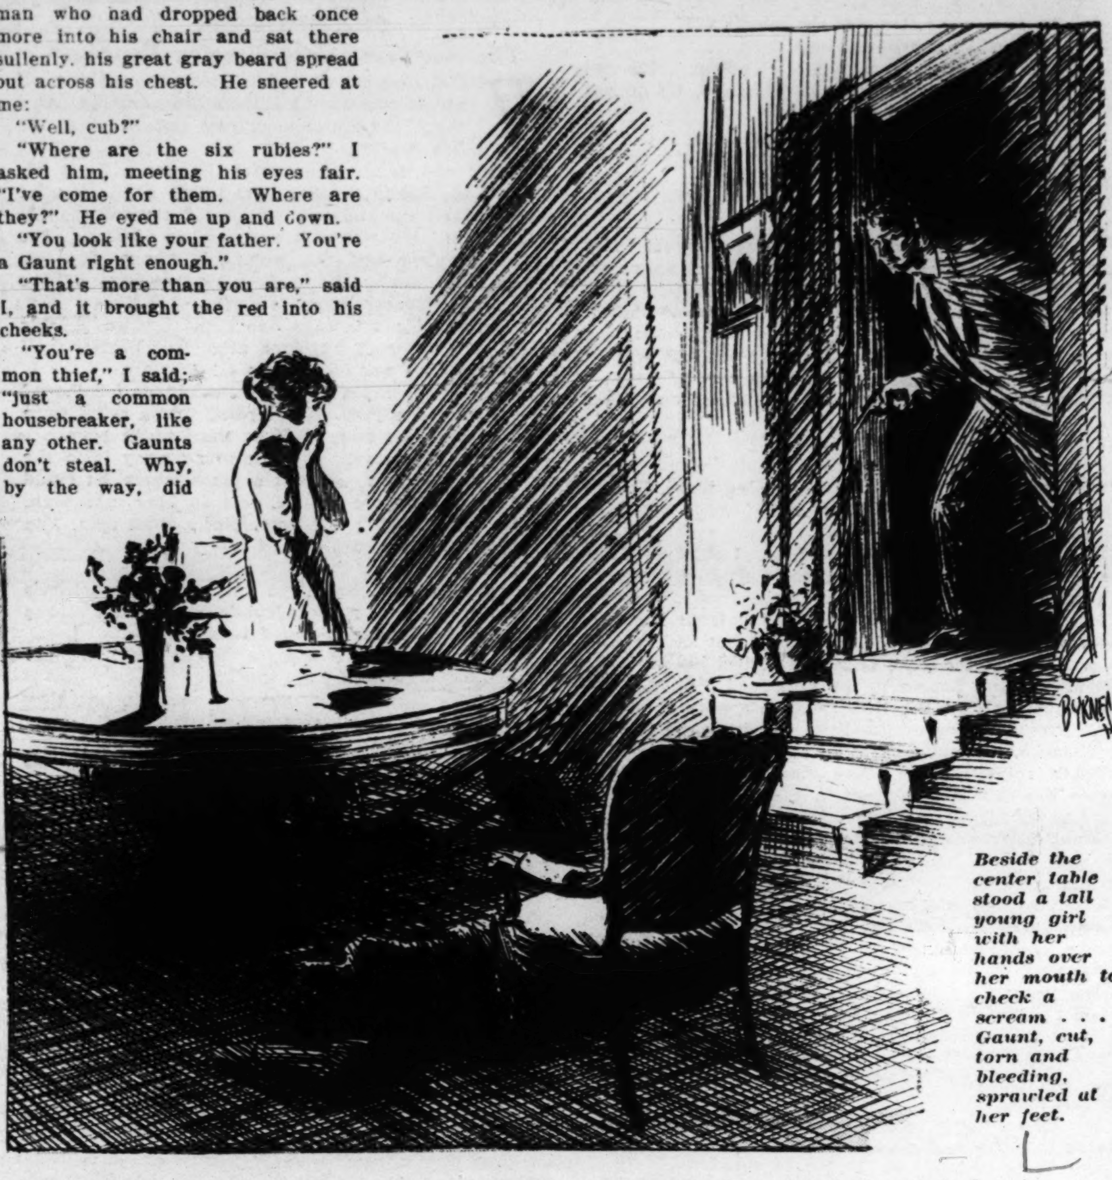
I went a few steps across the floor and faced the man who had dropped back once more into his chair and sat there sullenly, his great gray beard spread out across his chest. He sneered at me:

"Well, cub?"

"Where are the six rubies?" I asked him, meeting his eyes fair. "I've come for them. Where are they?" He eyed me up and down.

"You look like your father. You're a Gaunt right enough."

"That's more than you are," said I, and it brought the red into his cheeks.



Beside the center table stood a tall young girl with her hands over her mouth to check a scream . . . Gaunt, cut, torn and bleeding, sprawled at her feet.

"You're a common thief," I said; "just a common housebreaker, like any other. Gaunts don't steal. Why, by the way, did you? You're partly Gaunt, even if it is unofficial."

My cousin glowered at me for a moment in silence, and I expected an outburst of rage, but at the end he laughed instead.

"Why? Well, I was dull. I was infernally dull. I was bored with everything. And then, too, the rubies belonged here in the elder branch of the house. And then, too, I'd had my appetite whetted by a small success. You see, I encountered your father the other day and gave him a fright. He went home and died of it."

"That is a lie!" cried my Uncle Henry furiously, and caught my arm as I was leaping forward. His face was quite white with anger. "That is a paltry, cowardly lie. A little farmer's boy by the roadside saw and heard all that passed between you and my brother. I talked with him yesterday. You insulted my brother as you passed him and he struck you across the face with his crop. Then you turned your horse and rode away. I do not know whether there is anyone or anything else in this world that you are afraid of, Matthew, but I know that you were always afraid of Cecil Gaunt, and he knew it, too."

My uncle looked at the man behind the table, folding his arms. "A coward, a liar and a common thief! The Gaunt blood has run thin in you. Bah! You poison air. Get on with it, Peter, lad! Let's be out of this hole!"

Once more I asked him: "Where are the rubies?" And he answered, scowling across at me under his shaggy brows: "Where you'll never find them, cub."

I drew the little black Colt automatic from my pocket and pulled free the safety catch, but my Uncle Henry touched me on the arm.

"Wait a moment!"

He went near the edge of the table, behind which our cousin sat, and took his own pistol into his hands. His face was pale. He said:

"My nephew is a young man, and he is the head of the house. I, Matthew, am old; my good years are behind me (an absurdity: he was at this time 53, and could outwalk, outride and outplay me at tennis). I should be very content to die, having rid the earth of a mean and poisonous thing such as you. You will tell us where are the rubies that you stole from Gaunt House, or I will call in your servants, here and now, and shoot you before their faces."

I cried out:

"This is my job, Henry!" But he said, without turning:

"Be still! I am older than you."

Matthew Gaunt stirred restlessly in his chair, and scowled and muttered.

"You make a great fuss over a bit of looting," he said crossly. "You spread hard names about as if you'd a lot of 'em to spare. God save us! Well, you were always a pair of dancing masters, you and Cecil—finicking over manners and the like. As for your rubies—mine by rights—you've come too late. I have six sons, you're aware? Well, I've given 'em each one. I've divided the Gaunt treasure among the Gaunts. Did you pass the postman in his little cart as you rode here? You might have. Yes? Well, you should have stopped him. You should have smelt the rubies out like a hound. You'll have the devil of a time collecting them now. My sons are good fighters." He shook all over with laughter.

"Is that quite true?" demanded my Uncle Henry. "It will go hard with you, Matthew, if I find you've been lying again. Is it true that you've sent the six rubies to your six sons?"

"Quite true!" said Cousin Matthew, shaking still with glee. "Each son a ruby, and each will fight for it to his last drop of blood. Where's your pride and your luck and your glory now, eh? Shattered to the four winds." He rocked back and forth.

My uncle looked at me, but I said: "Wait a bit!" and turned to Matthew Gaunt.

"Did you send all six of the rubies away by post today? Answer me that!" He stopped laughing.

"I tell you once more," said he, scowling, "they've been distributed among my six sons. How many times must I say it? If you'd stopped that postman on your way here"——

"That's enough," said I. "That's what I wanted to know." And to my Uncle Henry I said: "One of them is here in the house now." I pointed to the table. "See! Two coffee cups, two half-empty glasses!"

My Uncle Henry gave a little exultant shout, and Matthew Gaunt got to his feet behind the table, bristling like a dog.

"We must search the place!" cried my Uncle Henry. But I shook my head.

"I must. It's my job. Do you stay here and keep guard!"

My uncle's face showed for a moment the swift anxiety, the vicarious fear of a woman's. He might have been my long-dead mother.

"Let me go, Peter, lad! I'm an old man. It doesn't matter about me." I touched his arm and laughed.

"D'you think I'm not a match for one of Matthew's sons and a decrepit servant or two? Shame on you!"

Old Matthew shook his fist in the air. There were beads of moisture on his square brow, come there quite suddenly, for he had been as cool as a man at a play until that discovery of mine.

"If you try to search this house," said he harshly, "you'll never leave it alive. You fool, they're six to one! They'll shoot you down like a rat."

I caught my uncle's eye and laughed once more.

"Six? Oh, they're all here, then, and the postman story was a lie? So much the better. We shall have all the rubies in one haul, only I'm afraid it's not true. Is only one of your sons allowed to drink coffee with you, Cousin Matthew?"

He cursed me furiously, and I laughed in his face.

"Don't let him shout or give any signals!" said I to my uncle, "and if I'm gone more than half an hour, kill him and come look for me!" That was in jest, for I hadn't the least idea of causing the death of even so unworthy a being as my Cousin Matthew.

I let myself out of the room and closed the door behind me. The shock-headed servant boy was there and may have been listening at the keyhole, for he made a clumsy, desperate attempt to throw himself upon me. I flung him aside and pressed on. The stairs led upward from the back of the hall, and I mounted them quickly, pistol in hand. There was a landing halfway, with a row of stained glass windows—five of them. No light came through the glass, but the dim glow of an overhead lamp shown down and showed that the middle panel had a coat of arms painted upon it. I looked closer and saw six gauttes gules upon a sable field. The insolence of it! Not even a "difference," to say nothing of the traditional bend sinister! I drove the butt of my pistol through the glass and heard the bits crash and tinkle down upon some flagging beneath. Then I went on into the upper hall, which was a mere corridor, long and straight and rather narrow, running from front to back of the house, with four doors in recesses at each side. It was lighted very dimly by two hanging lamps.

I tried the first door at the left. It opened upon a small room, lighted and empty. I closed it again with a bang and stood in the dark recess, waiting.

I may have waited a minute, perhaps less, but it seemed a very long time, when one of the doors far up the corridor—the door of the front room at the right—opened silently; a man's head peered out and was

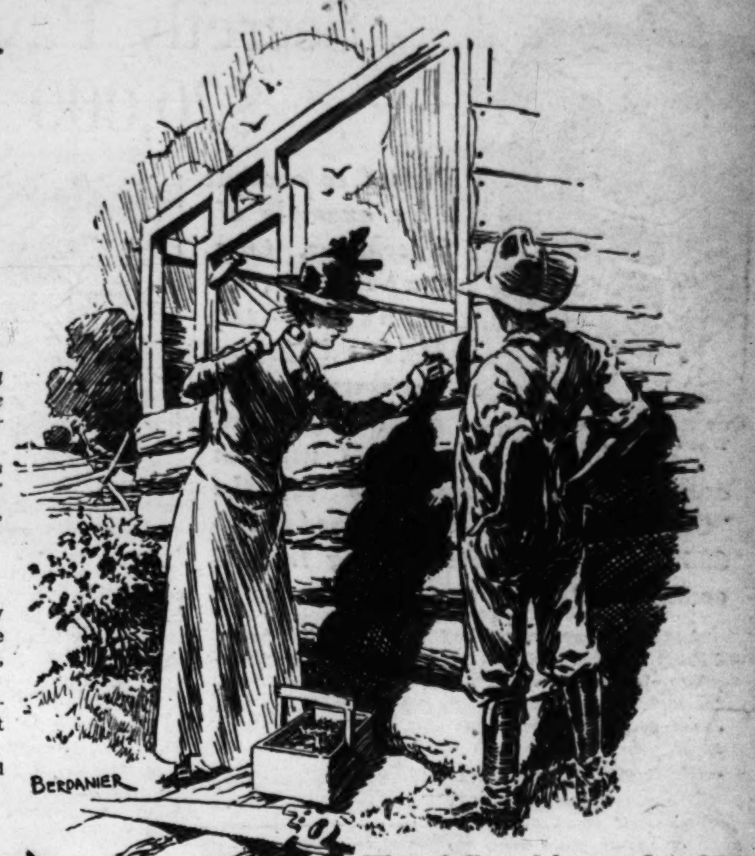
Winning Votes for Women in the Ozarks

St. Louis suffrage leader invades country so far from railroad that she makes campaign on horseback, and is put to strange tests to "prove" sex's fitness for ballot—One skeptic requires that she hoe corn, another that she drive a nail and a third that she make biscuits—Still another demands that she bait hook with angleworm, but on this she reneged, gaining the challenger, however, as a convert. -:- -:- -:- -:-



When challenged by a scoffer, she drove a nail straight and true through a slab.

MRS. ALICE CURTICE MOYER-WING of St. Louis, field secretary of the Missouri Equal Suffrage Association, has had many diverting adventures lately while "spreading the light" among the natives of the Ozark country, in Southeast Missouri, who live so far from a railroad that she was compelled to make her campaign on horseback.

In the following article she tells with zestful humor of her "day of stunts"—when the news of her coming was heralded over the countryside by telephone, and every man had a "dare" ready for her to undertake so as to "prove" woman's fitness to vote. She accepted them all, save one, and even this challenger was converted to the cause.

By ALICE CURTICE MOYER-WING.

"HORSEBACK for suffrage?"

"Yes."

"Campaign alone?"

"Why not?"

"You'll be afraid—or lonesome. Bet you don't do it."

"I was reared on an Ozark homestead. What will you bet?"

"You'll have to show us."

The questions are like those asked by doubting friends since it was announced several months ago that I should tour the Ozarks on horseback and talk woman suffrage to individual farmers and settlers. The answers are something like those I used in reply, and this is the first story in proof that I am "showing them."

I'm going to tell about the first day. A complete history of its experiences would make a good-sized volume, hence I shall touch only the high places. It is distinguished from all subsequent days as my "stunt day." It began early. I know the farmer's habits. He is the early bird and the worm that doesn't get caught has to hustle. (This parenthetical remark doesn't touch upon the story, but I am in sympathy with the wit who called attention to what happened to the fool worm for being out early.)

As already intimated, this was a day of stunts. My first prospect was a young farmer and his wife in his cornfield. The cornfield is always "his" and she is always "his wife." They are "one." I have heard women of her type talk over the telephone. "Who is this?" will come the query, and she inevitably replies: "This is Jim Smith's wife." So I speak advisedly. Her individuality is gone.

The young farmer leaned on his hoe and listened. He accepted the printed sheet of paper I handed him, giving reasons why women should vote. His wife went on with her hoeing.

"That's all bunk about you city women comin' down here to talk to us," he said. "Now if it was a country woman comin' round I might listen a spell. But they're too busy; they ain't got no time to fool; they know their place is in the house and they stay there. They air willin' to let the men do their votin'. The Good Book says that the man and his wife is one. It's the women that knows how to work that ought to have the vote if any of 'em ought, which I don't believe. Bet you never had hold of a hoe handle in all your life. I reckon your hands is plumb soft. You're a city woman, that's what you air. Why, like as not this is the first cornfield you ever seen 'ceptin' from a car winder. You couldn't hoe a hill of corn to save your life."

"Will you promise to think seriously about the suffrage question if I prove to you that I have seen corn before, and even a hoe, at close range?"

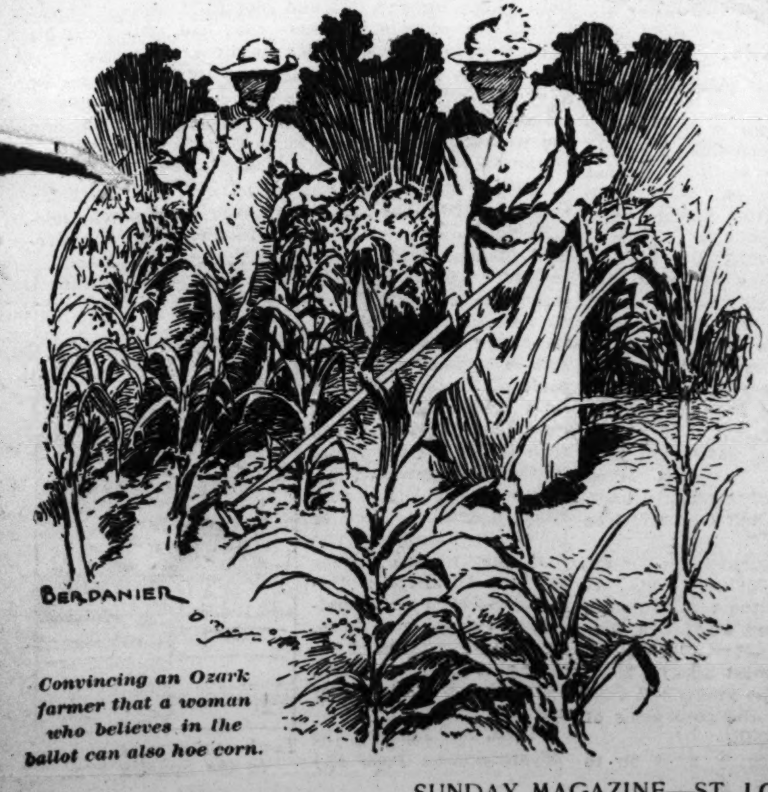
"I'd like to see you handle a hoe before I promise, and even then I don't promise nothin'."

I had seen his kind before, the kind that demands absurd "proofs" of a woman's fitness to vote, and the moment she yields to his clamoring and humors him by making good, he demands something else—and always it is something just about as pertinent to the question as hoeing corn.

But a spirit of dare inclined me to "show" this smart young Southeast Missourian. By the time I had hoed a half-dozen hills of his corn he said: "Well, you're a city woman jist the same. You can't git around that."

As I was remounting I asked him, since he believed that woman's place was "in the house," why did he compel his wife to stay in the cornfield, and left him sputtering something about the "Good Book sayin' that a man and his wife is one," something he believes with all his heart; but he also believes that the man is the "one."

Is there any hope for his conversion? you ask. Well, that is just what I asked one of his neighbors that same day and the neighbor said likely not; that he was always "agin" everything that anybody else was for, but that nobody "set any store" by what he said and that the more he talked against the cause the better it would be for it. And so I left this anti-suffragist making converts to suffrage.



Convincing an Ozark farmer that a woman who believes in the ballot can also hoe corn.

A half-hour's ride brought me to a clearing where a slab house was under construction. Do you know what a slab is? A slab is a mongrel—half log and half plank. One side is a smooth, sawed surface and the other is rough log bark.

"You women do hit the nail on the head once in a while, I'll own," said the settler as he hammered away after listening a moment. "But you can't drive a nail into a slab. Try it," handing me the hammer.

The queer challenges of my "stunt day" were truly unique, but they awoke within me the same spirit of combat I always feel when plied with anti-suffrage objections. Before I realized it, I had again dismounted.

Good fortune was with me and the nail was skillfully driven home. The settler handed me another, which I declined, thinking I'd better quit while quitting was good.

"Well," he said, "I ain't no special objection to women votin', and I reckon all I need is to know about it. When the question was up in 1914, I throwed away all the amendments, but I've been thinkin' that a feller is insultin' his intelligence when he does that, and no matter how many there may be hereafter, I 'low to study 'em out and vote on every darned one of 'em."

It was nearing noon when I came to a house close to the road, with shade trees in the front yard. A table stood under one of them.

"Light and look at your saddle," called the pleasant voice of a woman who was coming round the corner of the house carrying a pan of flour.

Proving that a woman who believes in universal suffrage can also make biscuits.

"Light and look at your saddle" is an invitation to dismount, and I "lighted."

"On nice, still days like this," continued the pleasing voice, "I do a lot of my work out of doors. It sort of takes away the kitchen feelin'. I heered over the phone that you was headin' this way and just 'lowed that maybe you would about git here for dinner. Do you like biscuit bread?"

I said I did.

"But I don't reckon you ever made a batch of 'em. They say that women suffragettes cain't cook."

I assured her that a great many things were said about suffragists that were misleading, to say the least.

"Well, you can try your hand at this pan of flour, if you don't care, while I pull a few more onions fer dinner."

It had been ages since I made biscuits with soda and buttermilk, but I was on trial again. I told her I should be glad to help, took off my gloves and waded in.

She didn't hurry away for more onions, but stood by and watched me. By the time I had the dough ready to roll, she had confided that she believed in votes for women, but that her husband was an anti, and that this biscuit-making stunt was "fer Jackson's benefit."

"He's been watchin' you from the winder all the time," she said. "He don't believe that women suffragettes know how to do anything that women ought to know how to do. But I jist reckoned that you could make biscuit bread and that I would teach Jackson a lesson right now. But say! If you had failed!"

"I'll put 'em in the oven," she continued presently, "and we will have dinner right away. You look plumb starved."

"But jist look at her saddle, Maudie," protested a man's voice from the window. "She's rid a-straddle. I knowed she'd be ridin' a-straddle."

"Jackson," and the pleasant voice became firm. "I'm plumb glad that my old sidesaddle is wore out, and I'll never have another."

"A wife of mine shain't ride a-straddle," persisted Jackson.

"So far as I know, you ain't got but one wife. She's a-goin' to keep on ridin', I reckon, and she ain't goin'
